AND SAVE BANGOR FROM FOE

PICK UP SCOUT PLANES HERE

Special to The New York Times.

BANGOR, Me., Aug. 20.—In the greatest demonstration of air power in this country since the World War the United States Air Service today carried out a series of manoeuvres under simulated war conditions in a flight along the Eastern seaboard from Langley Field, Hampton, Va., to Bangor.

In eight and a half actual flying hours a flying armada of sixteen huge Martin bombers negotiated the approximately 800-mile airway distance from the home airdrome at Langley Field to Bangor, a city "in danger," showing the feasibility of operating planes a long distance from their base. Augmented at Mitchel Field, near Garden City, L. I., by seven De Havilland swift pursuit planes, the air armada presented an imposing sight from the ground as well as in the air.

Flying in various aerial formations, the armada gave the populations along the coast a vivid idea of some of the experience European countries underwent during the war. Railheads and cities, factories and homes were thoroughly "bombed" by Uncle Sam's aviators in their practice for a real emergency. Veterans of the war at Mitchel Field and at Bangor said the sight of the Armada hovering overhead turned their memories back five years when bombers were "out for no good."

The manoeuvres were replete with thrills from the start from the point of view of a newspaper man who went on the trip as well as those who watched the forms of the flying fortresses silhouetted in the sky.

At 4 o'clock this morning the eighty or more pilots, observers, radio officers and enlisted mechanicians were on the line making last-minute tests in order that nothing might go wrong. Men in the air service have been anxious to demonstrate the essentiality of maintaining an air force adequate enough to protect the extensive coast lines of the country as well as the interior. Privately they have said they wanted to demonstrate in a forceful way the vulnerability of the coast, especially the Eastern coast, where the life of the nation is centred, to aircraft attack.

Impressive Start of Giant Planes.

Most of the people of Hampton, Va., were at Langley Field to see the start and their efforts for getting up so early were well repaid. The sight of seventeen super-planes with wing spreads of seventy-five feet and twin motors lined upon the starting line, their motors spouting blue flame in the early dawn, was one to be remembered. Youthful looking pilots, who seemed too puny to operate machines of such great size, gathered around Major John N. Reynolds for final instructions and then climbed into their planes. Manoeuvring the bombers into one long line, they followed the lead of Major Reynolds, the group commander, into the air, finding their way into a V-shaped formation in rapid fashion.

By the time the armada was ten minutes away from Langley Field the planes had assembled into three groups, flying to the right and left and a little to the rear of Major Reynolds. Half way across the bay one bomber had to drop out for a reason supposed to be engine trouble. The other planes continued to their objective.

En route to Mitchel Field the planes went through offensive manoeuvres such as bombing planes would be called upon to do in case of war. Sometimes the armada would proceed in extended formation, extending over an area of many miles. Other times Major Reynolds would bring his bombing forces so close together that it seemed as if one might bridge the space between wing-tips by a half-hearted leap.

Adopting offensive tactics, the bombers would swoop down on some objective like a railhead or a bridge and simulate the destruction of these aids to the "enemy." Especially over New Jersey were these offensive manoeuvres undertaken, and had real bombs of 2,000, 1,100 and 600 pounds been used the State would have presented a scene of destruction. There was straightaway flying when Atlantic City was passed over at 9:30.

One was impressed with the methods of communication adopted in directing the manoeuvres. Frequently Major Reynolds would use a hand signal, which was relayed from bomber to bomber with amazing rapidity. Seemingly simple signals often resulted in intricate and long-drawn-out movements. Another form of signal was a manipulating of the plane, usually a short, quick motion which attracted the attention of the ever-alert observers. In instances where the commander desired to issue explicit directions he would use the radio, with which every ship was equipped. Thus with these three means of communication, any one of which could be used for the same end, the military regulations of a regiment of planes could be carried out.

Gov. Bryan to Supply Coal To Nebraskans at Lower Prices

LINCOLN, Neb., Aug. 20.—State competition for the municipal coal yard in Lincoln and for private coal dealers throughout Nebraska is threatened by Governor Bryan, who announced today that he had almost completed arrangements for supplying coal to cities, villages and local committees to be sold below the prevailing prices.

Mr. Bryan said that the same fuel which was sold by the municipal yard here last Winter and Spring for $9.50 a ton, delivered in the consumer's bin, is now $1.25 a ton cheaper at the mine than it was then. The retail price, he declared, should be reduced correspondingly.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 20.—On Saturday, Oct. 20, American turf followers will witness one of the greatest match races in the recent history of the turf on this side of the water, when the English Derby winner, Papyrus, owned by Benjamin Irish, will meet the best American three-year-old at Belmont Park.

The race will be for a purse of $100,000, of which $20,000 will go to the loser, and the distance will be over the English Derby route of a mile and a half. For the big race arrangements have been made with James Butler, President of the Empire City Racing Association, to transfer the program scheduled for the Empire City Track on that day to Belmont Park, with the match race as the star event of the afternoon.

Final arrangements for the international event were completed this afternoon on receipt of a cable by Major August Belmont, Chairman of the Jockey Club.

Trial Race at Belmont.

America's representative against the best three-year-olds in England at the present time will be selected at a preliminary test to be held at Belmont Park as a part of the program for Sept. 15, on which the Futurity and the Jockey Club gold cup are already scheduled.

The preliminary test will be known as the National Trial Sweepstakes and will call for a subscription of $1,000 for each candidate, to which the Westchester Racing Association will add $2,500. The representative of America against the English star will be selected by the Jockey Club from among the three horses which place on this occasion.

It is stated that the owners of the leading three-year-olds of the American turf have agreed to have them participate in the National Trial. These include Zev of the Rancocas Stable, R. T. Wilson Jr.'s Wilderness, Harry Payne Whitney's Flagstaff, J. S. Coaden's Dunlin and Martingale, Montfort Jones's The Clown, the star of the Western three-year olds, and Admiral Cary T. Grayson's My Own.

Throughout the negotiations Mr. Irish has shown a splendid sporting spirit. It took courage to agree to ship his horse to the United States under the circumstances—a horse that won his Derby honors over grass and will meet the best of the American three-year-olds on a dirt course, the like of which he has never known in his racing career. He will have to take a chance on the hazards of shipment across the water and trust that his star will stand the voyage and be able to go to the post fit in a strange land under strange conditions. Questions of acclimation will have to be considered, and Papyrus will not have much time to become accustomed to the climate here, as he is engaged in the St. Leger Stakes on Sept. 12 at Doncaster and will probably fulfill his engagement in that event before coming to the United States.

Zev Stands Out.

At this distance it is too early to speculate on what American horse will be selected to meet the English Derby winner. Zev, the brown son of The Finn and Miss Kearney, of course, stands out as the greatest of the three-year-olds of the 1923 season. The star of the Rancocas Stable won the Kentucky Derby, the Withers, Pimmonok, the Belmont and the Rainbow and his

100 DETECTIVES FAIL TO DISCOVER TRACE OF STOLEN SICK BABY

DESCRIBES MEN TO POLICE

Mother, in Despair, Collapses After Two Days of Sleepless Anxiety.

FEARS CHILD MAY BE DEAD

Police Say Kidnapper May Be Unable to Read Published Diet for Child.

Eli Seidman, a clothing manufacturer, whose place of business is in West Twenty-first Street, telephoned information to the police last night which led them to believe that possibly a band of men of foreign birth were involved in the kidnapping last Saturday afternoon of three-month-old Lillian McKenzie from in front of a store in West Eighteenth Street, near Sixth Avenue.

Seidman, who lives at 706 East 176th Street, the Bronx, telephoned to Police Headquarters from his home that when he was passing McCrory's store in West Eighteenth Street, from in front of which the child was kidnapped as she lay in a baby carriage, he noticed four men, evidently foreigners, hanging about a baby carriage in which a child was sleeping.

Their actions were so peculiar that Seidman studied them as he approached them, but when he had passed them in the direction of Sixth Avenue the four men passed out of his mind. It was not until he had read about the kidnapping of the child last night that he recalled their presence in front of McCrory's store.

Describes Men to Police.

He said that he felt that while the information he could give might prove of little value in respect to establishing the identity of the four men he saw standing near the baby carriage, he thought that his information would aid the police to the extent that they would not confine their search to a woman kidnapper alone. Seidman was able to give to Captain William Funston, who is in charge of the detectives hunting the kidnapper, satisfactory descriptions of the four foreigners.

Soon after Seidman revealed this incident J. Arlington Montes of 70 West Eighty-second Street, a field engineer employed by Spencer, White & Prentis, contractors, at 100 West Forty-first Street, told Captain Funston of having seen a woman with a three-months-old infant in a northbound Columbus Avenue surface car between 5 and 6 o'clock Saturday evening.

He said that he and his wife noticed the woman because she appeared to be inexperienced in the handling of a child. He added that the woman got on the car somewhere below Twenty-third Street and got off at Columbus Avenue and Eighty-seventh Street.

"The woman was of medium height," he said, "about 35 years old, of Latin birth, perhaps a Spaniard, Cuban or Italian and poorly dressed. She wore no hat, had on a plain gingham dress and seemed unaware that persons around her were staring at her. She wore low brown shoes. I do not recall whether her dress was striped or checked. The baby had light blue eyes.

"It seemed four or possibly five months' old. It was dressed in a bonnet of white material, which was tied with pink bows of baby ribbon and a white dress, but neither Mrs. Montes nor myself recall whether it was long like an infant's dress. I think it was long, for neither of us remember seeing the child's feet. The baby had a small white bib with a fancy design worked on it. In response to the woman's lavish attentions, the baby laughed and smiled as if it were enjoying itself."

There are now more than one hundred detectives hunting for the child. It was understood that the searchers had been instructed to concentrate on an effort to obtain the return of the baby more than with the view of capturing the kidnapper.

The police felt that, although instructions how to feed the child her special diet had been published, the kidnapper, through ignorance of English, might not discover that Lillian required special feeding, and consequently might endanger the infant's life with raw milk.

As another means of inducing the kidnapper to return the little girl, Peter McKenzie, the father, stationed the baby carriage from which his daughter was taken in front of McCrory's store at 54 West Eighteenth Street yesterday

ZR-1, Largest Rigid Airship, Is Launched; Trial Flight Expected To Be Made Sept. 1.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Aug. 20.—The giant navy rigid dirigible, ZR-1, rose from its huge cradle in the hangar at the naval air station here today for the first time. Construction on the big airship started eighteen months ago, and now, practically completed, it is the largest airship of its type in the world. A flight may be made in the ZR-1 by navy pilots to the North Pole.

Commander R. O. Weybecker, who had charge of the assembling of the dirigible, supervised the launching. He was assisted by Station Commander R. F. McCreary and Captain Antone Heine, consulting engineer, from Friedrichshafen, Germany.

The launching was accomplished by gradually releasing from the ballast tanks thirty-two ordinary water ballast bags, which hold, all told, eight tons of water. The ship's entire water ballast is twenty tons.

As the ship rose, 300 marines and sailors, detailed here as the permanent ground crew for the ZR-1, guided the immense bag across the shed for a distance of 150 feet. There it was anchored and shed tests were begun.

When the launching was completed the first of the shed tests began. One of the 300-horsepower Packard motors on one of the six gondolas was tuned and found to be operating perfectly. Each of the other gondolas also carries a 300-horsepower motor. The tests will continue until the end of this month. The big dirigible probably will take the air on Sept. 1 for a test flight.

Only a few minor items are needed to make the big ship complete. These including propellers, several coats of shellac and paint, and lacing. The bag is now 85 per cent. inflated, holding 2,148,000 cubic feet of helium gas. It is 660 feet long and 78 feet through.

The ZR-4, a sister ship, is now under construction in Germany. It is of similar dimensions. A German and American crew will fly that airship across the Atlantic to this country in November, if present plans are carried out. The ZR-4 will take the place of the ZR-2, which exploded in the air over Hull, England, last year during a test flight in which many American naval officers lost their lives.

WARD RECORD SHOWS BODY WAS CARRIED

No Signs of Struggle, Three Witnesses Swear, Where Peters Was Found Dead.

CLOTHES LOOKED BRUSHED

Counsel for Walter S. Ward succeeded yesterday, after a fight dating back to his indictment on July 26, in obtaining a copy of the minutes of the Westchester County Extraordinary Grand Jury which indicted him for murder in the first degree for the shooting of Clarence M. Peters last year.

The minutes were delivered late in the afternoon to Attorneys Rabenold & Scribner of 61 Broadway by a messenger from Special Deputy Attorney General Thomas J. O'Neill. On the basis of an examination of these minutes the defense will appear before Supreme Court Justice George H. Taylor in White Plains Friday to move for reduction of the degree of homicide charged and for admittance of Ward to bail pending his trial on Sept. 4.

The record of the Grand Jury testimony showed that Troopers Ralph Collins and Harry Green, and Duncan Ross, a druggist of White Plains, all of whom saw the body between 7 and 9 o'clock on the morning of May 16, 1922, believed that Peters had been killed elsewhere and his body transported to the side of the State Road near Kensico Reservoir where it was found.

Body Apparently "Laid Out."

They emphasized that it appeared to have been "laid out," that the vest and coat showed no signs of being punctured by a bullet and that there were no signs of a struggle. Ward had said that he shot Peters during a terrific struggle for possession of Peters's revolver. Ward had told of the splintering of glass of his automobile by a shot. The witnesses said they found no fragments of glass. The powder marks on the shirt, they asserted, indicated Peters had been killed at a range of three or four feet at the farthest. They said they found only one automobile tire track. This disputed Ward's story that he drove to the place in his car, escorted by "Charley Ross" and "Jack Rogers," alleged blackmailers, in another machine.

Collins and Green testified the tire mark indicated Ward's car had been brought to a sudden stop. The body, they said, had been placed in front of the machine. The troopers said that a quarter of a mile back toward White Plains they came upon a motor truck, the driver of which said he had been stalled since 10 o'clock at night and had heard no shots and recalled no noise.

Rose testified that two miles further away from White Plains, toward Chappaqua, he came upon two motor trucks bearing several foreigners who seemed "scared to death."

"John Doe" Also Indicted.

"I could swear the vest was buttoned," he said of the clothing on Peters's body. "His clothes were not mussed up at all. They looked brushed, neat and tidy." Only one cartridge shell rewarded their examination of the ground, said Collins and Green. They said the ground showed no evidence of a struggle.

An unexplained fact of the proceedings was that the minutes were entitled, "The People of the State of New York against Walter S. Ward and John Doe." This is the first time it has become known that Ward has been suspected of having an accomplice. Nothing could be learned as to whether the State believes this person was an actual accomplice in commitment of the shooting or whether he was an accessory before or after the fact.

It was not until the State had spent its last effort in court proceedings that the minutes were yielded to the defense. Early in the day both sides had appeared in the chamber of Court of Appeals Judge Benjamin N. Cardozo in the Bar Building at 36 West Forty-fourth Street.

State Makes Final Appeal.

Mr. O'Neill applied for a temporary injunction restraining the defense from proceeding to enforce an order issued by Justice Albert H. F. Seeger in Newburgh granting the defense permission to inspect the minutes. Mr. O'Neill said he wanted the stay in view of his intention to file with the Court of Appeals an appeal from the recent decision of the Appellate Division of the Second Department, in Brooklyn, the members of which interrupted their vacations to hear Mr. O'Neill's application for an order prohibiting Justice Seeger from participating the case. The Appellate Division, by a vote of 3 to 2, decided Justice Seeger could proceed. The next

OPERATORS FIGHT HIGHER MINE WAGE

Say Increase Demanded Would Add $90,000,000 to Annual Payroll.

STRIKE NOT DISCUSSED

Anthracite Conference Is Resumed, but No Progress Made, Both Sides Assert.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 20.—A 20 per cent. wage increase for contract men and a $2 daily advance for day men was the sole topic under discussion today when representatives of the anthracite operators and the miners resumed their conference at the Hotel Ambassador.

Having promised the United States Coal Commission that they would try to reach an agreement to replace the present contract which expires Aug. 31, the miners and operators began consideration of the second of the proposals which were originally submitted to the operators on July 6. No reference was made today to the check-off which caused the last conference to suspend on July 27, nor was the question of a continuance of work after Sept. 1, if no agreement was reached by that time, brought into the discussion, which lasted four hours.

In support of their demand for a wage increase the miners said there had been an increase of 21 per cent. in the wages of steel workers since September, 1922, and that wages in other industries, including the railroads, textile and building trades, had also advanced considerably. They declared that anthracite miners were receiving lower wages than bituminous miners and asserted that the hard coal men had been "bilked" out of $30,000,000 since 1920, when their wage increase was 10 per cent. less than that of the bituminous workers.

No Agreement Reached.

"We insisted that some degree of consideration must be given the men's demands, but we received no encouragement from the operators," said J. L. Lewis, President of the United Mine Workers, after the conference.

"We got nowhere, so far as settling demand Number 2 was concerned," was the comment of Samuel D. Warriner, Chairman of the General Committee of the anthracite operators.

To grant the wage demands would mean between $85,000,000 and $90,000,000 added to the annual payroll, Mr. Warriner added. He denied the operators had "milked" the miners out of $30,000,000 and said that prices had only been advanced 15 per cent. when the miners received 17 per cent. increase. He admitted that steel workers were getting more money today, but declared that their present wages were lower than in 1920, but that the anthracite workers were as well off relatively as in 1920.

The meeting was called to order by Mr. Warriner. The miners' leaders, including C. J. Golden, Thomas Kennedy, Rinaldo Cappellini and Philip Murray, explained why the wage demand should be met.

"We pointed out that the minimum rate for day labor in the anthracite industry was $4.20 for outside men and $6.60 for the same work in the bituminous fields," Mr. Lewis informed reporters later. "The maximum for inside labor is $5.42 in the anthracite fields, with a few men receiving $6.60. The same work in the bituminous mines is paid for at a rate of $7.50 a day and more.

"The operators argued that there was greater opportunity for employment in the anthracite mines and we pointed out that the men worked longer to increase their compensation.

Denies Miners are Satisfied.

"Mr. Warriner said the anthracite miners were satisfied with present wages, at which the miners laughed. I fail to see where a man is satisfied to risk his life for $4.20 a day, or that he can be satisfied with $5.42 a day. To earn $1,700 a year a man must work 305 days a year. Since he can only work about 271 days, he averages about $1,128, or less than $100 a month.

"Nearly one-sixth of our men are killed or injured every year. The Pennsylvania Department of Compensation states that 25,000 men are killed or injured annually. That means that every man can expect to be injured or killed during six years of work.

"The rates paid, we told the operators, are not commensurate with the service rendered, considering the laborious nature of the toil, the degree of skill required and the hazards of the calling.

"The anthracite men have been denied a 10 per cent. increase, which has been due since 1920, when they received an increase of 17.6 per cent., in the same year the bituminous miners got an increase

Sightseeing Bus Goes Over 300-Foot Precipice on Road From Nice to Evian.

CHAUFFEUR LOST CONTROL

PARTY WAS TOURING FRANCE

Among Those Killed Were the Rev. and Mrs. H. G. Person of Newton, Mass.

PARIS, Aug. 20.—Five Americans and a French chauffeur were killed and eleven were injured when a tourist sightseeing car plunged into a ravine this afternoon three miles from Guillaume, Alpes Maritimes. Only one passenger, a woman, escaped unhurt from the frightful accident.

The passengers were a party of Americans who were touring France together. They spent last night at Nice and went this morning to Guillaume. They had luncheon there and at 2 o'clock started in a sightseeing car to make the trip through Cayols Pass.

At a place called Le Panier, two kilomgters from Guillaume, the car went over a precipice. An alarm was immediately given, aid was rushed to the scene and with great efforts the victims were taken from the ravine.

The sub-prefect of Puget-Théniers hastened to the scene with Medical Inspectors Barbari and Paucelin. After emergency treatment the wounded were transported to a hospital in Nice.

A Tempie Tours Party.

It is reported in Paris that the party was traveling under the direction of the Temple Tours. Professor Russell H. Miller of the University of Chicago was in charge of the tour. With him were the following persons: Mrs. F. S. White, the Rev. and Mrs. Grant Person, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac R. Strayhorn, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Coffey, Alexander Soudheimer, Mrs. W. W. Spald, Mrs. W. H. Beaumont, Mrs. W. A. Hocker, Dr. R. Gray, Robert and Carleton Person, W. W. Pugg, photographer, and the chauffeur, named Joubart.

A. M. Huot, Secretary General of the Prefecture of Alpes Maritimes, transmitted to Vice Consul Lyons at Nice his regret at the accident which had befallen the American visitors. Today's accident is the latest of a series which began a week ago when twenty-seven Dutch tourists were killed near Lourdes.

Car Falls 300 Feet Into River.

NICE, Aug. 20 (Associated Press).—An automobile bus which was conveying a party of Americans over the famous Alpe road from Nice to Evian today dashed over a parapet and, bounding from rock to rock, plunged 300 feet into the River Var at the bottom of the ravine.

According to first reports, six persons were killed and fifteen injured, several of them seriously. It is said that only one passenger escaped without injury.

Ambulances were immediately rushed to the scene from Nice, forty miles distant. The sub-Prefect of Puget-Théniers, the nearest large town to the scene, superintended the work of rescue.

The accident happened three miles from Guillaume, where the road runs above the bed of the River Var. According to information received here, the car had just taken a sharp bend in the road, the driver was unable to straighten it out, and the car dashed over the parapet and fell into the river.

Mr. Lachenet, manager of the Transatlantic Company, and Mr. Flint, both of New York, and several other persons who were following the bus in a small car witnessed the accident and immediately took steps to summon aid. While awaiting the arrival of help they did all they could to succor the victims.

The Rev. Hiram Grant Person and Mrs. Person of Newton, Mass.; Charles H. Gray and two women who have not yet been identified were killed.

Members of the Touring Party.

The American touring party was headed by Professor Russell B. Miller of the University of Chicago. It included Mrs. D. S. White, the Rev. and Mrs. H. C. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac R. Strayhorn, Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Coffey, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Soudheimer, Mrs. Meta Mooney, Mrs. W. W. Spald, Miss W. H. Beaumont, Mrs. W. A. Hocker, Robert Carleton Person, Charles S. Gray and M. W. LONDON, Aug. 20. — Important changes in the British diplomatic service are prognosticated by "The Daily Chronicle."

It is unlikely that Sir Auckland Geddes will return to the United States and it may be taken for granted that his trenchant report on Ellis Island was his swansong.

TRADE CHIEFS URGE HELP FOR EUROPE

FAVORS THE WORLD COURT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—President Coolidge was informed today by a committee, including some of the leading business men of the United States, that the business men of the country would welcome the opportunity for the United States, either officially or unofficially to be helpful in the solution of the problems of Europe. This assistance, which, the President was informed, would lessen the distress of the wheat farmers and at the same time greatly benefit American industry, should be rendered "with the least possible delay," the committee asserted.

The committee, which represented the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, was headed by Julius H. Barnes, President of the Chamber, the other members being A. C. Bedford, Chairman of the Board of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey; Lewis E. Pierson, President of the Irving Bank Columbia Trust Company, of New York; Charles E. Weed, Vice President of the First National Bank, of Boston; Willis H. Booth, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company, of New York; John H. Fahey, publisher of the New York Evening Post, and F. I. Kent, Vice President of the Bankers Trust Company, of New York.

The committee took up with the President, in addition to the foreign problem, the domestic issues of transportation, the merchant marine, tax reform, the soldiers' bonus, immigration, the budget, the tariff, and the safeguarding of the Federal Reserve system.

The position of American business in the matter of foreign relations, the committee declared, is that existing economic disorder in Europe continues an obstacle to the establishment of permanent peace, to the elimination of unemployment, and to the restoration of normal living conditions. The committee asserted that the existing European situation is reflected in many of the domestic problems of the United States, as, for instance, the distress of the export trade, selling prices at home for factory products that now lack the economy of large production sustained by both home and foreign trade, and the prices of securities, which are depressed by constant apprehension.

Furthermore, the President was informed, the chamber heartily favors legislation making possible American representation in the World Court.

Favors Private Rail Ownership.

In the matter of transportation the position of the Chamber is that the policy of the Government should be based on private ownership and operation of railroads, with a recognition of the obligation owed the public by the roads and of the obligations of the public toward the rail systems.

The Chamber expressed its opposition to Government participation in steamship operation and declared its support of a subsidy to maintain and build up an adequate American merchant marine.

As to reform of the tax laws, the attitude of the Chamber was outlined as follows:

Readjustment of income surtaxes to make them more fruitful in revenue by bringing back into productive and tax yielding enterprise large amounts of capital which have been diverted into investments the income from which is free from Federal taxation.

Future issues of Federal obligations should have their interest subject to the Federal tax.

Prompt and conclusive settlement of tax liability should be assured to all persons who act in good faith.

Income tax should not, in times of peace, be payable until the amount has been finally decided, and this amount should be subject to later revision only in case of fraud.

Administration of Federal income taxes should be so decentralized that a

26 FIREMEN BURIED IN BLAZING BUILDING, 2 DEAD; 20 INJURED

SOME GOT OUT JUST IN TIME

Two firemen were killed and twenty others were taken to hospitals, some of them with probably fatal injuries, early this morning when the roof and walls of the old Masonic Temple in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn collapsed, almost without warning, after the building had been wrecked by flames.

As the great shower of bricks came down, carrying with it heavy steel girders and tons of debris, it seemed that everyone inside must have died and the alarm of a great disaster brought extraordinary calls for rescue workers, medical aid and policemen to keep back a throng of onlookers.

But firemen, policemen and bystanders plunging to the edges of the hot ruins, kicked and clawed at the piles of bricks and soon had uncovered many of those imprisoned. To the surprise of the rescuers none of these were dead.

Likewise hope was abandoned at the outset for a half dozen men who were at work on the roof, wetting down, when it seemed that the hard-fought blaze was about subdued.

But one by one these men, bruised and battered, and some unable to tell how they got there, reported to their company commanders, wiping sweat and grime from their eyes and begging for news of those of their comrades they had seen last, as all seemingly went plunging into the flames below them.

It was impossible to obtain a full list of the injured but among them were these:

With these men accounted for, hope began to dawn that no one had lost his life in the sudden avalanche, but another rescue party, tearing apart a pile of bricks, came upon the lifeless bodies of two firemen so badly battered that they could not be identified until all those on duty had been checked up.

Chief O'Hara Has Narrow Escape.

Some of those who escaped did so by their own quick wits and quick movements, while others owed their lives to the cool heads of companions who took advantage of the fraction of a second of warning to drag them from harm's way.

Deputy Chief John O'Hara, in charge of the Brooklyn fire forces, was saved by John Doonan, his chauffeur, who dragged him from harm's way in the nick of time. Others avoided the rain of hot bricks by diving under pieces of apparatus standing near the curb.

One fire truck was crushed like an egg shell under the debris, but those who dived for shelter under it were not harmed. A fireman standing at the peak of a water tower was knocked to the street and badly hurt. He fell squarely atop another man who also was hurt seriously.

The collapse came shortly after 3 o'clock this morning when the 35-year-old structure had been gutted and firemen were ordered inside to extinguish the last lingering flames. There were six men on the roof of the three-story building, perhaps twenty inside, soaking the walls with water and some twenty more on the sidewalks, playing their hoses on the smoking walls.

There came a rippling noise, followed almost instantly by shouts of warning from those who well knew the import of that sound. Then with a rumble and roar the roof caved in, carrying with it about fifty feet of wall, part of which crumbled into the ruined shell while the rest clattered to the sidewalk.

Many of those caught either inside or in front of the building were painfully hurt. They could be seen wriggling and squirming in the debris, unable to help themselves while the flames, fanned by

Nine 16-In. Guns Mounted in Triple Turrets To Be Feature of New British Dreadnoughts

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—It is stated in authoritative naval circles that Great Britain's two new battleships, Nelson and Rodney, will each mount nine 16-inch guns, which will be carried in triple turrets, a new form of mounting. Each of these giant guns will be capable of hurling a shell weighing approximately 2,900 pounds.

In the American and Japanese navies there are ships mounting guns of 16-inch calibre, but the Nelson and Rodney will form a unique type because they will carry nine guns of this size instead of eight mounted in foreign warships. The reason for introducing the triple turret is the necessity for economizing in weight owing to the restricted displacement laid down in the terms of the Washington agreement.

Triple turrets were first used in the British Navy two years ago when they were temporarily fitted on a monitor which bombarded the ex-German battleship Baden during a series of experiments. Some naval gunnery experts contend that triple mounting does not produce the most accurate and rapid firing.

Another feature of the new battleships will be special anti-flash arrangements, which are a closely guarded secret. They will embody the lessons of Jutland where some British ships were sunk owing to shell flashes penetrating to the magazines.

Mellon Sees No Hope Europe Can Pay More And Favors Delay in War Debt Funding

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The American Government probably will make no immediate effort to hasten negotiation of debt funding agreements with its foreign wartime debtors as a result of information brought back to the Treasury Department today by Secretary Mellon.

Mr. Mellon, who is Chairman of the American Debt Commission, was declared to be pessimistic regarding completion in the near future of additional funding settlements. He was represented as believing, after his study of conditions abroad, that the present was not a good time to attempt inquiries as to what the foreign Governments contemplated in the way of repaying the American loans.

The Secretary also was said to be of the opinion that legislation to prolong the life of the Debt Commission, due to expire in another year, would be necessary.

Firemen and civilians alike, disregarding their own danger if the rest of the walls should come down, plunged through thick clouds of smoke and with bare hands or shod feet attacked the smouldering ruins.

Police reserves who had drawn taut fire lines when earlier it seemed that the blaze would spread to big tenements across the street, forgot to hold back the crowd in their anxiety to reach the stricken men. As the police lines broke the throng at their backs swept to the building and joined in the rescue work. The groans of the injured were echoed by the screams of hysterical women and soon the screams and cries, following on the roar of the collapse drew other hundreds, so that people were getting in each other's way.

Five Alarms Sounded.

Meanwhile police reserves had been ordered from every station in Brooklyn and some in Manhattan and soon there were spare policemen on hand to reform the lines and drive back those who hampered the useful workers.

Firemen and apparatus responding to four alarms were at the scene when roof and wall fell. A fifth alarm, a borough call, brought all the apparatus in Brooklyn, while some extra pieces with their crews were ordered from Queens and from Manhattan.

As fast as the firemen arrived they raced at the rescue work, attacking the thicker piles of debris with pikes and axes, hacking through beams and turning acetylene torches on the stout steel girders under which some of the more badly hurt were held helpless.

At times the rescue work was slow and tedious and meantimes medical aid was being summoned from all over Brooklyn and Queens and from parts of Manhattan. Every ambulance in Brooklyn went to the scene, while many doctors on the police emergency lists or the staffs of big hospitals were called by telephone and told to make all haste thither in taxicabs. As the alarm spread over a widening area, policemen took commandeered taxis and mobilized to give what help they could. A number of nurses were added to the corps of doctors who established first-aid stations on the sidewalks and in nearby buildings. Priests from Roman Catholic Churches in the neighborhood hurried from their parish houses to give the last rites to those victims who were dying.

Huge searchlights had been turned on the blazing building when first the firemen found they had a tough job ahead of them and that thick smoke would impede their struggle to subdue the flames. It was under the light of these that the rescuers worked, sometimes finding their task made difficult as a new billow of heavy smoke blotted the debris and those imprisoned in it from view. Taking advantage of these brief respites, the firemen and policemen would stagger back to clearer air, fill their lungs with deep breaths and then jump back at their blistering task.

Scene of Wild Confusion.

For some time the scene was a wild one, with ambulances and fire apparatus converging from every direction, a great din of bells and sirens waking the whole neighborhood and engines and police patrols being forced to charge through crowds that choked the streets and fought for a view. Even after heavy forces of police reserves were on duty, it was a long time before screaming women could be quieted and well-intentioned residents of the region, eager to offer every possible sort of aid, could be persuaded not to try to break through the lines.

After the rescue work had been in progress more than an hour, the authorities were hopeful that they knew the worst and that the death list would be a small one. But despite the best efforts of firemen who were throwing tons of water against the lingering flames, the fire burned on and there were spots they had not been able to penetrate and in which they still feared they might find some bodies.

Feeding on Tinder-dry Wood.

The flames, starting just after midnight, quickly ate through the entire structure. Although the firemen tried to prevent it, within an hour the entire interior of the building, from cellar to roof, was ablaze.

A row of eight stores underneath the dance hall were burned out. Only hard work by the firemen prevented the flames from spanning the street and firing a row of tenements. Most of the occupants of the tenements, however, came to the street to swell the crowds that had assembled to see the famous old hall pass into flame.

Fire Seemed Under Control.

Deputy Fire Commissioner William Thompson arrived when the third alarm was turned in, but an hour after midnight, when the blaze seemed to be under control, he left.

When the firemen arrived flames already had begun to shoot through the first floor. Handicapped by the dense smoke, the crews of Engine Companies 213 and 214 managed to get several lines of hose through.

Within a few moments Lieutenant Dennis Schmidt of Engine Company 213 fell back into the arms of comrades, overcome by smoke. He was carried to the street where he was revived by an ambulance surgeon of St Catherine's Hospital. Later he was taken to his home.

Shortly afterward, Fireman Arnold Eppers of Engine Company 211 was seared about the face and head when flames shot suddenly through the planking on the second floor. He was removed in an ambulance to St. Catherine's Hospital, painfully burned.

Streets Around Crowded.

The streets were soon filled with persons who had been awakened by the sound of the engines and by the smoke filling their apartments. Many had fled from nearby tenements in their night clothes.

Reserves from the Bedford Avenue, Starr Street and Clymer Street Precincts, under Captain Martin Bowe of the Bedford Avenue Precinct, forced the crowds back to positions of safety, for the entire building was ablaze within a half hour after the fire was discovered.

As one fireman after another dropped from the thick smoke and was hauled to safety by his comrades ambulances were called from St. Catherine's, Greenpoint and Williamsburg Hospitals.

Traffic on the Grand Street and Metropolitan lines of the B. M. T. was blocked as a result of the cordon established by the police of the Clymer Street, Starr Street and Bedford Avenue Precincts.

At 2 o'clock, two hours after the fire started, the blaze, which for a time appeared to have been subdued, seemed to take on a new life. Volumes of thick, black smoke hampered the firemen and billowed over several blocks, covering Grand Street, Hope Street, Scholes Street and Roebling Street.

The police, after an investigation, gave as their opinion that the fire had its origin in a heap of chicken and duck feathers in the cellar of Stromberg's meat and poultry shop.

Abraham Miller, of 354 Jefferson Avenue, owner of the property, could not give an estimate of the loss, but said it might reach close to a quarter of a million dollars. Others estimated the total damage, including the eight stores and their contents, to be about $200,000.

No one was in the building when the fire started. Before it was discovered and an alarm turned in, the blaze had made great headway and the building was a mass of flames.

The first firemen to arrive immediately turned in a second, then a third and a fourth alarm, bringing apparatus from the entire Williamsburg district.

Building Long Famous.

New Plaza Hall, at Havemeyer and Grand Streets, Brooklyn, an old landmark in the Williamsburg section was years ago the scene of many bitter political battles in the Fourteenth Assembly District.

Formerly the Masonic Temple, of recent years the hall had been rented for dances, weddings and parties of various kinds. On the ground floor were David Steinberg's butcher shop and a bedding supply store, owned by Max Ballert. It was a three-story brick structure and showed its age.

The Masonic Temple was famous some years ago as the headquarters of the late State Senator Patrick H. McCarren, then Democratic leader of the Fourteenth Assembly District. Mr. McCarren later became county leader of Brooklyn and held his conventions in the old building.

of 27 per cent. The anthracite operators raised the price of their coal to meet the higher increase and we estimate that $30,000,000 is due the hard coal miners for their failure to get the same wage increase as the soft coal men."

Supporting the arguments of his chief, District President Kennedy said that the report of the Coal Committee showed that 207,000 of the 155,000 hard coal workers receive between $4.20 and $5.20 a day and of the 107,000 men, approximately 90,000 are paid at the rate of 51.7 cents an hour.

"Neither Amicable Nor Heated."

"The discussion was neither amicable nor heated," was the way Mr. Lewis characterized the atmosphere of the meeting.

Mr. Warriner's comment was: "We had to talk about something that must be discussed sooner or later."

An inquirer made a light remark and Mr. Warriner smiled and said: "A point a day keeps the commission away," referring to the eleven days left before Sept. 1 in which to dispose of the miners' eleven demands.

Speaking seriously, Mr. Warriner pointed out that to expect to settle a wage scale in one afternoon was a considerable job.

"The operators want to pay fair and satisfactory wages," he added. "They want to cut down labor turnover to a minimum and to build up an efficient organization. At the same time they see a serious situation confronting the public. The commodity is too high already. To be confronted now with a demand, political in nature, for an increase of 20 per cent. for contract workers and 32 per day workers means, if it is granted, higher prices for coal.

Fears Ruin of the Industry.

"Higher prices would eventually ruin the industry, as people would resent additional costs and would supply themselves with other fuel. We believe, as the Coal Commission does, that wages are already sufficient to maintain a proper standard of living.

"The miners, operators and the public ought to think alike in this situation. The present wages were set in 1920 when the cost of living was at its peak. The miners have not suffered a reduction or unemployment since then. It is true that wages in the steel industry went up last Summer, but wages were low in that industry and the increases did not bring them up to the 1920 level.

"The demand of the day workers for $2 more a day means an increase for them of considerably more than 40 per cent. If we were to meet only their demands for higher wages it would mean an added cost of coal of $2 a ton at the mines and the men would get between $85,000,000 and $90,000,000 a year more.

"It is not true that we bilked men out of $30,000,000 since 1920, as claimed by Mr. Lewis. We figured on a 15 per cent. increase and advanced prices to meet it, but we actually had to pay a 17 per cent. increase. We got no advantage out of that transaction. Our desire is to stabilize the industry and to keep it on full-time operation."

James A. Gorman, Secretary of the conference, wired a brief summary of the proceedings to the Coal Commission at Washington. It is understood that representatives of Secretaries Hoover and Davis are here and are keeping their department heads informed of the trend of the conference.

The wage demand will be further discussed today and the operators are expected to furnish a detailed statement explaining their attitude.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—President Coolidge conferred today with John Hays Hammond, Chairman of the Federal Coal Commission, regarding the anthracite situation. Later Mr. Hammond said that the position of the commission, which is also the position of the Government, had not changed.

There will be no Government intervention of any kind so long as the conferences between the operators and the miners continues, it is stated. The Government continues hopeful that a solution of the problem will be found in the next few days. In the event the conferees fail to agree and the strike order is not recalled, then the Government will act. The position of the Government, Mr. Hammond said, was made plain in the statement issued from the White House on Saturday.

ROADS STORING COAL.

Carriers Have Huge Supply to Meet Requirements in the Fall.

Railroads of the United States had 11,707,910 tons of coal in storage on Aug. 1, according to the fourth report on the efficiency of the railroads made by the American Railway Association. This huge coal supply indicates, the association says, that satisfactory progress is being made in regard to coal storage. The original plan of the American Railway Association, made on April 5 this year, provided that the coal stores by the railroads should be sufficient on Sept. 1 for their needs during the peak of the freight traffic this Fall.

It is pointed out that a total of 15,000,872 tons of coal have been dumped at lake ports during 1923, which is a new high record.

The report also shows that freight cars awaiting repairs on Aug. 1 totaled 8.3 per cent. of the total on line as compared with 8.4 per cent. on July 1. The roads plan a reduction of bad-order freight cars to 5 per cent. of the total on line by Oct. 1.

The association explains the decrease in average daily car movement for July as being due to the heavy accumulation of cars in anticipation of the grain movement.

In dealing with the relocation of equipment the report says satisfactory progress has been made in adding to the box car supply in the West. A total of 92,233 empty cars belonging to the Western lines has been moved from the East through the Chicago and St. Louis gateways since April 14. In addition, during the last sixty days the Eastern lines have moved 18,297 empty box-cars to the West to help bring back the accumulated grain.

The number of locomotives in need of heavy repairs, according to the report, was substantially the same as on July 1—16.3 per cent. of the total on line, on only fifteen days actively, all classes of people are inscribing their names in our offices at the rate of 1,000 a day. The Ruhr workings for the first time are showing interest in the movement and we have one of them on our committee."

Of the accuracy of this statement confirmation was obtained in Essen and Duisburg, where several workmen's committees have declared for independence irrespective of their political leanings. Whether, however, their change of attitude is likely to be permanent is still in serious doubt.

Among the Rhinelanders of the south the old tradition of independence has always had a following, but among the Westphalians, whose whole lives have been wrapped around with the idea of a great industrial Germany, there is nothing of the same idea of a separate culture.

"It is that idea of the necessity of greatness," said von Metzen, that we want to get out of the people's heads. It was that idea which ruined Germany. Yet we have the examples of Switzerland, Belgium and Holland right in front of us as proof that greatness is not the first necessity of happiness of human life and soundness of work."

There is plenty of enthusiasm in these separatist and there is plenty of shrewd judgment as to the value of what they are attempting, but even to talk about the possibility of success is yet unsafe.

In spite of the chaos of the situation, which is all to their advantage; in spite of the weariness of the people of the reparations struggle, of which they are the helpless and innocent victims, the forces arrayed against their movement are enormous. There is, first, the rest of Germany, and, second, the financial forces of the Ruhr, to count only two. Even the French are not optimistic about their movement, though they wish it luck.

SEPARATION MOVE GAINS IN RHINELAND

Powerful Forces Arrayed Against the Plan, and Even French Are Skeptical.

DUESSELDORF, Aug. 20.—Since last Wednesday's meeting at Coblenz all the independent Rhineland parties have united their forces and formed a single organization, of which the object will be the creation of a republic of the Rhineland and Ruhr, entirely separate from the German Reich and from other countries of Germany.

At the head of this movement is Dr. Dorten, most noted of all the separatist leaders, but the man behind the new grouping is Hugo von Metzen, descendant of an old Rhineland family and formerly engineer in the great Krupp firm at Essen. Dr. Dorten formerly sought only technical separation of the Rhineland and its inclusion in the Federation of German States, an arrangement provided for, if desired by the people, in the Constitution of Weimar. But von Metzen wants more. He, with Herr Matess of the Bonn separatists and Dr. Voltheroff of Düsseldorf, wants complete and absolute independence. They want an independent country as self-governing as Holland or Switzerland and guaranteed against aggression, as Belgium was, by the neighboring powers or by the League of Nations.

See Rhineland as Next War Area.

"In the next war, if we cannot prevent it," said von Metzen today, "it will be the Rhineland which will suffer what Northern France suffered in the recent war. It will be our country which will be devastated and that is what we are out to prevent. There is no other way in our opinion but complete independence with a world guarantee behind us, and we are going to try and get it."

It was only last week that von Metzen and his colleagues succeeded in converting Dorten to this view. They gave him a three days' ultimatum, in which he was told he must abandon his ideas of a federated Rhineland within the Reich or abandon the leadership of the party, and the Wiesbaden doctor accepted their dictation.

Next Sunday a great meeting is to be held at Muchen-Gladbach, at which all the party leaders will launch together their big offensive.

Von Metzen is optimistic. He can be eloquent in three languages and his eloquence is likely to prove an important factor in the campaign. He was born at Colmar, where, after the war of 1870, his father held a Government appointment in the newly annexed province, so his acquaintance with the difficulties of annexation and foreign rule are first hand.

"Against any French annexation of the Rhineland," he said, "we Rhinelanders would fight as bitterly as any Germans. But we believe we are less likely to run any risk of that than of greater domination by Russia, which has reduced the Rhineland in the last fifty years from being the leader of German thought, German art and German culture to a province almost entirely ruled by Prussian functionaries who know nothing but their allegiance to Berlin."

Thanks to France's occupation, the way has been largely paved for the separatists, as by far the greater majority of the functionaries have been expelled. Of their subordinates von Metzen has no doubt.

People Rush to Enroll.

"When we are ready," he declared, "we can reconstruct the whole administrative structure with our own people at the head and the employes who will undoubtedly follow our lead. Though the movement has been going

LEGION OFFICERS DENY LETTER ON BERGDOLL

Ohio State and County Chiefs Say Griffis Was Not Encouraged to Kidnap Deserter.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 20.—Denial that the American Legion in Columbus was in any way officially interested in the attempt to capture Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, or that any local official of that organization had written C. Hooven Griffis, Hamilton, Ohio, man arrested following the attempted abduction, wishing him success in his enterprise, was made by State, county and local officials of the American Legion here today.

General Chauncey B. Baker, Chairman of Franklin County Council (Columbus), American Legion, declared that he was positive that such a letter had not been written by any Columbus Legion official.

"No such action has been taken by the American Legion of Columbus, I am positive," declared General Baker. "I did not know C. Hooven Griffis, nor did I ever hear of him until this matter was given publicity in the newspapers. If such a letter has been found, it is probably the misdirected effort of some legionnaire, expressing an individual opinion and not representing the organization."

No such letter was sent from State Headquarters of the American Legion, Assistant State Adjutant J. J. Saslavsky declared.

"To our knowledge there has been no letter of that nature sent out by any Legion post in the State," Mr. Saslavsky asserted.

"It is possible," he continued, "that some member of the American Legion in Columbus may have written to Mr. Griffis at the time he was writing special articles on the battlefields of France complimenting him on his enterprise and wishing him success. Such an expression might easily be interpreted by the German authorities now as being an expression of sympathy toward the enterprise of kidnapping Bergdoll."

taxpayer may have opportunity for prompt initial decision of questions between him and the Government without necessity and expense of a trip to Washington.

A Court of Tax Appeals, independent of the Treasury Department, should be set up, with such procedure and jurisdiction as to assure an early and impartial decision upon substantial questions.

American citizens resident abroad should not be subject to the Federal tax on incomes derived abroad and not remitted to the United States.

Supports Restricted Immigration.

The Chamber declared its support of the immigration restriction policy and recommended that the principle of selection should be a controlling factor in immigration legislation. It suggested that to the present 3 per cent. quota there be added an additional 2 per cent. quota to be based solely on the selective principle, the additional 2 per cent. to be applied when necessary to meet the recognized industrial and social needs of the nation.

Opposition to the proposed bonus law was again emphasized.

The flexible tariff principle was endorsed, and it was suggested that a separate tariff adjustment board be created so "that the Tariff Commission may continue uninfluenced its functions as a research and reporting body."

The Federal Reserve System was unqualifiedly endorsed, the committee pointing out that it is the earnest conviction of the Chamber that no changes in the Federal Reserve law should be considered, "except such as will add further strength and usefulness to the present plan and will continue existing safeguards against partisanship in direction or in service."

The President was reported to have been a good listener. He was cordial, but is understood to have kept his counsel and permitted his visitors to do most of the talking. He promised to give the views of the Chamber his earnest consideration.

COOLIDGE "ARTICLE" COPY OF OLD SPEECH

Denial From Washington of K. of C. Publication Said to Have Been Specially Contributed.

The August number of Columbia, the magazine published by the Knights of Columbus, contains an article headed "Learning the Art of Living" and bearing the sub-caption, "By Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States." The article discusses industrial methods and finds them narrowing rather than broadening in effect upon the mass of employes, pleads for an education for all that will represent a "moral training, and makes reference to radicals seeking the overthrow of the Government here, who have demonstrated in other countries that they bring only misery.

When asked by a TIMES reporter last night about the article, M. T. Birmingham, Managing Director of Columbia, said:

"This is an original article by Mr. Coolidge written for Columbia. He sent the article along with his picture."

Denial promptly came from Washington that Mr. Coolidge had written any such article or any article whatever for the Knights of Columbus magazine. When informed of this, Mr. Birmingham said:

"I had assumed that it was written for Columbia because the editor told me so. Of course, I will look into it and take proper action."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Flat denial that President Coolidge has written any article on "Learning the Art of Living," or on any other subject for Columbia, organ of the Knights of Columbus, was authorized tonight by Edward T. Clark, personal secretary to the President, when his attention was called to the fact that the August number of the magazine contained such an article purporting to be by Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States." Mr. Clark was informed that M. T. Birmingham had told THE TIMES that the article was an original contribution written by Mr. Coolidge for Columbia and sent to the magazine with his picture.

"The President has written no article at all for Columbia," said Mr. Clark. "Since the adjournment of Congress on March 4 last, Mr. Coolidge has written only one magazine article. That one was written by him for the Delineator on the subject of Home Building, in connection with the Home Sweet Home movement. He has written no other article for any magazine in that period, and certainly has not written any since the death of President Harding and his own succession to the Presidency."

It was explained in a quarter close to the President that some one representing Columbia had written to Washington some time back asking for a copy of a speech which Mr. Coolidge had delivered in which he had emphasized the force of religion on the nation's destiny, and during which he had discussed education and other subjects. The best recollection of those who handled the request of Columbia for a copy of that speech, it was stated, was that it was for a copy of the speech which Mr. Coolidge had delivered on April 13 last at Albany, before the New York State Convention of the Y. M. C. A.

The request and the copy of the response accompanying the carbon copy of the speech sent by the then Vice President's staff are not in Washington, but among Mr. Coolidge's effects in New England, and for that reason could not be located tonight.

William C. Prout, State Deputy of the Knights of Columbus, has recently been kept busy explaining that a statement paying tribute to the loyalty of the Knights, given out to the newspapers as coming by telegraph from the President to their recent convention in Montreal, was really written by Mr. Coolidge when he was Governor of Massachusetts, but through some mistake was revived and given out as a current message. John E. Kennedy, press representative of the Knights, explained in Monday's TIMES that he had found this message in a package of correspondence and assumed it was that sent by the President to the convention.

KESSLER ATTACKS FRENCH METHODS

Says Germany Hopes America Will Act as "Portia" to Check Her Aims.

BUT TRUSTS FRENCH PEOPLE

Special to The New York Times.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 20.—Count Harry Kessler, diplomat and economist and the German spokesman at the Institute of Politics, in his lecture tonight pictured France in the rôle of Shylock, and intimated the German desire for the United States to enter the cast in the part of Portia.

Count Kessler made this attack on France after arguing that the French policy, through destroying our foreign markets, was working injury to the United States, and that Poincaré was "running roughshod over the future prosperity of the American farmer with his tanks in the Ruhr."

Then he quoted Jacques Bainville, French Royalist, as having said that there were only two solutions: "To cut into the substance of French life or German life, and that we prefer to cut this pound of flesh out of Germany to seeing it cut out of France. The Shylock myth has taken serious proportions."

"It is a French Nationalist and friend of Poincaré who uses this simile," said Count Kessler. "But if Shylock turns out to be threatening with his knife not only Germany but the world, and the Middle West of the United States in particular, his 'myth' might not only take on singular proportions, but there might also be in the long run some singular reactions.

"I confess that in the immediate future I see little hope, unless strong pressure is put by the nations whose interests are being jeopardized, on M. Poincaré and his set. It is possible that Shylock, to speak with M. Bainville, may this time have his way, and that no Portia will put forth her hand to stop him. A great deal of blood may be spilled before we see the light, as it has been so often, uselessly. We may even see Shylock triumphant with the Imperial Crown of Europe on his brow, but in the long run shylockism does not pay."

Trusts French People.

"Therefore, ultimately, I put by trust in the common people of France, who are not very different from common people everywhere who want, if anything, less taxes and not glory; on the great industries of France, which want coke and not blood; on the bankers, who prefer common sense to bankruptcy; on the silk manufacturers of Lyons and the wine growers of the Champagne and Bordeaux, who prefer markets to occupied territories, and on all the artistic and dainty crafts of Paris who prefer tourists to triumphant politicians."

Urging the adoption of the policy advocated by Secretary Hughes for an impartial commission to establish how much Germany is able to pay, Count Kessler said that if France did not accept the finding of such a commission the United States, the Allies and the neutrals should close their markets to her, so that her occupation of the Ruhr would be of no good.

Count Kessler proposed that those nations whose interests are endangered by the Ruhr occupation should close their markets to France and exert the pressure of a bankruptcy threat.

Referring to the French demand for security, he countered with a similar plea for Germany, picturing a possible invasion of Germany in ten or fifteen years by France with "an army of a million black men."

As to the effect of the present situation on the United States, Count Kessler quoted from information supplied to him by the Washington Institute of Economics and believed by him to have been unpublished heretofore. Illustrating the influence of the reparations snarl on the markets for agricultural raw materials and foodstuffs produced by American farmers, especially on the American home market for wheat and other farm products, he quoted:

"American manufacturers need to sell part of their product in European, South American or other markets, whose purchasing power is in turn dependent upon their ability to sell their own products. If such outlets fail, our industrial centres must curtail their operations, and the farmers' domestic market is proportionately weakened, hence the American farmer becomes vitally interested in the question of industrial and financial outlook for Europe."

Recalling that in the first two years after the war European Governments continued to buy American wheat and other farm products, paying for them out of loans and other methods of wartime finance, Count Kessler again quoted from the Washington economists:

"During 1921 and 1922 even these desperate resorts in Europe were coming gradually nearer to their final extinction. If the invasion of the Ruhr should prove in the end to be only the climax of a four years' sequence of failure to deal constructively with the problem of Europe's rehabilitation, the position of American agriculture would be truly desperate.

"Under such circumstances the United States would have to strike practically the whole of her list of European customers from her books and adjust her agricultural industry accordingly. Germany and the United Kingdom, the two countries hardest hit by the Ruhr invasion, were by all odds the American farmers' best foreign customers before the war."

Count Kessler also quoted the following paragraph from Senator Capper's letter to the President, urging an international conference on European settlements:

"Now Europe starves, our surplus products rot, and for an adequate outlet for them no other practicable means can be devised. To establish the one industry upon which our national well being so certainly depends it is as necessary to take care of and to dispose of this 15 per cent. surplus, which was sold to Europe, as it is to market the 85 per cent. which makes our existence possible. We must keep in mind at all times that the price of the surplus sets the price of all."

Calls for Lowering of Tariff.

One of the essentials to enable Germany to pay the reparations, Count Kessler said, was the abolition or reduction by the United States and other countries of high tariffs against German exports. After saying that Germany could not pay by gold, goods, investments or property abroad, by services, or by gold, goods, investments or property in Germany, Count Kessler declared that the only way left was for payments out of the surplus of exports over imports.

"When a country exports more than it imports," he said, "it accumulates a bank balance abroad which can be transferred to another nation without any particular technical difficulty. Lloyd George, Briand and all the experts have always pointed to this way as the chief or only manner by which Germany could procure the money or credits necessary for reparations."

He quoted Messrs. Moulton and McGuire of the Washington Institute of Economics as saying in part:

"Germany imports too little to keep her population and her industries going. All her markets have been either greatly curtailed or entirely destroyed. America, partly on account of the new tariff, has fallen off considerably.

"For Germany to get a favorable trade balance, permitting reparations payments over long periods, not only therefore must Russia and the whole of Eastern and Western Europe be restored to their former prosperity, but the barriers put in the way of German exports by the Treaty of Versailles, and by the high tariffs of the new States in Europe, and of France, Great Britain and the United States, must be abolished, or at least considerably lowered."

Count Kessler explained the success of passive resistance in the Ruhr by saying that pacifist and "no more war" sentiment had spread widely among the Ruhr miners, who had never submitted to military control in any shape, even by the Germans.

To prove that the French had been unable to break down this resistance Count Kessler quoted a Düsseldorf dispatch of Aug. 15 to THE NEW YORK TIMES which, he added, was "a paper not noted for being pro-German." This dispatch said the spirit of resistance was growing stronger, and that the progress of the French in exploiting the mines and factories had been almost negligible.

Isolation for the United States was defended by army and navy officers at the open conference on raw materials this afternoon. Captain Frank P. Scofield of the Navy General Board declared that the abandonment of our natural isolation would destroy our comparative freedom from the continual fears of war that harass European countries.

He charged that the "real heart" of the "graceful and even convincing generalities we listen to regarding America's non-co-operation" was "a unanimous foreign demand that America cancel the debts of the allies, float a German loan sufficient to pay the reparations and then whistle for payment during the next century, while American manual labor sweats for Europe, and Europeans tell us in solemn phrases how often and fully we fail in our manifest duty."

Attacking pacifism Captain Schofield said: "When you come to deal with facts, we notice that you never send a group of pacifists to protect missionaries, but guns and bayonets instead. If Haiti runs amuck, off go the navy and marines; if Europe is perishing, off goes the army."

Captain Schofield stressed the function of the navy in protecting sea commerce to provide for the uninterrupted flow of war materials in time of war. He said that provision for this must be made in time of peace.

Emphasizing the necessity of maintaining an oil reserve in this country for the use of the navy in time of war, he said that an oil-burning fleet would have an easy time with a coal-burning one, because ships can steam for days at high speed on oil, while coal clogs up the boilers. He lamented the navy's loss to private interests of the control of oil lands out West that had been set up as a navy reserve, and hoped that the navy reserve recently established in Northern Alaska would not go the same way.

Giving an example of the fuel problem of a navy far from its source of supply in time of war, Captain Schofield asked his audience to "take the fleet left to us after the Treaty for Limitation of Naval Armaments and put it together with an appropriate military force in the Western Pacific in defense of, say, a totally independent Philippine republic. The supply of this fleet, he said, would require 300 oil tankers of 10,000 deadweight tons and 100 vessels of similar size for coal transportation, besides hundreds of vessels to carry food, clothing, munitions and troops.

Calls Submarine Menace Greater.

How to guard these ships on their long voyage from America to the scene of action, he said, would be an enormous problem, much greater than that of the submarine menace in the World War. He cited the success of the German raiders, the Goeben and the Breslau, and the enormous trouble they caused the British before their menace to lines of communications was removed.

Such peace-time actions as the Washington Arms Conference, Captain Schofield said, had an important bearing on war. At the conference, he said, Great Britain wanted submarines abolished in line with her desire to diminish the chances of interference with her sea lines of supply.

Urges Synthesis of East and West.

Colonel William P. Wooten of the Engineering Corps pointed out that the United States was better able to maintain itself without outside lines of communications in time of war than Japan.

"No country is in all respects self-sustaining in time of war," he said. "The United States is far more nearly so than any other nation. Our chief deficiencies are nickel, rubber and nitrates.

"Among the leading world powers Japan is the most deficient in raw materials. She has enough coal and copper, but is lacking in practically everything else. She absolutely requires access to the raw materials of China, especially to Chinese iron ore, and she has great need of Northern Sakhalin as a source of oil supply."

William S. Culbertson of the Tariff Commission and head of the Conference on Raw Materials, said that it will become evident in the long run that "the world cannot stand the hunger of war," and that there would have to be international co-operation to remove the economic causes of war, but that for the present the army and navy must be depended upon for national security.

"The trouble was, he said, that war might lead to the destruction of what it was hoped to secure—the nation.

"But nations," he added, "will not give up their armies and navies until they are given security in some other form of guarantee.

"The worst enemies of peace are those superficial pacifists who believe that we can vote war off the earth, and are continually agitating to cut down army and navy appropriations. We can create practically a warless world, but we must begin with the removal of the causes which lead to war."

Mr. Culbertson suggested "a synthetic" civilization to prevent war between the white and yellow races.

"If we merely give the East our material civilization based on machinery, we have forged weapons for our destruction," he said. "A better procedure would be to gather up the spiritual forces in both the West and East—forces working for harmony, good-will and co-operation—and create from them a composite synthetic civilization which will control and use the vast material resources of the earth for man's intellectual, moral and spiritual development."

Peace in Pacific Assured.

Professor George H. Blakeslee of the Conference on Pacific Questions declared that the Washington Arms Conference had made it possible to look forward to peace and tranquillity in the Pacific instead of regarding it as the inevitable scene of the next war. He also detailed results of a "fundamental change" in Japanese foreign policy since the war, making for peace.

The change he attributed to intelligent self-interest, the discrediting of German methods and views in the World War, the growth of liberal and democratic movements in the extension of suffrage, and the pressure of taxes, leading to a reaction against heavy expenditures necessary for the old policy in China.

Mirza Hussein Khan Alai, Persian Minister to the United States, told the Near East Round Table that he did not think that the proposals of the Standard Oil and Sinclair Oil Companies now before the National Assembly would prove satisfactory.

The companies are expected to make further offers more satisfactory to the Government, he added. The Persian Government was anxious to induce American companies to enter its oil field in competition with the British, he said, and thinks that its open door policy will bring economic stability and prosperity.

At the League of Nations Round Table, Dr. Charles A. L. Reed, former President of the American Medical Association, said in part:

"Nearly three times as many human beings are killed every year by preventable diseases as were killed in conflict during the whole of the World War. The safety of the world against such widespread pestilence can be secured only by some co-ordinating agency of world-wide influence such as now exists only in the League of Nations."

WOMAN KILLED IN ELEVATOR

New Bedford Guest Victim of Accident at Bretton Woods.

BRETTON WOODS, N. H., Aug. 20.—Mrs. C. A. Cook, of New Bedford, Mass., was instantly killed today in an elevator accident at the Mount Washington Hotel here. The elevator boy was held by the authorities for questioning.

The accident occurred at the breakfast hour. Guests in the dining room heard a woman scream and rushed out to find Mrs. Cook crushed between the elevator and the wall. It was thought the car had started as she was about to enter or leave it.

MELLON SAYS RUHR HOLDS EUROPE BACK

If Situation Could Be Adjusted Prosperity Would Come Quickly, Secretary Predicts.

HOPES FOR DEFINITE MOVE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—If the Ruhr situation could be adjusted prosperity would come quickly to Europe, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon thinks after his visit abroad. The Secretary called on President Coolidge this afternoon to report on his impressions, and although after this conference he refused to discuss what he told the President, later at the Treasury his views on economic conditions on the other side of the Atlantic were learned.

Conditions are good in France, there is less unemployment in England, and Germany, though lacking raw materials, has more productive capacity than before the war, the Secretary believes. His own hope is that there will be a definite move in the Ruhr discussion before the Winter is over, even although, according to informants, the outlook for a clearing of this controversy is not good at this time, and although he detected a note of pessimism abroad concerning the Ruhr, especially among French bankers.

German Banker's View Gloomy.

A Director of the Deutsche Bank went so far as to say that if the French remained in the Ruhr there would be such unrest and such an amount of industrial demoralization that the German States where communism and radical agitation now exist might split away from the country as a whole. It was agreed, so Mr. Mellon learned, that the situation would complicate the reparations scheme, for it would be very difficult to collect from these States the proportion of reparations they would ordinarily assume as a part of the former German Empire.

Efforts this afternoon to have Mr. Mellon discuss the attitude of the French toward their American debt failed flatly, for he declared he went abroad as a private citizen—"it was in the nature of a holiday," he put it. He did, however, talk to friends about the condition of France, and it was learned he told them that the country looked prosperous, that French industry was thriving, that the people were employed and that France seemed self-supporting as far as production went, and was not dependent upon importations.

Even in the devastated regions, Mr. Mellon was deeply impressed with the rehabilitation. "There was so much going on they looked like boom towns in the West," he said. An illustration of the French outlook was that about 20 per cent. fine French automobiles were sold for export and that deliveries on these machines were about four months behind. Trade was decreasing a little, French bankers attributing this to the Ruhr impasse.

In England there was still unemployment, but it was lessening, Mr. Mellon was told while there. The system of paying doles to the unemployed militated against men voluntarily going to work, and in addition played its part in strikes, for the strikers received doles, so Britons complained to the Cabinet officers.

The British, Mr. Mellon seemed to find, were less rigid in their attitude toward the Ruhr situation than the French, the British being more willing to yield a little, while the French were stiffly back of their Government in insisting on their demands.

Observers in the United States Treasury consider that French credit has been somewhat weakened by their attitude on the Ruhr, for they say, the French have as yet secured no benefits from the occupation, and also the exchange value of the franc has been depressed. Mr. Mellon found that the standpoint of the French was that they had not had time to work out a plan in the Ruhr, and therefore more latitude should be given them.

Fears No Bolshevist Outbreak.

In the meantime the question agitating Europe is what will happen with the mark down to a negligible point. Secretary Mellon does not fear there will be a Bolshevist uprising in Germany, for he does not consider that compatible with the German temperament, but as already said the contingency of Germany being split into small States looms up as a possibility.

There might, in that event, still be some basis for reparations collections, Mr. Mellon thinks, but he realises the extreme difficulty of this, especially as it might involve official recognition of these small States by other Governments.

Raising the mark to its old normal value is out of the question, German financial men told Mr. Mellon, and the solution seems to be not a complete repudiation of the German currency, but a stabilization of the mark on a different money basis. While there have been many suggestions that Germany deliberately depressed her currency in order to evade reparations and also to pay her internal obligations, the Secretary is not persuaded of this. It is said to be his view that necessity forced the mark down at first, and that the German Government went not unwillingly along with this policy.

Up to this time there has been nothing that the United States could do to help conditions in Europe, Mr. Mellon thinks. The British have a kindly feeling toward Secretary Hughes's suggestion of an international commission, while the French do not oppose this, although their viewpoint is that such a plan will not accomplish the desired end. Mr. Mellon found while in Europe, Mr. Mellon discussed the "ship-liquor" subject informally with some foreign statesmen who did not clearly understand the American prohibition law.

MELLON WILL REMAIN IN COOLIDGE CABINET

Winston to Succeed Gilbert as Under Secretary of the Treasury in a Few Months.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Secretary Mellon will retain the Treasury portfolio in President Coolidge's Cabinet. This afternoon a caller remarked to the Secretary:

"I assume you're going to be with us for some time."

"I hope so," replied Mr. Mellon, with a smile.

Gerard B. Winston, recently appointed an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, will succeed S. Parker Gilbert, Jr., the present Under Secretary, who will retire in a few months. Mr. Gilbert will leave soon for a trip to Europe and will remain at the Treasury for a short time after his return. Mr. Winston has been working with Mr. Gilbert, famil

TIDAL WAVES DROWN HUNDREDS IN KOREA

346 Known Dead and 1,000 Missing as Toll of Storm Along the Yalu River.

25,000 HOUSES SUBMERGED

British Steamer Ming Sang, Reported Sunk in Hongkong Typhoon, Reaches Manila.

TOKIO, Aug. 20 (Associated Press).—Advices received here today from Seoul said that 346 persons are dead and more than a thousand missing as a result of the recent tidal waves and storm in the four western provinces of Korea. The damage to houses and other property also was great.

The storm was heaviest along the Yalu River, on the west coast of Korea. The first report of the storm, which was received here Aug. 15, said that tidal waves submerged 25,000 houses along the river.

HONG KONG, Aug. 20 (Associated Press).—Hardly a house in the Peak district of Hongkong escaped damage in the typhoon which struck here last Saturday.

An untenanted military sanatorium was wrecked. The wall surrounding the maternity division of the Matilda Hospital was blown down and the iron gates were wrenched from their supporting pillars.

The roof of Victoria Hospital was seriously damaged and the Mount Gough police station was nearly destroyed. The roof of the building housing the junior mess of the Hongkong-Shanghai bank fell in, damaging two floors. A corner room of the Chief Justice's house was blown away.

Damage caused to the Netherlands Harbor Works Company's plant at Macao, across the Canton River from here, in Saturday's typhoon will retard considerably the work of reconstruction, it was said today.

The company's dredger, Peking, turned turtle off Macao during the storm. Two members of the crew were rescued. How many perished was not learned. The Portuguese armed steam launch Almirante foundered and only one member of the crew of fifteen was saved. Several Chinese launches were sunk.

The Government patrol launch Coloane picked up scores of Chinese from a foundered Chinese junk which carried many passengers. Another passenger junk is missing.

MANILA, Aug. 20 (Associated Press).—The British steamer Ming Sang, which was reported sunk in Hongkong Harbor in the typhoon Saturday, arrived here safely this morning after a difficult voyage. Her officers reported that the vessel seen to sink in Hongkong probably was the British steamship Loong Sang.

The Loong Sang is a ship of much the same type as the Ming Sang and might have been mistaken for her.

Many lives were lost with the steamer whose identity was in error. Of those aboard only two European officers were saved.

A minor typhoon has been raging here for the last three days. With it came a heavy rainfall that flooded many streets. There has been no damage, although shipping is suspended.

HONGKONG, Aug. 20.—It now is possible to give some estimate of the nature of the damage caused by the typhoon Saturday. The harbormaster declares that Hongkong suffered far less than it might have, taking all the circumstances into consideration. The wrecked ships will be easily salvaged.

Thirty-eight bodies, including those of two officers of the Loong Sang named Barron and Black, have been recovered, but it is feared that the majority of the victims who were aboard the steamer have been washed out to sea.

Searching parties are at work and incoming steamers all report having passed disabled junks, some of which had been overturned. Several ships have picked up survivors.

Tonight the harbor is again empty, as the typhoon warning has been hoisted.

A. EVELYN-LIARDET VERY ILL.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Arthur Evelyn-Liardet, former actor-manager and well known in New York, is seriously ill at his home here, and is said by his physicians to have slight chance of recovery. He came into prominence in connection with a reported gland operation, which was said to have rejuvenated him, and his case was the subject of much interest in medical circles. Later he developed a disorder which pulled him down rapidly, and he is now semi-conscious.

Mr. Evelyn-Liardet for years toured the Far East with his own companies. He and his wife were close friends of the late Joseph Jefferson and visited him at Bussard's Bay. Mrs. Evelyn-Liardet was formerly active in suffrage work with prominent society women in New York.

Mr. Evelyn-Liardet, who is 76 years old, circled the globe four times during his career of actor and impresario. Twenty-two years ago he supported Joseph Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle," while Jefferson was touring Australia.

In an effort to restore the patient's youth Dr. Serge Voronoff performed an operation on Mr. Liardet in Paris nearly two years ago, which at the time seemed successful.

The actor, who until a few years ago was a wealthy man, suffered financial reverses and retired from the stage to become proprietor of a private hotel in the West End of London. His wife was a Miss Bostwick of New York.

THRONGS QUITTING ENGLAND

Unemployment Increasing and Emigration Heavy, Says W. C. Robinson, M. P.

William C. Robinson, member of Parliament for the Elland Division of Yorkshire, who arrived yesterday on the Cunarder Caronia to attend the International Convention of the American Federation of Labor at Portland, Ore., on Oct. 1, said that labor conditions in England were very bad. The number of unemployed had increased again to nearly 1,500,000, he said, and the Government was still paying out the doles and likely to have to do so for some time.

The only remedy in sight was emigration, Mr. Robinson continued, and the best of the younger generation were leaving the old country in thousands every week. There were 1,000 on the Caronia who had landed two days ago at Halifax bound for Western Canada.

Regarding the French occupation of the Ruhr, Mr. Robinson said: "The general impression among all classes in England is that France was quite right to demand her reparations from Germany, but went about getting it in the wrong way. By closing up the Ruhr France has blocked a settlement which cannot be concluded while the French occupation lasts."

Mr. Robinson, who was accompanied by his wife, was met at the pier by two delegates from the American Federation of Labor and left in the afternoon for Fall River by steamer.

A man who said he was Patrick Cosgrove of Cincinnati, Ohio, and asserted he was a brother of the President of the Irish Free State, returned on the Caronia after he had been refused permission to land at Liverpool by the British authorities.

BELGIUM SEES GROUND FOR FURTHER PARLEY

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 20.—The meeting of the Cabinet which was to have been held tomorrow has been postponed till Wednesday afternoon. Premier Theunis and Foreign Minister Jaspar will then submit to their colleagues the text of the reply of Belgium to the British note. The document will be transmitted to M. Poincaré Wednesday night and dispatched to London Thursday.

The Belgian reply will discuss the question of Belgian priority and will state the sum received by Belgium up to the present on account of reparation with regard to occupation of the Ruhr. The Government will emphasize the fact that occupation will be modified in proportion to the payments and guarantees of the Germans.

The Belgian reply will take note of the fact that in her note, for the first time in an official document, Great Britain fixes the amount of indemnity she considers she ought to receive on account of reparations. It is this fact, in the opinion of the Government, which permits of negotiations being continued.

RUSSIA'S MILITARY IDOL MEETS HER PRIZE HOG

By WALTER DURANTY.

MOSCOW, Aug. 19.—Great enthusiasm marked the opening today of the Agriculture Exhibition. Speeches were made by the Soviet leaders, Kamenief, Rykof, Tchitchirin and Larushin, all with the same burden: "The success of this exhibition proves that Russia can accomplish her own reconstruction, whether Europe helps her or not."

Five months' work has transformed a miasmatic swamp on the edge of the splendid estate which Catherine the Great gave to Count Orloff, into a long vista of gayly decorated pavilions lying, as it were, in the lap of a hillside green with the ancient oaks, elms and firs of the Orloff Park.

All of Russia's varied races were represented among the crowds—extraordinary figures, some of them, in their characteristic costumes, from the Samoyeds of the extreme north to the startled-looking tribesmen of the Himalaya foothills. These outlanders stood staring before buildings utterly foreign to their experience and laughed like children as they came upon the familiar structures of their own lands.

The motley crowd halted awe-stricken before a picture of Lenin, twenty feet high, executed in green and red brown leaves by the famous gardener, Beziel. From before it the crowd moved on to the old style and new style Russian villages, to an immense map of Russia which spanned a bridge which groaned beneath the weight of eager thousands, for many of whom their own village but lately represented all the known world.

As they passed on down the long, straight alley they seemed to become more interested and more purposeful. One could feel that they had all heard of, had all come to see, could all appreciate what was about to meet their gaze. Around a squat building whose low roof echoed to the bellowing of cattle and the whinnying of horses, the crowd surged and eddied in excitement. For here was housed the real glory of the exhibition to its peasant visitors: Russia's prize pig, a gigantic animal of the purest English lineage—a Yorkshire sow, a full third of a ton in weight.

The great event of the day came when Budyenny, Russia's most popular General, was introduced to the pig, which, appropriately enough, comes from his own district of Rostoff. The stout ex-sergeant of Cossacks—the Ney and Murat of the Russian Revolution rolled into one—had ridden a thousand miles on relays of his own Cossack ponies, to be present at the exhibition. For a moment he stood before the prize pig in silent admiration. The crowd wafted, breathless. Then Budyenny spoke, simply and briefly as befitted a warrior:

"In Rostoff we breed good stock," he said, "pigs, horses, men and women."

AUTOS KILL 2, HURT 5; ONE LIKELY TO DIE

Deputy Attorney General Asks Bar Association to Study Means to Lessen Risks.

Because of the increasing number of automobile accidents throughout the country, Deputy Attorney General Irving L. Goldsmith of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., yesterday sent the following telegram to John W. Davis, President of the American Bar Association, 15 Broad Street:

"The number of persons being injured and killed by motor vehicles on the streets of the cities and villages throughout the nation is appalling. This situation suggests the expediency of restricting use of the roadway by pedestrians to stopping and crossing at designated points. This problem merits the attention of the American Bar Association at the forthcoming Minneapolis meeting."

Jean McConaghie, 6, was playing in front of her home at 241 East Forty-fifth Street last evening when she ran in front of a car owned and operated by Andrew Hamilton of 15 West 107th Street and received injuries from which she died within an hour at Bellevue Hospital.

Agnes Davis, 5, of 107 Oak Street, East Orange, N. J., was killed by an automobile driven by Augustus Pengitore of 543 McChesney Street, Orange, and owned by Jacob Maggor of 84 Rutgers Street, Hilton. Pengitore was held on a technical manslaughter charge.

William Dodd drove his touring car into a motor truck near his home in Sussex, N. J., and he and four other occupants were injured, one fatally. Grace Fenner, 8, who was seated beside her mother, was removed in a dying condition to the Linn Memorial Hospital. Dodd, his two daughters and Mrs. Fenner suffered cuts and bruises about the body. The accident happened on the Hamburg-McAfee Turnpike. The chauffeur of the truck was arrested on a charge of reckless driving.

EARTHQUAKES THROW PERSIANS INTO PANIC

Heavy Floods Also Cause Great Damage and Many Casualties Are Reported.

TEHERAN, Persia, Aug. 20 (Associated Press).—Five severe earthquakes have been felt at Turbat-i-Haidari during the last twenty-four hours, and the inhabitants are panic-stricken, dispatches received here say.

Heavy floods also have caused damage, and there are said to be many casualties.

MOORS KILLED 250 OF SPANISH FORCE

MADRID PUBLIC DISTURBED

All Army Leaves Stopped as Ministers Confer and Order Reinforcements.

MADRID, Aug. 20.—Private reports from the fighting area describe an extremely violent hand-to-hand combat near Tdargo, where one of the three Spanish columns sent out with supplies was ambushed.

The Moors were hidden among the rocks in large numbers and after allowing the Spanish patrols to pass opened a heavy fire upon the main columns proceeding to Tifaruin.

Three attempts were made by the Spanish forces, composed of regulars and legionaires, to dislodge the Moors, who finally broke in upon them with knives and clubs, even women being seen among the attacking parties, shouting encouragement to their menfolk.

The Moors are said to have lost more than 500 killed, but the Spanish were forced back with losses of not less than 250.

The optimistic declarations of the Government have failed to reassure public opinion regarding recent events. Spain is faced today with problems of ever increasing complexity. The Moors have been acquiring strategic and technical skill; they are well armed with modern weapons and possess ample supplies of ammunition and constitute a very different enemy from what they were a few years ago. The country is exceedingly rough and ideal for every sort of surprise attack. There are natural fortifications, and communications are extremely difficult, particularly in view of the doubtful loyalty of the tribes which have submitted. The attitude of the Beni Said, whose territory has been the scene of the recent severe fighting, is very suspicious.

The general restlessness has been encouraged by political indecision, and this has also damaged the morale of the troops, curtailing the efficiency of military measures.

General Weyler has returned to Madrid. He refused to stay a day longer in Morocco, having rank but no authority, as he put it. Meanwhile, all leaves have been canceled.

General Sanjurjo, who has seen service with the Spanish army in Morocco for several years, is to be appointed Commander-in-Chief at Melilla, succeeding General Martinez Anido, who resigned last week. The post is being filled temporarily by General Echague.

Orders have been issued by the Minister of Marine for a cruiser squadron to sail immediately for Morocco under command of General Rodrigues Rivera. The cruisers España and Alfonso XIII. have received sailing orders.

All Army Leaves Canceled.

MADRID, Aug. 20 (Associated Press).—All leaves of absence in the army have been suspended. It was also announced today that detachments would be sent to Morocco to replace the losses suffered in the fighting with the rebels.

The President of the Cabinet declares that the Moroccan situation is not serious and that the King has no intention of returning to the capital at this time. The Government Ministers, however, conferred on the situation today and agreed to take all the measures necessary to relieve the situation.

Continuance of the fighting between the rebels and Spanish troops was reported in an official communiqué issued last night and published today, as follows:

"In the eastern zone on Sunday a mortar battery discharged twenty shots at an enemy group in the region of Beni Median. Near Buherif several enemy groups on the heights in front of the advanced positions were dispersed with machine-gun fire.

Moors Attack at Tifaruin.

"During last night (Saturday) a vigorous attack was made on the position at Tifaruin by enemy groups who have been endeavoring to build wire fortifications. Hand grenades used by our forces killed several of the enemy.

"The commandant at Alhucemas advises that during Saturday and Sunday the neighboring camps appeared almost deserted and that only small armed groups of the enemy could be observed moving about.

"The commander of the battleship España reports that he arrived today off Afrau to reinforce the gunboats which are protecting the maritime convoys. Quiet prevailed there. The High Commissioner is expected here this afternoon.

"In the western zone the enemy signaled from Kayalat, and contact with him was established near Adgos. Airplane squadrons bombed Kayalat and at 3 o'clock the enemy flag was withdrawn from the Taber position at Adgos."

PLANS TRIP TO RUSSIA.

Copyright, 1923, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Senator La Follette, who is now in Europe, completed plans while in London early in August to visit Russia. Mr. La Follette saw the London representative of the Soviet Government, to whom he expressed a keen desire to make the trip. He was assured of every consideration if he would go to Moscow to study conditions.

The Soviet authorities are well disposed toward the Wisconsin Senator, because he has several times urged in the Senate some sort of an agreement with that country.

"My trip will be too short to get other than a superficial knowledge of the situation in Europe," said Mr. La Follette, "but I will at least have some first-hand information when I return to the Senate. I particularly want to see Russia. World peace is impossible without Russian co-operation. I do not think the world has a proper idea of Russia, and I doubt if the truth has been told about the Soviets."

VANCOUVER BANDITS ROB CARD PLAYERS

Two Masked Men Get $10,000 in Hold-Up of a Private Club.

VANCOUVER, B. C., Aug. 20.—Two masked bandits early today entered a private club on Granville Street, lined up a score of card players and fled after taking forty-five minutes to collect $10,000 from their victims.

The players were intent on their cards when suddenly they heard the command, "Stick 'em up, boys!"

Turning around, they saw two men, in fawn-colored overcoats, with handkerchiefs tied across their faces. One victim alone lost $6,000.

BERLIN CABINET ACTS FOR EMERGENCY RELIEF

Holds Long Night Session and Summons Reichstag Leaders—May Seize Foreign Currency.

BERLIN, Aug. 20 (Associated Press).—An extraordinary session of the Cabinet, presided over by President Ebert, tonight approved a number of emergency measures intended to meet the economic and social situation which steadily is growing worse in consequence of the further collapse in the value of the mark.

The meeting, which began at 7 o'clock, was still in progress at midnight, when the leaders in the Reichstag were summoned for the purpose of acquainting them of the action the Government purposes to take, which it is stated will be of a "Draconic nature."

The entire Cabinet, it is said, is united in the conviction that the situation can be saved only by most energetic measures, the nature of which will be announced tomorrow.

The Government is contemplating requisitioning all available private reserves of foreign currency in order to halt the drop in the mark and to provide funds for food purchases abroad.

LONDON, Aug. 20 (Associated Press).—Berlin police guards last night found two men in the shrubbery near the residence of Chancellor Stresemann, says a Central press dispatch from Berlin today. The guards opened fire, but the suspects ran and succeeded in escaping.

The police, says the message, are convinced that the object of the lurking individuals was an attempt to take the Chancellor's life but only to steal diplomatic papers.

DUTCH GUARD FRONTIER.

Hordes of Germans Buying Up Food in Border Towns.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—A dispatch to The Daily Mail from Maastricht says that in view of possible "incidents" along the German-Dutch frontier, Dutch troops have been sent thither and the frontier guards increased.

The dispatch adds that hordes of Germans are buying all available foodstuffs in Dutch frontier towns.

FREIGHT STEAMER ASHORE.

No One Hurt When the Dakotan Grounds on Mexican Coast.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 20.—S. O. S. calls saying the freight steamship Dakotan went ashore at 2:50 A. M., on the Pacific Coast off Mexico about 500 miles south of San Pedro, Cal., were picked up here early today by the Radio Corporation of America.

No details were given, but it was learned that the army transport Henderson and the oil tanker Charles Pratt were speeding to rescue the Dakotan. The Dakotan left Los Angeles harbor for New York several days ago.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 20.—The steamship Dakotan went ashore near San Lazaro, according to a wireless message from her picked up by the Federal Telegraph Company. No one was injured, the message stated, and the tanker Charles Pratt was expected to reach the stranded vessel in a short time and pull her off.

AIR ARMADA FLIES 800 MILES TO MAINE

its proper place. Plane Number Two on the right was directly opposite Plane Number Three on the left. Flying over the metropolis at the rate of 100 miles an hour, it seemed only a few seconds when the white markers on Mitchel Field appeared in view.

Then majestically encircling the field, each of the three groups came down, "taxi-ing" up to the hangars in full formation. Here the airmen were welcomed by Major Hensley, the commandant, and a crowd of air "fans" who had waited hours at the field for the appearance of the bombers.

After refueling and awaiting orders from Maine, the armada got off at 1:55 in its race to the aid of Bangor. Three of the bombers were delayed in making a second start, but later hopped off to rejoin the group. Apparently the bombers were in danger of being "bombed" by enemy planes, as fifteen minutes after the armada had started for Maine seven De Havilland scout planes were dispatched eastward. Flying at a greater speed then the Martins, they overtook the armada just off Boston Harbor.

The bombers had intended making a stop at the Boston air port but Major Reynolds decided to make a "single hop" from Mitchel Field to Bangor. The De Havilands, under Major Junius Jones, stopped at Boston for military purposes, using them to take aboard Elvin R. E. C. Herman, the Air/Squadron cook, since an air force, like a marching army, fights on a full stomach.

The interest manifested in the air manoeuvres made at Mitchel Field were repeated at Boston, where a large crowd hugged the edges of the landing field. Bostonians used up quantities of dignified adjectives in expressing their feelings at the sight of the bombardment and pursuit groups passing over their city.

Maine Folks Welcome "Defenders."

The flight from Boston on presented the sort of terrain that makes pilots long for the day when the Government or some one will build landing fields in town and city of size and between such places at intervals. Pilots unconsciously are always on the alert for landing fields or possible landing fields. As a result the heavily forested regions of New Hampshire and Maine and the rocky and lake strewn areas of the latter State gave the pilots of the bombers and pursuit planes periods of undivided attention.

Bangor has a Mayor who believes in municipal landing fields and his city is one which meets all the requirements for bombers requiring large areas for landing and taking off. The knowledge of the landing field may have induced General William Mitchell, Assistant Chief of Operations, to choose it as the objective for the present manoeuvres.

The first group of the bombers arrived at the field about 5:30 P. M. (Standard Time), followed rapidly by the other groups and the De Havilands, the last of which came to a stop shortly after dark.

Major Day and most of the population of Bangor was on hand to welcome the "defenders." Long lines of automobiles dotted the roads leading to the fields just outside the city. The armada attracted persons from many miles around this section.

Spectators were impressed with the completeness with which the program for simulated war conditions had been carried out. Pup tents and tent equipment, cooking equipment and table ware, typewriters on which officers might grind the endless array of reports, and other requirements of a headquarters were unloaded from the interiors of the bombers.

Tomorrow morning General Mitchell will conduct a complete inspection of the air force just as though the officers and men were in their regular quarters. Bangor will play host to the armada probably until Wednesday when the bombardment group will break up into smaller groups which will proceed to various cities on the way back to Langley Field. The De Havilands will return to Mitchel Field in a day or two.

As indicating the interest among the public in the air force of our country, officers pointed to the requests which have flooded Washington and air stations to have bombers visit cities and towns. It was regarded by them as a happy omen that the United States might provide an air force which would measure up to the aerial branches of other nations.

Lands Dispatches at York Beach.

The plane brought dispatches for Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, Assistant Chief of the Air Service, who is now at York Harbor. General Mitchell is directing the New England Manoeuvres of the squadron.

All of the entries are from the Regular Army with the exception of First Lieutenant W. M. Outcalt of Cincinnati, who is assistant prosecuting attorney for Hamilton County.

Appropriations have not sufficed to provide satisfactory equipment in sufficient amounts to permit National Guard and reserve officers to undertake the training essential to preparation for these races. It is hoped that by next year the National Guard squadrons will be in such a state of development as to permit entries in the International air races.

"The full benefit of these events," said General Patrick, "can be attained only when they play a part in the training of the air service personnel of all components of the Army of the United States."

AIR MAIL TO COAST STARTS HERE TODAY

Plane Will Leave at 11 A. M. and Is Due at San Francisco Tomorrow at 3 P. M.

FIVE STOPS ON THE FLIGHT

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., Aug. 20.—The Post Office Department's experiment for five days with a coast-to-coast air mail service will begin tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, when a plane piloted by C. M. Johnson and carrying 22,000 letters, or 530 pounds of mail, will leave Curtiss Field, Garden City, for Chicago on the first leg of the relay trip to San Francisco. It is estimated that the mail will be delivered in San Francisco twenty-nine hours and fifteen minutes after it leaves Curtiss Field.

When Johnson reaches Cleveland, Arthur Smith will pilot the plane to Chicago. If Johnson's plane is not in shape for the remainder of the journey, the mail will be shifted to another machine and the trip continued. About the time Johnson starts from Garden City, another plane will leave San Francisco. It is thought that barring accidents, the two machines should pass each other about half way across the country, as the speed of the postal planes is about the same.

The country has been divided into three zones for the experiment, New York-Chicago, Chicago-Cheyenne and Cheyenne-San Francisco. The service will embrace stops at Cleveland, Chicago, Omaha, Salt Lake City and Reno, Nev. Officials of the air mail service said tonight that the aviators would be guided over the night routes by beacon lights from forty-two landing fields along the route. Extra planes will be held in readiness at each of these fields should the one in use be disabled.

The lights used at the various fields will be of 5,000,000 candle power which will be visible for about fifty miles. The night flights will be made over the territory between Chicago and Cheyenne, but the pilots, it was said, never would be out of sight of one of the lights of the landing stations.

During the last few weeks airplanes for the use of the Post Office Department's experiment have been shipped to the various landing fields. They are single-seated biplanes, each with capacity of about 500 pounds of mail and a general cruising speed of 100 miles an hour.

Officials pointed out that the night flying conditions in general are more favorable than those existing by day, because air "bumps" are eliminated by the dampness in the night atmosphere. Motors also run more smoothly because of the increase in oxygen and moisture in the air.

It was said that the mail destined for San Francisco should be delivered there about 3 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon. Mail for delivery by this service will be received like all other air mail matter and must be so designated. It will be brought here by train from the Pennsylvania Station, arriving at 10:40 o'clock, twenty minutes before Johnson is scheduled to start.

HONOR AMERICAN MISSION.

Colombians Banquet Envoys Who Reformed Country's Finances.

BOGOTA, Colombia, Aug. 20.—Having completed the reorganization of Colombia's financial system, the American financial mission is about to return to the United States. A farewell banquet was tendered them by President Nel Ospina, attended by the Cabinet members, Supreme Court Justices, the Presidents of the Senate and Chamber and State and municipal officials.

President Ospina presented the members of the mission with commemorative medals.

Professor E. W. Kemmerer of Princeton University, who headed the mission, responding to the speeches of the Colombians, said:

"As a citizen of the United States and as a servant and sincere friend of Colombia, I propose a toast to the two flags which adorn this hall. Their use here together symbolizes the unperishing amity of the two nations."

CHRISTIANS DRIVEN OUT OF ANATOLIA

Turks Round Up All Greeks and Armenians Remaining in the Country.

ATHENS, Aug. 20.—All the Greeks and Armenians remaining in the interior of Anatolia are now being rounded up by the Turkish authorities for deportation, Greek Government advices say.

The Armenians are being deported into Russia while the Greeks probably will be taken to Samsoun and thence to Aleppe. Twenty thousand Armenians already have reached the Anatolian border near Erivan, where an American medical supply unit has been dispatched by the Near East Relief.

PARIS BARRED FILM UNDER AN OLD DECREE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 20.—The interdiction of D. W. Griffith's film—announced in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday—caused great surprise both among the public and in the film world, the police action being treated in many quarters as somewhat arbitrary, because the film had been regularly passed by the censorship and had been showing several days without provoking any incidents whatsoever.

Some amusement has been caused, too, by the fact that the interdiction was based on the decree of the Consuls of the Twelfth Messidor, year seven of the Republic," and a law dated Aug. 6, 1790, empowering the police Prefect to forbid any show in Paris on his own discretion.

It appears the action must be explained as forming part of the recent campaign to protect colored French citizens from insult and to protect their rights. Parts of the Griffith film deal with the slave question, and it was feared in official quarters that there might be demonstrations here.

One evening paper humorously remarks: "Certainly it is quite right that colored Frenchmen should receive all protection. But French 'paisfaces' also have some rights."

DEFER CHANNEL SWIM.

Weather Conditions Impel Contestants to Wait for Change.

DOVER, England, Aug. 20 (Associated Press).—Conditions today were dead against swimming in the English Channel, and Charles Toth of Boston again was obliged to call off the start of his proposed swim to the French Coast.

Fred Record and Frank Perks, Englishmen, who also were to start the long swim today, decided to wait for more favorable conditions.

FOLKESTONE, England, Aug. 20.—Miss Zetta Hillis, the British woman who three years ago nearly succeeded in crossing the English Channel on a watercycle, this morning began an attempt to swim to the French side, but owing to the rough sea gave up when six miles out.

ROME, Aug. 20.—Enrique Tirabocchi, the Italian swimmer from the Argentine who recently swam the English Channel, arrived here today and was enthusiastically greeted by representatives of various sporting clubs. He was later received by Premier Mussolini, who said he was pleased to congratulate him personally on his achievement, which had given further lustre to the name of Italy in the sporting world.

Not on Wrecked Plane, He Says.

Robert Dewey, a guest at the Great Northern Hotel, said yesterday that he was not a passenger in the seaplane which was forced to descend into the ocean six miles off Coney Island while on its way to the Naval Air Station at Rockaway, Sunday afternoon. It had been reported that Mr. Dewey, with the pilot, had been rescued by fishermen and later taken on a Coast Guard motorboat.

Are your business deals mere guessing contests?

LABOR cost is the dominant factor in every contract—the highest figure in any estimate. Unless this item is accurate, the most carefully computed bid is but a hopeful guess.

How do you determine production costs, in this highly competitive era, when possible extinction confronts the manufacturer who cannot figure expenses to the last decimal place?

Yesterday, perhaps, you lost a valuable contract because the item of labor made your bid too high. Today, possibly, you discover that production is picking up and you could have gotten the contract at a profit. Tomorrow you may close a promising deal and find your margin of safety inadequate.

Only when every employee gives whole-hearted co-operation, day in and day out, can you estimate correctly your labor charges. Only when you can count absolutely on their unwavering loyalty can you confidently compete for contracts.

A valuable booklet, "Stopping Payroll Losses," will be sent industrial executives gratis, on request. Please address Dept. L-18.

LOUVRE TO ALLOW TEST OF PAINTING

Experts Will Compare Mrs. Hahn's "Belle Ferronniere" With the Museum's.

ONLY JURY TO BE PRESENT

It Will Consist of Experts Who Are Not Attached to the Staff of the Louvre.

PARIS, Aug. 20 (Associated Press).—Permission will be granted Mrs. Andrée Hahn to compare her painting, "La Belle Ferronnière" with Leonardo da Vinci's recognized original hanging in the Louvre, according to a statement made by officials of the museum today, although no formal request for the comparison has as yet been received.

The rules governing the Louvre explicitly forbid the experts attached to the institution from giving opinions relative to the genuineness of any painting not forming part of the collection; consequently they must remain entirely neutral. The confrontation will take place in the private office of Curator Demonts, to obviate a large gathering of curious art dealers, and only the experts appointed to compare the pictures will be present.

The Louvre experts, while forbidden to give an opinion on outside paintings, are sanguine that "La Belle Ferronnière now in the Louvre is the original. It formerly hung in the Palace at Fountainebleau, but when royalty removed to Versailles the art treasures followed. Later Louis XIV., visiting Fountainebleau, was struck by the denuded appearance of the walls of the former palace, and ordered distinguished painters to make copies of all the pictures removed from the palace a century before.

This was done, in some instances two or three copies being made and transported back to Fountainebleau. These pictures, with the exception of five which now hang in the Louvre, all disappeared at the time of the French Revolution. The copies in the Louvre look like the originals, as the same methods were used in mixing the colors and the canvases now are cracked by age.

Officials of the Louvre express the opinion that the paintings purporting to be old masters which are cropping up from time to time originated in the Fountainebleau collection of copies. In the case of "La Belle Ferronniere," it is said, two copies were made, one of which was by one of the most prominent French painters of the seventeenth century. The Louvre experts say this painting would be likely to fool many experienced persons as well as the uninitiated.

Two international authorities have declared that Mrs. Andrée Hahn's "La Belle Ferronnière" was not an original Leonardo. Sir Joseph Duveen, senior member of Duveen Brothers, art dealers, was reported in a New York newspaper in November, 1921, as stating that the canvas was a copy of the one hanging in the Louvre. Mrs. Hahn brought suit for $500,000 damages against Sir Joseph, on the ground that his alleged opinion had prevented her from completing a sale of the painting to the Kansas City Art Institute.

Sir Charles John Holmes, Curator of the National Gallery, London, regarded as one of the greatest living authorities on Leonardo's work in July, 1922, further attacked the authenticity of Mrs. Hahn's painting. Sir Charles said it was a copy of the Louvre original, and not an Italian one, at that. He said it had the characteristics of a much later period in pigment and cracks and also in style. "There is no technical resemblance to the Italian work of the year 1500," said the expert. "It is done in the manner of the paintings of the northern part of Europe, either of France or the Netherlands. If I were asked to state exactly the time at which it was produced I should say without hesitation that it was in the early part of the nineteenth century."

Mrs. Hahn is the wife of an American aviation officer who served in France.

STEEL MILLS DRAW LABOR.

Eight-Hour Day Attracts Many Workers From Other Industries.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 20.—The new eight-hour day in the steel mills is attracting workmen who have never had any connection with the industry, and mill managers and employment agents today were predicting that it would not be long until the labor shortage indicated last week would be overcome and all the plants would be in full operation on the three-shift schedule.

So many men were asking for jobs, it was stated, that no serious interference with production, because of the short day, was now expected. The applicants were attracted by the fifty cents an hour offered to laborers under the new plan.

After a conference of Carnegie Steel Company operating officials, it was announced that all departments affected by the eight-hour day would be in operation tomorrow, some 20,000 men being affected.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Aug. 20.—The tube mill of the Republic Iron and Steel Company closed last week by a walk-out of workers who were dissatisfied because their ten-hour day had not been reduced, nor their wages raised, was operating again today with a force said by the management to be about 75 per cent. of normal.

The management also said that sentiment among the men seemed to be changing and that they appeared to be willing now to wait until the eight-hour shift reached their department in the progressive change now being made.

CIRCUS "BLUE MAN" DIES.

Fred Walters, 68 years old, the "blue man" of many side shows throughout the country, died of heart trouble yesterday in Bellevue Hospital. He became ill on Aug. 13 while appearing at Dreamland, Coney Island, and was taken to Bellevue by his wife, Elsie, also a side show performer.

An autopsy performed by Dr. Douglas Symmers, director of laboratories at Bellevue, showed that the blue coloring which covered Walters's body was due to argyria, or chronic silver poisoning, brought on presumably by absorbing nitrate of silver over a long period. Bellevue authorities declared it the most remarkable case of its kind ever brought to their attention.

At one time Mr. Walters was a captain in the English Army. In India his horse fell on him, sending him to a hospital for four months. Following his recovery his skin began to turn blue. He came to this country in 1891. Since that time he had appeared with several circuses. He was married thirteen years ago in London. He is survived by his wife and a daughter 6 years old. The funeral will be held tomorrow.

HAD BEEN DEAD A MONTH.

Achimore, Whose Body Was Found Sunday, to Be Buried Tomorrow.

Funeral services for Alexander F. Achimore, whose body was found Sunday in a house near Rockland Lake and who was formerly an engineer for the Western Union Telegraph Company, will be held Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock in St. Peter's Church, Haverstraw, N. Y.

According to the undertaker to whom the body was consigned by the Coroner of Rockland County, the man had been dead for more than a month. Burial will be in St. Peter's Cemetery, Haverstraw.

11TH CENTURY ART FOUND IN MOSCOW

WONDERFUL RESTORATIONS

Colors of Pictures Brought Out as Clearly as When They Were Painted 900 Years Ago.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, Aug. 18.—It is expected that new light on the history and development of European art will be thrown by the restoration of and research among ancient ikons now being carried on in the Winter Garden of the Kremlin Palace.

The experts engaged in the work say that they have discovered the sources of the inspiration of the Italian primitives who laid the foundation of Western art in perfect specimens of Byzantine art dating as far back as the eleventh century, such as hitherto have not been known to exist anywhere.

When the work began, soon after the revolution, the experts were confronted with a heterogeneous mass of ikons varying in size from a few inches square to six feet by four, the figures being uniformly covered, except the hands and faces, with sheets of gold or silver shaped and worked to imitate robes. These covers were comparatively recent innovations; but when they were removed it was found that the painting beneath was little less darkened by age than the hands and faces.

The experts, however, were able to make a rough classification, and then, about two years ago, began the more delicate work of restoration. For this were chosen leading physicists and chemists, who gradually developed a process which brought back the original tints without injuring the surface. These experts impress most strongly upon the visitor that throughout the work no speck of new color or pigment has been used; it is restoration in the full sense of the word.

Roughly speaking, the process is this: They spread oil over the surface and then scrape it very gently with a knife. Then they wipe the surface, apply more oil and scrape again. Sometimes four or five different coats of oil are applied.

It was in the course of this work that a wonderful thing happened. The experts found that, instead of one picture, the same panel (all Russian ikons are painted on wood) often held two, three or even four, concealed beneath centuries of dirt and smoke from the countless candles burned before them.

Thus, beneath sixteenth, fourteenth and thirteenth century pictures, each entirely different and superimposed like palimpsest manuscript, there finally came to light pure Byzantine work of the eleventh century, 400 years before the Eastern capital fell into the hands of the Turks. It was unfortunately necessary to destroy the upper layers to reveal the original in as bright, fresh colors as on the day it was painted, but the experts believe that the sacrifice was worth while.

There is a head, for instance, of an unknown saint—Byzantine work, certainly not later than the eleventh century—whose draftsmanship, technique and color scheme are wholly modern. The expression of the features bears little resemblance to that found in the work of the Italian primitives and may almost be said to represent a unique survival of the lost pictorial art of Greece. The type of face, however, is unmistakably Russian, which suggests that the Byzantine artist worked here or on order from a Russian model.

In other pictures it is seen that the original bright-colored robes have been painted over in brown or dun color, but have kept the same form: Thus there is a full-length figure of Christ, at first reckoned to be of the fourteenth century and finally referred to the early part of the twelfth, with a vivid white gold-trimmed robe instead of the untrimmed brown smock.

None of the pictures is signed with the artist's name, but the majority have the name of a saint in gold letters in a corner.

When the restoration is complete the ikons will be replaced in the Kremlin churches, which are no longer used for religious services and henceforth will be one of the world's most interesting art museums.

LAWYER KILLED BY GAS.

George H. Paine Found Dead in His Room.

Reputed to be a member of a prominent New York family and wealthy in his own right, George H. Paine, a lawyer, 55 years old, was found dead from gas yesterday afternoon in a furnished room at 348 West Twentieth Street. The police and the Medical Examiner's office declared death was accidental.

An odor of gas was traced to Paine's room and Paine was found lying on a bed with gas escaping from a jet above him. A window was open, but it had provided little draft. The police believe that as Paine turned out the light before stretching out for a rest he knocked the other connection loose.

Numerous manuscripts of stories based on hunting and fishing trips, apparently written by Paine, were found in his room, as well as papers referring to the Fur, Fins and Feather Club. Miss Frances H. Beard of 18 West 104th Street, who said she was Mr. Paine's secretary, called at the West Thirteenth Street Police Station when she learned of his death. She said that he was wealthy. No relatives were reached last night.

MRS. DREXEL GETS $87,000.

Court Orders Bonds Held by Gould Executors Be Given to Her.

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 20.—Chancellor Walker today issued an order directing that bonds valued at $87,000, held by the executors of the George J. Gould estate, be turned over to Mrs. Marjorie Gould Drexel, daughter of George J. Gould.

Kingdon Gould and Schuyler Nielson Rice, executors of the estate, had refused to give the securities to Mrs. Drexel without a court order. The securities involved were purchased by George J. Gould from proceeds of the sale of the former Gould home at 1,015 Fifth Avenue, New York. Gould had made his daughter a wedding gift of this home in 1910. He sold the home as a trustee of the property of his ter and bought the securities with the proceeds in 1919.

FEDERAL AID GIVEN IN FIGHT ON KLAN

Post Office Inspectors at Macon Join in Search for Mail Truck Assailants.

OHIOANS WAR ON SECRECY

Steubenville City Council Prepares to Pass Anti-Ku Klux Ordinance.

MACON, Ga., Aug. 20.—Acting on information obtained from the three Hudson brothers, arrested last night in the act of flogging two negroes, the police announced tonight that they were preparing to round up an organized band of floggers which has been terrorizing Macon for several weeks.

The authorities also announced that the Hudsons said they and the other members of the band were being financed by an organization. The name was not disclosed.

"We expect to make other arrests within forty-eight hours," said Sheriff J. B. Hicks Jr. "We are trying to bring out of those men the names of those who we believe financed their operations," the Sheriff declared. "It seems almost certain that others supplied the money and issued orders for the operations of the gang."

The Federal Government entered the case today when postoffice inspectors joined forces with the city to apprehend gangsters who held up a mail motor truck on Saturday and attempted to take Charley Mike, negro, from the vehicle for the purpose of whipping him. The driver today was unable to identify the automobile used by the three Hudsons when they were caught last night.

During the last fortnight several men have been whipped and ordered to leave town and at intervals during the last six months scores of men have been flogged. Early Saturday the police engaged in a running pistol battle with alleged floggers after they had kidnapped a man.

R. A. Hartley, who was flogged last week, was sent to jail today on a writ of lunacy. His brother is also being held on the same charge. The whipping and consequent fright are blamed by Hartley for his brother's condition.

Governor Walker announced today that he did not see any present necessity for martial law in Macon, and the Adjutant General, who was sent here by the Governor, has returned to Atlanta. The Governor made it plain, however, that if it became necessary he is prepared to call out the State militia and to place Macon under military law.

Ready to Call Troops in Georgia.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 20.—Governor Walker has offered to call out the National Guard to check lawlessness in Bibb County whenever the local officials feel that additional forces are needed and has received assurances from Sheriff James Hicks in Macon that such a call will be made if an emergency develops, it was announced at the executive department today.

Tells of Murder and Kidnapping.

NEWMAN, Ga., Aug. 20.—John W. Minter, father-in-law of Millard Trouton, who was kidnapped and killed a fortnight ago, tonight made a confession, the police announced, to having slain Trouton.

Minter told the police he shot Trouton after he had been kidnapped by Minter's friends for that purpose.

Eight men who are being held in connection with the case are involved in the confession, the police said. Ben Freeman, one of the men held, was a victim of circumstances, Minter claims, in that he happened to be in company with W. M. Feltman at the time.

Feltman, according to the confession, was to receive $15 for decoying Trouton into the hands of the kidnapping band.

EAU GALLIE, Fla., Aug. 20.—G. A. Davis, who was removed from the county jail last night by five masked and robed men, who obtained keys to the jail when they overpowered a Deputy Sheriff on the street, returned to the jail this morning.

Jail officials did not issue any statement beyond saying that Davis was uninjured. Davis had been arrested on a charge of non-support.

Trailing Floggers in Texas.

Special to The New York Times.

HOUSTON, Texas, Aug. 20.—State Rangers, seeking evidence against wielders of the lash in three widely separated Texas towns, continud their investigations today and Governor Pat Neff, back from his extended Northern trip, declared flogging inquiries instituted during his absence will be continued.

Ranger Captains Aldrich and Nichols, conducting the Port Arthur inquiry, arrived in Beaumont this afternoon, presumably to present their findings to the Grand Jury, which reconvened today.

At Amarillo Sheriff Whitaker of Potter County, charged with complicity in the flogging of E. T. McDonald, railroad worker, demanded an immediate examining trial. Whitaker is under bond, but still functions as Sheriff of his county. Ranger Captain Hamer is at Amarillo.

Ohioans to Fight Klan Secrecy.

STUBENVILLE, Ohio, Aug. 20.—City and county officials, far from being thrown off guard by the truce which has existed for several days between Klansmen and the thousands of persons here opposed to the "Invisible Empire," are taking every precaution to prevent a recurrence of the rioting of last Wednesday night, which would need but little provocation on either side to flare up again.

To prevent as far as possible a recurrence of the trouble, an ordinance to prohibit the holding of secret meetings without a permit issued by the Mayor will come before the City Council tomorrow night and undoubtedly will be adopted quickly.

Another development that already is causing uneasiness among the more timid here is the announcement that the Klan will have a Mayoralty candidate in the coming Fall election.

Last Wednesday night's rioting, in which three men were shot and seriously injured, dozens beaten and several automobiles destroyed, was precipitated by the primary election of the previous Monday, when Mayor Hawkins, a candidate for re-election, triumphed over the representative of the "Invisible Empire" who sought the office.

Anti-Klan feeling here has so wrought up the members of the Ku Klux Klan that they are determined to put a straight ticket in the field at the municipal election in November. They declare that less than 60 per cent. of the vote was accounted for at last Monday's primary, when Mayor Hawkins won over Albert Smith, a high school teacher, with a majority of 607 votes out of 2,186 ballots cast.

Under a recent Ohio law Smith will not be permitted to run for office at the election on an independent ticket, but any other eligible candidate may run and the situation here is said to be such that the Klan will certainly have candidates in the field for the city offices.

The proposed city ordinance to make unlawful the holding of any meetings without consent of the city authorities, unless too drastic will undoubtedly pass council. Just how far the city fathers will go in restricting meetings or gatherings is not known and considerable friction is looked for. Mayor Hawkins is known to favor the ordinance.

While men known to be identified with the Klan freely express the opinion that any further attack on members of their organization will bring down the wrath of Governor Donahey, no word has has reached this city that would indicate any interference on the part of the Governor so long as the city and county officials are able to maintain order.

It became known today that Klan detectives, imported here recently from Columbus and Pittsburgh, have been busy investigating last Wednesday's riots, with the result that criminal information will probably be lodged against a dozen or more residents of this city, charging them with starting the riot and wrecking the cars of the visiting Klansmen. The charges, it is understood, will be made in the names of Klansmen from East Liverpool, Ohio; Chester, W. V., and Wierton, W. Va., who made up the party attacked during the riot.

If the charges are made prior to Sept. 10 they will probably come before the Grand Jury that will be called to investigate the riots, authorities here explained.

Klan Warns Marion Officials.

Special to The New York Times.

MARION, Ill., Aug. 20.—The Rev. William Lowery of Carterville, addressing a meeting of citizens on the Marion Public Square this morning arranged by the local chapter of the Ku Klux Klan, said that the Sheriff, State's Attorney and Circuit Judge had better perform their duty in law enforcement, because "if you don't something is going to happen," and referring to the Herrin massacre, said "that little mine trouble out there will be but a drop in the bucket as compared to it."

The meeting, which was attended by about 2,000 persons, blocked all traffic on the public square and was addressed by pastors from all over the county. With the Sheriff's office as a background and a lone American flag waving, the speakers denounced Sheriff Galligan.

Police Chief Apologizes.

Special to The New York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio, Aug. 20.—Police Chief R. E. O'Brien apologized this evening to thirteen local patriotic organizations as a result of the American flag and the Bible being taken into the jail in an alleged improper manner several weeks ago, when seventy-two members of the Ku Klux Klan were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct as they were returning from the funeral of a member.

The Chief states that no insult was intended and that in the future when ordering arrests of citizens who are carrying the American flag or the Bible he will see to it that the flag and the Bible are fully protected from any misuse.

Edward James, Chairman of the committee of the thirteen organizations, and S. R. Naille, representing the disabled war veterans, announced that the apology would be accepted and that the patriotic organizations would withdraw their charges against the Chief and members of the force making the arrests.

Resolutions adopted by the organizations and demanding the resignation of City Manager Will Mahoney, for not dismissing the Chief and the arresting officers, were to have been presented to the City Commissioners at a meeting tonight.

It is expected that the affidavits against the seventy-two Klansmen will be withdrawn when their cases are recalled in Police Court on Aug. 28.

Deputy Sheriff Accused in Flogging.

TULSA, Ok., Aug. 20.—Marshall Moore, a Special Deputy Sheriff and son of a prominent dairyman living near Broken Arrow, tonight was formally charged with participation in the whipping of Leonard Bagby near Broken Bow on July 14, 1920. Moore also was formally charged on Saturday with implication in the flogging of J. S. Lawhorn, a merchant at Jenks, on June 4, 1922.

The information against Moore in the Bagby case was signed by the victim, who, it is understood, identified Moore.

Roland C. Ragle, employe of a local oil refinery, was still held by the military authorities tonight, but no charges had been filed against him. Ragle, who was arrested on Saturday at Fort Scott, Kan., is understood to be detained in connection with the flogging of Nathan Hantaman.

The filing of charges against Moore in connection with the Bagby whipping more than three years ago bore out Adjt. Gen. Markham's declaration that the State's investigation was being broadened to include a score of mob floggings.

RUMANIA GETS BIG LEGACY.

BUCHAREST, Aug. 20 (Jewish Telegraphic Agency)—A bequest of 1,000,000,000 lei (about $5,500,000) left by Jacques Elias, a Jewish millionaire, for Rumanian cultural and charitable purposes has been formally handed over to the Rumanian Academy, and the distribution of the fund will be started in October.

None of the heirs appealed against the will.

day Justice Seeger granted the motion for the minutes. At the close of a lengthy argument Judge Cardozo ruled: "I am quite satisfied that I ought not to grant a stay. I am disposed to think the Special Term of the Supreme Court (presided over by Justice Seeger) had jurisdiction. I cannot exclude from my mind utterly, even on the merits, the belief that your position, Mr. O'Neill, is wrong. I have much doubt that there is anything the Court of Appeals could review if a stay were granted. The Special Term has made a decision, for better or worse, and it is made. There is nothing I can do now and there is nothing to stay. It is not within my power to give the stay."

Previously Mr. O'Neill had said that if the defense obtained the minutes "the ends of justice would be defeated" but Judge Cardozo cut him off on this line of argument by reminding him that the question did not enter into the situation of the moment. Allan R. Campbell of counsel for Ward said that the defense wanted to see the minutes because they wanted to know whether there was enough evidence before the Grand Jury to warrant its indictment of murder in the first degree.

The minutes comprised 1,038 typewritten pages and covered the testimony of seventy-two persons, among whom were forty new witnesses. In the investigation of the first Grand Jury that undertook the case only thirty-two witnesses were heard.

When Ward was informed in the jail at White Plains yesterday that the minutes had become available to him, he said, "I expected that. They couldn't deny me the right to the evidence so that I might prepare my defense."

It was said last night in White Plains that if the indictment were dismissed the Attorney General would seek a superseding indictment on a lesser degree of homicide. Many taxpayers were said to have taken a stand against further large outlays of money, the investigation already having cost Westchester County almost $50,000.

FRENCH HIGHWAYS IMPRESS ROUNTREE

Good Roads Expert Would Adopt Similar System in the United States.

APPROVES 3-ROAD PLAN

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—J. A. Rountree, Director General of the American Good Roads Association, is taking back to the United States a mass of valuable information on Europe's road systems which he has gathered in a three months' tour through France, Switzerland, Italy and Germany.

Everywhere, he says, he has received the greatest help from government officials and they have shown keen interest in America's road problems.

Mr. Rountree traveled right through the war region and was greatly impressed by the Chemin des Dames in the Marne region. It was constructed magnificently in Napoleon's time and was in the war of incalculable value to the French as one of the main arteries between Paris and the front.

"But there was another side to this," said Mr. Rountree. "Its material was quarried from the neighboring hills and these quarries formed one of the Germans' chief strongholds."

This "ladies' road" is built on a foundation of from eighteen to twenty-four inches of broken rock and Mr. Rountree laid stress on the necessity of increasing the amount of road material used in America. Generally, he explained, American engineers were content with from three to five inches of broken stone, with the result that heavy traffic destroys the roads. He found the modern French method was to lay from six to twelve inches of rock in cement and to surface it with either asphalt or dirt as required, and he advocates that method now."

Mr. Rountree was also impressed by the so-called double roads in France. There are in many places three roads side by side, one for heavy traffic automobiles and trucks, another for farmers with horses and carts and the third for pedestrians and bicycles. Lines of shade trees separate them and each can be surfaced in the manner most suitable for its purpose.

Another point in the French system also appealed to Mr. Rountree, the division of roads in three classes. France has its national roads, its district roads and its local roads. The first are maintained by the national Government, the second by the departments and the third by the Communes.

A system such as this, Mr. Rountree thinks, should be introduced into America. It would solve the difficult problem of who is to pay for maintenance of the great arterial roads and would also prevent congressional grants being expended on fragmentary stretches of roads without ever making one great national highway.

Mr. Rountree will spend a fortnight looking into the English situation and sail for home Sept. 1.

BESSIE CLAYTON'S ALIMONY.

Julian Mitchell Agrees to Pay Her $14,000 if She Gets Decree.

Bessie Clayton, famous as a toe dancer in the days of Weber and Fields, who is suing Julian Mitchell for divorce, has agreed with her husband on the financial settlement to be made if the decree is granted.

They were married in 1904 and have a daughter, Priscilla, who is now 21. Mitchell owns a large estate at Long Beach on which there are two fine homes, both facing Norwood Avenue and a block apart. Mitchell lives in one with his daughter and his wife occupies the other.

By stipulations filed in the Court of Chancery, Jersey City, yesterday, Mitchell agrees to pay to his wife $1,000 upon the execution of releases, and if a final decree is entered in her favor he agrees to pay and she agrees to accept $13,000 at the rate of $1,000 a month in discharge of all claims. It is provided that when any one of the payments falls due and the playwright is out of a job he shall have twenty days' grace.

Mrs. Mitchell agrees to execute and deliver to the Commercial Trust Company of Jersey City as escrow nine separate releases of her dower in the properties owned by Mitchell and a general release in favor of her daughter.

Rescuers Battle Current and Recover Body Before It Goes Over the Falls.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Mrs. Charles E. Watson of Niagara Falls, Ontario, this afternoon climbed over the railing at the Canadian Power Plant above the Falls and leaped to death in the water.

Despite the terrific current, rescuers got her body out before it went over the Falls. She was about 30 years old and leaves a husband and three small children. She had been ill for some time and was very despondent, her relatives said.

JOHNS GASOLINE WAR.

Governor Bryan Threatens to Force Lower Prices in Nebraska.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—With the gasoline war still sputtering in spots from Seattle to the Gulf, Governor Charles Bryan of Nebraska injected a little more pep into the price rebellion today by threatening to take the same action with reference that Governor McMaster of South Dakota did with gas in that State.

In the meanwhile, Governor Nestos of North Dakota came forward with the charge that both the Standard and independent oil companies are following a system akin to the Pittsburgh plus plan by adding an arbitrary freight charge to the price of gasoline, irrespective of the locality and the cost of delivery.

"Crude oil has not fallen in price as it should," Governor Nestos announced, after issuing a warning to the various oil companies. "It appears some one has the market cornered and there should be a Federal investigation."

A sweeping investigation of the oil situation in Texas was demanded in a petition filed with the Railroad Commission at Austin by State Representative W. C. Morgan, who charged that the independent producers were forced to submit to marketing methods and prices dictated by the large producers and refiners.

Sixteen-cent gasoline reached Seattle, but the reduction was not general. Officials of the big companies charged that certain smaller dealers were selling at cost "merely for advertising purposes." Standard Union and Shell stations were quoting the price of 15 cents a gallon.

In South Dakota, where the war started, the public was presented with the problem of patronizing independent dealers at from 19½ to 20 cents a gallon or buying it from the "trust" stations at 15½ to 16 cents a gallon.

NATURAL VISION PICTURE.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Seven years' work came to a successful end tonight in the Essanay studio at 1,345 Argyle Street, and the moving picture world is to be thrilled by a new discovery, the capture of the third dimension. It is the natural vision picture, claims its inventor, George K. Spoor, head of the famous pioneer company. Robbed of technical terms, it is the application of the theory of the stereopticon to the movies.

Twenty and one-half feet by forty stood the screen on which Mr. Spoor and his assistant inventor and technician, P. J. Berggran, threw the test pictures whose lights and shadows are estimated to have cost the producer over $1,000,000.

The screen will fill the proscenium arch of the largest theatre and will hold the most grandiose production. On it, through the stereoption process, the actors are given form and body, the background is given depth, the whole picture gains atmosphere. Two lenses cast two pictures in one on a film, each separate "frame" of which is half again as high and twice as wide as the "frame" of ordinary film. The printing appliances, the projection apparatus are entirely new, built especially to fit this larger film.

Before the screen are strung seven and one-half miles of black thread to serve as a breaking surface, where virtually the picture floats, solidly, not flat, before the eyes.

Close-ups will be no more. There will be no "cuts" back and forth. Instead, the picture will unfold itself as if really viewed by the human eye. The bugbear of distortion has been conquered and a seat at one side or close to the screen does not spoil the third dimensional effect nor strain the eyes.

100 DETECTIVES FAIL IN BABY SEARCH

morning in the hope that the kidnapper or a confederate would put little Lillian back at a favorable opportunity. Visitors to the store were requested not to gather around the carriage and an effort was made to keep the vehicle in plain view from both ends of the block. At the request of McKenzie, who is a foreman for S. B. Sofield & Sons, truckmen at 540 Canal Street, and who lives at 294 West Twelfth Street, no detectives were assigned to watch the carriage, so that there would be no interference with the possible return of the child through that means. McKenzie stationed himself for the entire day and most of last night at a telephone in the office of his employers, hoping at any minute to receive a message over the wire where his child could be found.

Many of McKenzie's fellow-employes spent the day making inquiries in tenements and boarding houses in the vicinity of the McKenzie home for any bit of information that might lead to the recovery of the child. The work of these men was supplemented by chauffeurs and truck drivers who live on the lower west side.

The mother of the stolen baby suffered a complete breakdown in the forenoon because of lack of sleep since the child was taken from the baby carriage in front of McCrory's store while she and her six-year-old son were inside. At dawn yesterday she managed to elude relatives who were guarding her in her home and started a lone hunt for Lillian through the streets in the vicinity, but friends intercepted her after she had traveled a few blocks and took her back to her apartment. It was shortly after this incident that Mrs. McKenzie becoming hysterical with despair, threw herself on a couch and finally lapsed into semi-consciousness.

Captain William H. Funston, head of the detectives in the Second Detective Division, which includes the entire west side, announced during the day at his headquarters in the West Thirtieth Street Station that every policeman in the district also had received special instructions to be on the alert for any information that might aid in the recovery of the child. He added that the policemen had made many reports during the day, but after detectives had been assigned to investigate each of them the child was found not to be Lillian.

Last night Captain Funston said that the case was remarkable in that no anonymous letters had been received by the police, as is usual in kidnapping cases. He said that it was possible that one or more persons might have seen the kidnapper take Lillian from the carriage in front of the store and feared to inform the police about the matter. "We have to move quickly on this case to save the baby's life," Captain Funston said, "and if there is anybody who can aid us by giving a description of the person who took the infant he or she should come forward as soon as possible. If witnesses to the kidnapping do not want to become publicly identified with the hunt for the child they can write to me at my headquarters, 134 West Thirtieth Street, and I shall hold their information in the strictest confidence. If they should desire to write an anonymous letter to me I request that they give every detail of the description of the person they saw taking the child. Only the mother knew how to feed that child, and if she is not returned soon there is no doubt the infant will die."

The police said that the kidnapping was one of the most baffling with which they had had to deal in many years. They pointed out that because of the large number of women who were in the vicinity of the store when the baby was taken from her carriage it was hardly likely that any of the women would have paid any particular attention to the kidnapper as she made off with the child. They are convinced that a woman or a grown-up girl took the child. They said that were a man to be seen with a child in the vicinity some of the women visitors to the store undoubtedly would have noticed the incident.

The police admitted that they were making every effort to locate a woman wearing a polka-dot dress, who on Saturday was observed by Mrs. McKenzie to approach Lillian's carriage in front of McCrory's store, and previously near another store on Sixth Avenue, around the corner. When forty hours of continuous search had not produced any clue yesterday forenoon, the father of the child visited the shrine of St. Anthony in St. Veronica's Roman Catholic Church in Christopher Street near his home and, after praying for some time, lit a candle in solicitation of the saint's aid in the search for Lillian.

The policemen Union Hill, N. J., entered the hunt for the kidnapper of the little girl in the morning, when George Stahl and Michael O'Connell, compositors employed by The Hudson Dispatch there, told of seeing a woman acting suspiciously with a child before dawn yesterday morning. They said they were passing Nano's Hotel in Bergenline Avenue when they saw a young woman come out with a baby in her arms, and hurry across the street to a black automobile.

The two men said that the car whisked off before they could get a good look at the young woman, who had averted her face from the time she hurried out of the hotel entrance. They added that the child in the woman's arms was wrapped in a pink blanket such as that in which Mrs. McKenzie had wrapped her daughter. The woman looked to be about 30 years old. Stahl told Motorcycle Policeman Allen, to whom he first reported his suspicions, she wore a black silk hat and a white dress.

He accompanied the policeman in the motorcycle side car on a tour of the city in the hope of getting a trace of the woman or the automobile in which she left the hotel. Every policeman with whom they came in contact also was enlisted in the search for the woman and the automobile, but at a late hour last night no trace of them had been picked up.

WAWA HOTEL DEATHS ESTIMATED AT 11

Twenty-Five Were Injured in Fire That Destroyed Canadian Lake Resort.

MANY OF DEAD EMPLOYES

They Were Trapped in Their Tower Quarters and Could Not Escape From Roofs.

HUNTSVILLE, Ont., Aug. 20.—The bodies of eleven persons, all women, had been recovered tonight from the ashes of the Wawa Hotel, in Muskoka, which was destroyed by fire on Sunday night. Eight of these, including three Americans, had been positively identified. Three others were reported missing, and five sustained injuries from which they may die, while twenty who were being cared for in hospitals were said to be out of danger.

The hotel, which was filled to capacity with Summer vacationists, a majority from the United States, had just quieted down after the Saturday night festivities when the fire, caused either by a carelessly thrown cigarette or by friction in an elevator shaft, broke out and swept through the wooden building, fanned by a strong wind.

By the time the guests, who an hour or two before had been dancing in the ballroom, playing cards or billiards, or strolling through the grounds, were awakened the flames had gained such headway that they were sweeping up the elevator shafts once stairways as if driven by a giant bellows. A majority of those in the hotel were women, who, half crazed by the roar of the fire and the red glare which lighted up the whole countryside, rushed screaming to the windows when they found the stairs and elevator shafts in flames.

Hotel employes and residents in nearby cottages who had hurried to the scene, lifted ladders to many of the windows, and scores were saved in this way, while others slid down ropes. Many, however, driven by the flames, jumped to the ground, receiving broken bones and cuts.

Several of those killed were employes who had rooms in the tower. Finding themselves cut off by the flames, they climbed to the roof. A few jumped and were seriously injured or killed. The others went down into the flames when the tower collapsed.

Inspectors from Toronto were still trying tonight to ascertain the cause of the fire, while volunteer firemen were searching the smoldering mass of wreckage, hunting every corner to make sure that no bodies had been missed.

Known dead are:

ALEXANDER, MRS. JAMES, employe, Toronto.
LEE, MISS ANNIE, Toronto.
KROGAN, MRS. Elisabeth, Cleveland, Ohio.
CARROLL, MISS ANNIE, Toronto.
BERMANDA, MISS PHYLLIS, employe, Thoroid, Ont.
Three unidentified bodies.

DR. STOKES and daughter, United States.

The seriously injured are:

FARRELL, MISS E., address unknown, condition dangerous.
DUNCAN, MRS. H., Hamilton, Ont., burns.
SIMPSON, MISS BEULAH, Toronto, injured back.

Most of the twenty-five injured were hurt in leaps from windows, though a few suffered burns before they could escape.

The cause of the fire continued a mystery today. One theory was that it was caused by a carelessly thrown cigarette stub. The other was that friction in the elevator shaft ignited the lubricating grease.

Whatever the cause the flames spread with astounding rapidity through the structure, and in little more than an hour the smart hotel was a smouldering pile of embers in which stood a series of open stone fireplaces which had been one of the chief attractions of the hotel.

Fire Marshal E. P. Heaton has sent a half dozen inspectors here from Toronto, and it was announced that a thorough investigation would be conducted, with public hearings, at which survivors would be questioned. The Ontario Attorney General's department already has ordered an inquest over the body of one of the victims, while provincial police are also arranging for a Coroner's inquest.

The injured were taken to Toronto yesterday in a special train. Advices from that city today said all were expected to recover.

Among the guests from the United States who escaped, losing all their clothing and baggage were:

Mrs. Charles F. Brush, of Cleveland; Miss Ruth Radke, of Cleveland; Dr. and Mrs. M. J. Barrie and son, of Indianapolis; Miss Berry Radcliffe, of Hamilton, Ohio; Miss Cora L. Beson, of Hoboken, N. J.; J. Saunders, of Boston; Henry Neilson, of New York; C. E. Congdon, wife and son, of Youngstown, Ohio; A. C. Johnson, of Columbus, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Johnston, of Columbus, Ohio; Misses Terres and Elinor Manning, of Pittsburgh; Dr. and Mrs. John G. Stowe and son, of Buffalo; Misses Bernice and Marie Bachman, of Orchard Park, N. Y.; Misses Catherine and Grace Farrell, of Rochester; Miss Dorothy Stampp, of Buffalo; Mrs. B. Hayes, of San Antonio, Tex.; Miss Marie Prior, of Hilladale, N. Y.; George Radcliffe, of Hamilton, Ohio; Champan Rose, of Columbus, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hamilton and daughter, Margaret, of Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Huber, of Philadelphia; Mrs. M. C. McDaniels, of San Antonio, Tex.; Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Radcliffe, of Hamilton, Ohio; Miss Madelyn Reed, of Memphis, Tenn.; Mr. and Mrs. George M. Stowe, of Buffalo; Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Wood and two children, of Cleveland; Miss Anna McDevitt, of Philadelphia.

TORONTO, Aug. 20.—Mrs. James McNally, missing in the fire which destroyed the Wawa Hotel at Lake of Bays yesterday, is believed to have met her death because a sleeping powder she had taken rendered her slumber so deep that she failed to hear rescuers, it was disclosed here today.

Mrs. McIntyre, a friend of the elderly Mrs. McNally told the story here this afternoon. Mrs. McIntyre, who arrived on the refugee train from the scene of the fire, said she had pounded vainly on Mrs. McNally's door, and finally was forced to flee before the advancing flames without being able to awaken her.

TEN PICNICKERS DROWNED.

Mystery in Sudden Sinking of a Launch Near St. Paul.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 20 (Associated Press).—All available police at South St. Paul, assisted by scores of civilians, were dragging the Mississippi River today for bodies of nine of the ten persons who were drowned when their launch sank near South St. Paul last night. An attempt also was made to locate the craft, to learn definitely what caused it go under.

Those who perished were Mrs. Pauline Martinelli, her three sons and daughter-in-law, two grandchildren, Miss Margaret Mahn, sister of Mrs. Andrew Martinelli, and Frank and Robert Gaultier.

The body of Mrs. Pauline Martinelli is the only one recovered so far.

The party had gone ten miles down the river for a picnic, and were returning just before dusk when the tragedy occurred.

John McCoy, a fisherman, said he was about half a mile from the Martinelli craft when he saw a man suddenly leap overboard. The other men followed and the women screamed. Before he could reach the spot all were gone, and only Mrs. Pauline Martinelli's body was visible.

Coroner Meeker believes the boat ran afoul of some obstruction just below the surface of the water, which is very low where the accident occurred. Another opinion is that the engine may in some manner have fallen through the bottom, tearing a hole.

FITTS FORFEITS $10 BAIL.

New York Lawyer Fails to Answer Conductor's Charge of Assault.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 20.—William C. Fitts, general counsel for the Postal Telegraph Company and former Assistant United States Attorney General, forfeited $10 bail in City Court today, when he failed to appear to answer a charge of assault, third degree, made by Selbert Wenerd, a Pullman conductor.

Wenerd caused the arrest of Mr. Fitts when a New York Central train arrived in Rochester Saturday morning, alleging that the lawyer refused to pay the additional fare for a drawing room in which he rode. He said Mr. Fitts declared he had purchased one ticket, and if that had been lost he was not going to buy another.

During an argument, according to the conductor, threats were made and a penknife was drawn.

Officers of the Pullman company and of Mr. Fitts, and the homes of Wenerd and the Pullman porter, who is a witness in the case, all are in New York.

WOMAN FOUND DEAD OF GAS

Police Report Case as Accident, but Medical Examiner Says Suicide.

Mrs. Selma Basch, 47, was found dead from asphyxiation in the kitchen of her home at 203 Eighth Avenue, Brooklyn, by her husband, Eugene, last night. The gas cocks of the kitchen range were open. Police reported the death as accidental in the belief that Mrs. Basch might have brushed against the handles of the burners without knowing it while she was preparing dinner.

At the Brooklyn office of the Chief Medical Examiner it was later reported, however, that Dr. Edward M. Martin, Assistant Medical Examiner, had investigated the death of Mrs. Basch and pronounced it suicide.

Neighbors had detected the odor of the gas earlier in the evening and searched the four-story double apartment building from cellar to roof without tracing its source. They said Mrs. Basch had been greatly affected by the death of her mother a month ago, and had been under the care of a specialist.

From the Founder's Writings

When a Man Loves No One but Himself

he will find out some day that he has fallen into hard times.

To be without friendships of the right kind is to narrow oneself and to deprive oneself of the luxuries of living by failing to choose or to keep up honest, wise and judicious friendships.

Lonely people are often so because of their own selfishness. Form early friendships and do not lose them.

"Hurlingham"

$16.50

One of the mode's favorite means of achieving a smart effect in her footwear this season is to use two contrasting leathers in two harmonizing shades.

This has been done in rather a unique way in

—a trig, one-strap pump, beautifully made over a typically English last—in which beige suede is combined with tan calfskin, gray suede with a deeper gray kidskin, and white buckskin with black or tan calfskin. The result is most effective.

Women's Coats and Suits

Fur collars and cuffs, of course, but this season we must add borders—narrow or wide—to be "up to the minute."

The Women's Salon is featuring every new note in the mode in both coats and suits in the advance showing for Fall—

The three-quarter coat that is important in both the separate coat mode and in suits.

The long, straight wrap with not too large collar of fur—that is also important, for this season it has the distinctly Chinese silhouette.

3 and 2 piece Suits—$59.50 to $295

AU QUATRIEME

An Oak Paneled Room of the Jacobean Period from England

One of the most interesting things in Au Quatrieme, just now, is the oak paneled Jacobean room, which has been brought from England complete—walls, fireplace, frieze, even the two doors with their old locks and handles.

Dated 1690

Fine discretion and simplicity are the important characteristics of the carving, done with a restrained hand in both the frieze and the over-mantel.

Price, $4,500.

ACTRESS WIVES AID FULLER AND M'GEE

Both Have Located Witnesses to Corroborate Husbands' Statements.

LOANED $25,000 TO FIRM

Mrs. Louise Groody McGee and Mrs. Florence Ely Fuller, actress wives of the bankrupt bucketshop brokers, Edward M. Fuller and W. Frank McGee, were interviewed yesterday at 11 William Street, the office of Carl E. Whitney, counsel for the brokers. They defended their husbands, denied that they had obtained lavish gifts from the brokers and insisted they had lost money in the firm's crash.

"There have been stories that you, Mrs. McGee, received from your husband motor cars and jewelry of great value," said a reporter.

"That is absurd," replied Mrs. McGee. "When I married Mr. McGee he was not in a position to give me anything, and I did not expect anything. I was perfectly satisfied. I was playing then with 'Good Morning, Dearie.' Mr. McGee at that time was just starting out in the brokerage business. All of those stories about lavish gifts were printed in June, 1922. We were married on Feb. 20, 1922. The failure was in June."

"Since the bankruptcy you have denied the suspicions of attorneys for the creditors that you profited by the bankruptcy," pursued the reporter.

Loaned Money to Husband.

"I have not profited by anything," answered Mrs. McGee. "I am a creditor of E. M. Fuller & Co. If people would take the trouble of looking that up they could find out. I think I ought to be credited on the books with about $23,000 or $25,000, and personal loans that I made to Mr. McGee came to another $25,000. That would, in other words, make me a creditor to the extent of about $50,000 in round numbers.

"Ever since the failure I have taken care of myself, and before the bankrupty I did so to a large extent. As far as living luxuriously in Paris and spending money are concerned, that is all absurd. I live in one room, room and bath, with my mother, at the Westminster Hotel. I went to Paris for the purpose of taking singing lessons, which had already been arranged and paid for before Mr. McGee went to Ludlow Street Jail, before any talk of subpoenas or anything like that. I had already paid for my lessons and went over there to study.

"I always went abroad and it was therefore nothing out of the ordinary for me to make the last trip. As to newspaper reports that I had a stateroom that cost $1,500, I want to say that it cost me about $640, and that can be verified by the steamship records. I am fully able financially to go abroad.

Made $100,000 in Eighty Weeks.

"I can afford it because during the eighty weeks I was in 'Good Morning, Dearie,' I made over $100,000. I never received any of the firm's assets in any form—motor cars, jewelry, money or anything else. Mr. McGee did not give me presents for the very good reason that he was not in a position to give me presents. I met Mr. McGee in Paris the previous Summer."

Here Attorney Whitney interposed. Turning to Mrs. Fuller, "Where are you living now?",

Mrs. Fuller answered, "In New York with relatives."

"Two rooms and kitchenette," the witness replied laconically. "I did my own work, cooking and all," she added.

"Had your husband lavished jewelry on you?"

"I never received anything. I was living modestly in New York. That was at the time of the failure."

"What prompted you to come forward now and help your husbands?" asked a reporter.

"If you love some one and they are in trouble, I think you would do anything you could to help them, to quicken the end of their trouble," replied Mrs. McGee.

"Don't you women feel that you are trying to help these men by clearing up all of the various tangled ends in regard to the business?" asked the lawyer.

"Yes, so as not to have the public think the way it does, to change people's opinion," answered Mrs. McGee. "They are not really such bad men as they have been painted, because we know them as they are and we are anxious to help them. Since Aug. 4 we have, whenever called upon, done anything the authorities wanted us to do to help them clear up the case. They have made frequent requests as to what they wanted us to do, and we have always complied. Mrs. Fuller, on her part, obtained one very important witness in corroborating a portion of the story told by her husband to Colonel Hayward. I have assisted my husband in finding two important witnesses as to an event which took place in New York. What we have done with the authorities we have done with the utmost willingness. We wanted everybody to know our husbands as we have known them."

"What are your plans?" asked Mr. Whitney.

"I plan to give up the stage," said Mrs. Fuller. "I am waiting watchfully as far as the future is concerned."

"Mr. Dillingham cabled me to come home Aug. 1, but the play was postponed," said Mrs. McGee. "In the meanwhile I am practicing."

Says Brokers Have Told All.

Mr. Whitney supplemented what the two women had to say with a statement in which he said:

"Without embarrassing the Government at all and without giving names or indications of any kind, I can say that Fuller and McGee have given a complete and truthful outline of the entire business and all their business relations to the Federal Attorney and will no doubt at the proper time give it at such times and places as they are asked to give it before the referee. It becomes important to corroborate that story. Mrs. Fuller did some very commendable work in locating the witness with the result that the Government has received some very valuable aid. So far as the locating of a witness is concerned, we do not need Mrs. Fuller and Mrs. McGee to be detectives, but to get that witness, who was living quietly in a delightful section, to come back and get into a case that you gentlemen of the press have kept before the people for a year is sometimes a difficult job to do.

"In almost the same way Mrs. McGee has assisted us in corroborating her husband with respect to what the Government considered two very important witnesses in a case which is already pending. You understand that before I came into this case an indictment was handed up by the Federal Court not against Fuller and McGee, but against their former counsel, Fallon. She assisted her husband in getting very valuable information in that case, and I think Colonel Hayward is deeply grateful for it.

"I was very much surprised when I learned there were hidden assets," said Mrs. McGee. "I came back to start rehearsals. I also got another cable to come home in connection with this case. I did not give any interviews in Paris. I did not see any reporters in Paris until one day before I went to London. I did not give any interviews. I did not have any of the assets or anything like that. I have not given any interviews. This is the first. Mrs. Fuller never discussed the case with the newspaper men."

William J. Fallon and Eugene F. McGee, former attorneys for Edward M. Fuller and William F. McGee, will appear this morning before Federal Judge William J. Bondy to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court for failure last May to obey the order of Judge Julian W. Mack for the production of missing records of the bankrupt firm.

The lawyers have expressed a desire to examine their former clients, and if this wish is fulfilled the brokers will be brought forth from the place of concealment in which they have been held by United States Marshal William C. Hecht under commitment of Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard for their failure to produce the records. The lawyers have also indicated a desire to examine Ernest Eidlitz, formerly an employe of Fallon. Eidlitz made one of the three affidavits that led to the contempt citations. He said that he saw the missing records in the Fallon & McGee offices at 152 West Forty-second Street at the time the lawyers reported to the Court that they did not know where the papers were.

Marshal Hecht yesterday instructed two deputies to attend today's proceedings and to be ready, in event the defendants are found guilty of contempt, to take them into custody.

E. M. Fuller and W. F. McGee recently filed affidavits in connection with their confessions to United States Attorney William Hayward, in which they described how Fallon and Eugene F. McGee concealed and destroyed certain documents and how they themselves did likewise with other records. These affidavits were the immediate basis for the citations for contempt of court.

Fallon Faces Another Charge.

Fallon faces another contempt charge if Keyes Winter, trustee for the bankrupt estate of Dillon & Co., brokers, carries out his purpose of serving him with a citation when Fallon appears in court this morning. On two successive days last week Fallon refused to attend hearings in the bankruptcy before Deputy Referee Harry Caplan.

The August Federal Grand Jury was occupied with other cases yesterday and did not take up the E. M. Fuller & Co. investigation. But United States District Attorney Hayward and his assistants in the case, William J. Millard and John E. Joyce, spent an hour in conference with Arnold Rothstein and the latter's attorney, Thomas B. Felder. Rothstein, formerly known as a gambler, and who is now an insurance agent, appeared voluntarily, said Colonel Hayward. In a hearing recently Rothstein was closely questioned as to whether he had obtained $385,000 in race track bets from Fuller and William F. McGee. His memory proved faulty on this and other important points.

While Mr. Felder admitted that Rothstein's visit to the Federal Building had to do with E. M. Fuller & Co., Rothstein, who had not heard his attorney make this admission, said to reporters: "I talked with Colonel Hayward about matters a million miles away from the Fuller case." Colonel Hayward declined to intimate what had gone on in the conference.

"Rothstein made a statement to Colonel Hayward," explained Mr. Felder. "He is not guilty of any wrongdoing in this matter. He has nothing to conceal and he told Colonel Hayward so." Mr. Felder denied that the conference touched on the question of whether Fuller and William F. McGee had lost large sums of money to Rothstein in racing wagers.

BROKERAGE INQUIRY HALTED

State's Failure to Subpoena Witnesses Postpones Investigation.

Because the Attorney General's office had failed to serve a subpoena on George Andrews, Treasurer of the stock brokerage house of H. Dube & Co., Supreme Court Justice O'Malley yesterday postponed indefinitely the examination into that firm's affairs.

For a similar reason, service on Treasurer Joseph Marshall not having been made, a postponement will be announced today in the scheduled examination of Marshall, whom the State seeks to prevent selling stock in Willard J. Valentine, Inc.

E. T. MEREDITH SUES BROOKHART FOR 30C.

Charges Senator Libeled Him That Much in Blaming Him for Farm Deflation.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Aug. 20 (Associated Press).—Charges by Senator Brookhart of Iowa that E. T. Meredith, while occupying the office of Secretary of Agriculture, "sat in the Wall Street game and helped produce the greatest panic in farm prices in the history of agriculture," prompted him to instruct his attorneys to file suit against the Senator for libel and damages of thirty cents, the former Secretary declared in a statement to The Associated Press today.

Senator Brookhart's charge, made in an address at Radcliffe, Iowa, last Wednesday, Mr. Meredith said, "involved my integrity and honor and was without basis in fact.

"But few people give any credence to Brookhart's statements," Mr. Meredith declared, "and while the damage of his statements might be more, I estimate his effectiveness at about thirty cents. So I have instructed my attorneys to sue Mr. Brookhart for libel and damages in this amount—the real compensation being in getting Mr. Brookhart on record under oath.

"The public will now have an opportunity to see how nearly he can come to proving even one of his many mouthings.

"It is futile to argue with a man who is so careless with his statements as Senator Brookhart," Mr. Meredith continued, recalling that the Senator had declared that the slump in agricultural prices had cost the farmers of the country $32,000,000,000, or $8,000,000,000 more than the whole cost of the war.

"The issue between Brookhart and myself was whether the American farmer's financial condition is worse this year than last, as Brookhart claims. I pointed out in a recent statement that the grain farmer would receive $600,000,000 more for his grain this year than last year, in spite of the slump in the price of wheat. I note that he admits this in his last outburst.

"Since my statement was given out, the Department of Agriculture has announced the agricultural price figures as of Aug. 1. This index figure includes all the principal farm products and shows that the American farmer was 15.5 per cent. better off on Aug. 1 than he was a year ago, and 25.2 per cent. better off than two years ago on Aug. 1.

"The War Finance Corporation figures show that the farmers of Iowa, who, Brookhart has fancied, were ruined long ago, borrowed approximately $24,000,000 two years ago, and that $17,000,000 of that principal sum, with interest, has already been repaid. In Nebraska the farmers have already repaid eleven-twelfths of the money they borrowed, and in Illinois they have repaid four-fifths of the money they borrowed.

"Can Brookhart convince any one, in the face of these facts, that the farmer is ruined, when he has recovered like this?"

In his Radcliffe address, Senator Brookhart declared that Mr. Meredith, as Secretary of Agriculture, was aware that the farmers were to be "deflated," that he was in a position to aid agriculture, and to avert contraction of the prices of agricultural products, but that he failed to do so.

WASHINGTON, Iowa, Aug. 20.—Senator Brookhart, when told at his home here today that E. T. Meredith had announced that he was bringing suit against him, declared:

The Iowa Senator said he would have more to say about Mr. Meredith in a speech to be made within a few days.

COOLIDGE FAVORS TIES WITH MEXICO

MUTUAL FRIENDSHIP SHOWN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—With the return to Washington today of Charles Beecher Warren and John Barton Payne, the American Commissioners, who for three months have been deliberating with representatives of Mexico on the outstanding differences between the two Governments, the way is believed to have been opened for recognition of the Obregon Government by the Coolidge administration.

Commissioners Warren and Payne presented their report to Secretary Hughes today and later were accompanied by the latter to the White House, where they made an oral report to President Coolidge.

After these conferences the utmost optimism appeared to prevail in official circles, and it is believed the recognition of the Mexican Government is now only a matter of days. The American commissioners were closeted with Secretary Hughes more than an hour and spent a like interval at the White House. Secretary Hughes was present during this conference.

"We have brought back the record of our proceedings," said Commissioner Warren. "It is satisfactory to the Mexican Government and we hope it is to the United States."

Commissioners Warren and Payne went to Mexico with the confidence of President Harding and Secretary Hughes. The confidence of President Harding has been duplicated by President Coolidge. He has given his complete corroboration to the steps taken by Mr. Hughes for the settlement of the Mexican question and there is every reason to believe that Mr. Hughes and the President are in accord regarding the steps which may be necessary for the recognition of the Obregon Government.

Commissioners Warren and Payne handed to Secretary Hughes detailed minutes of their conversations with the Mexican commissioners, Señores Ross and Roa. These minutes contain all the elaborate discussions of the question of the alleged retroactivity of Article 27 of the Mexican Constitution, which American oil interests have affirmed jeopardizes their vested interests, and furthermore covers completely the difficult agrarian question, as well as the question of outstanding claims between the two Governments.

No Infringement on Sovereignty.

The commissioners of President Obregon did not hesitate to halt any discussion as to modification of Mexican law. It was known from the first that the Obregon Government was committed to a policy of refusal to a signature "on a dotted line" of any document tending to put in question the sovereignty of the Mexican people. In the same way it was known that Commissioners Warren and Payne had a similar high regard for the prerogatives of the American Government, and while they appreciated the delicacy of their position, they nevertheless knew that a great degree of tact was necessary if an agreement was to be arrived at.

The whole Mexican people had been given to understand that President Obregon would refuse to "sign a paper" in advance of recognition. It had become a part of Mexican ideals that there should be no surrender of sovereignty, and while President Obregon in numerous interviews to the press and to his fellow citizens had insisted that Article 27 could not be made retroactive, he had the whole Mexican nation behind him in his insistence that his word as a gentleman could be taken as a guarantee that Mexico intended to abide by the laws of nations.

Just what procedure will be followed in working out the technical details of Mexican recognition remains to be seen. Mr. Hughes has said on numerous occasions that there must be adequate guarantees of the intention of the Mexican Government to respect property rights. Mr. Hughes has not been insistent, however, that these guarantees should take any particular form and he has declared on several different occasions that it was the intent and not the form which in the last analysis would have weight with the State Department.

The three big questions which confronted the Mexican and American commissioners at Mexico City were the nonretroactivity of Article 27, the Agrarian problem and the question of claims. Just how the commissioners have taken care of the question of the alleged confiscatory provisions of Article 27 of the Carranza Constitution remains to be seen. There have been suggestions that this matter should be covered in the so-called Petroleum Bill now pending before the Mexican Congress. American oil men objected to this bill on the ground that it brought into question titles which they say they acquired in good faith long before the Carranza Constitution was adopted at Querataro in May, 1917.

At the same time it is known that the petroleum bill now lies in a committee of the Mexican House and must be approved by the Mexican Senate before it can become a law.

As regards claims there is expected to be no difficulty. In his official announcement in Mexico City, President Obregon made it clear that his Government is ready at any moment to conclude two claims conventions for the settlement of outstanding differences arising between the two countries during the period of revolution in Mexico.

One of the conventions would cover claims arising during the various revolutions which have occurred in Mexico since the assassination of Madero, and the other would cover all other claims between Americans and Mexicans. The Mexican Government more than two years ago submitted simultaneously to the various nations whose citizens had claims against Mexico a proposition for the settlement of these claims. The present suggestion is understood to be merely a reiteration of this former offer.

Coolidge for Recognition.

It is clear that the mere appointment of commissioners on behalf of the United States to discuss these matters with duly accredited Mexican commissioners would not constitute technical recognition of the Obregon regime. The intention of the Coolidge Administration remains to be officially announced, but it seems certain that the new President has every wish to facilitate a return of good understanding between this nation and the republic to the South.

The American commissioners paid high tribute to the Mexican authorities with respect to their reception. Not only were they treated with uniform courtesy while in Mexico City, but they were attended with ceremony even until they reached the American border. The official documents covering the minutes of the deliberations of the commission were signed in the Mexican Capital last Wednesday afternoon. In the evening Messrs. Warren and Payne left by special train, a guard being furnished by the Mexican Government. This guard accompanied them as far as the border. A pilot train went in advance with armed soldiers.

En route to the border the American commissioners received ovations from the citizens and officials of the various towns, who rejoiced at the prospect of a speedy resumption of diplomatic relations. Mayors and high local officials were on hand to extend greetings and evidences were given on every hand of the desire of the Mexican people to enter again upon a period of friendship with the American people.

Numerous telegrams of a congratulatory character were received by Commissioners Warren and Payne upon their arrival here. Outstanding among these, however, was a message from Ramon Ross and Fernando G. Roa, the two Mexican Commissioners, which said:

"We sincerely hope that when you return to your native country after your fruitful labor in behalf of a rapprochement between our two countries, you will enjoy, together with your families, that happiness to which your high merits and virtues entitle you. We hope that the sincere sentiments which you expressed toward our country may prove an important factor in the future international relations between the two nations."

Commissioner Warren seemed optimistic as he emerged from his conference with President Coolidge. Though he made no prognostications, he made it clear that the agreement was entirely satisfactory to the commissioners, and he expressed the hope that it would prove so to the American Government.

Mr. Warren and Mr. Payne expect to have additional conferences with both the President and with Secretary Hughes. During these discussions all the minute points respecting Mexican relations will be gone over and the American Commissioners will do their best to present the true Mexican attitude regarding these differences.

It was pointed out today that the conferences of the commissioners had consumed a much longer time than was at first anticipated. The deliberations began on May 14, and while those in closest touch with Mexican matters were certain the discussions would not extend beyond six weeks, in reality they continued until Aug. 15. Officials explain that the numerous conferences were necessary because of the elaborate detail in which all outstanding questions were gone into, and they express the opinion that a much better understanding would subsist between the two countries as a result of the thorough manner in which all matters of difference were thrashed out.

FRANCE TO RECOGNIZE GEORGE OF GREECE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 20.—It is understood that the French Government is now willing to recognize King George as the legal constitutional sovereign of Greece and renew diplomatic relations with the Greek court, which were broken off when King Constantine returned from exile on the sudden death of his son Alexander.

The French then considered the presence of the ruler who was driven from the throne by the allied ultimatum of June 11, 1917, was contrary to European order as established by the peace treaties. The Government of the republic therefore refused to recognize him as ruler and broke off direct diplomatic relations with Athens.

In September last the situation again changed, Constantine then abdicating for the second time, after the disaster to the Greek armies in Asia Minor, in favor of his son George who mounted the throne as George II. But France still hesitated, adopting an attitude of reserve. Now, however, the stability of the Government of Athens seems sufficiently proven and Premier Poincaré personally informed Queen Mary of Rumania—who is the present Greek King's mother-in-law—during her recent visit that recognition would be possible as soon as all constitutional rights were re-established in Greece, some of which were suppressed during the revolution last September. The matter therefore now rests with the Greeks themselves. The Queen of Rumania is shortly going to London to discuss the same question with the British Government.

HONOR MEMORY OF PIUS X.

Ninth Anniversary of His Death Finds Canonization Move Growing.

ROME, Aug. 20.—Today was the ninth anniversary of the death of Pope Pius X., and Cardinal Merry del Val returned to Rome from his vacation to celebrate mass, in the presence of many of the faithful, including the sisters of the late Pope, in the crypt where Pius is buried. Other masses were celebrated by Mgr. Parolin, nephew of Pius X., and the Abbe Pierami, postulator of cause for the beatification and canonization of the Pontiff.

The Cardinal Vicar has formed a Roman diocesan tribunal to examine the miracles attributed to Pius X., in order to obtain his beatification. The tribunal is composed of Patriarch Huyn as President and Archbishops Testa and Tolel. The judges of the Dutch episcopacy have sent a petition to the Pope asking him to accelerate the cause of beatification, and the Archbishop of Cambrai has written the Pontiff in the same vein.

NO PERJURY CHARGE IN STOKES DIVORCE

Prosecutor Admits Inquiry Into Testimony, but Says It Is Not Finished.

FOUR WITNESSES EXAMINED

Investigation Will Be Resumed After Civil Action Ends, Says Pecora.

Acting District Attorney Pecora admitted yesterday that several months ago District Attorney Easton had begun an investigation of the testimony of witnesses at the divorce suit brought by W. E. D. Stokes against Helen Elwood Stokes, but denied that charges of perjury were pending against the witnesses.

Mr. Pecora said that a few days after the divorce trial was finished before Justice Finch in the Supreme Court, Samuel Untermyer, counsel for Mrs. Stokes, called on the District Attorney and asked him to investigate the testimony of four of the witnesses called by Mr. Stokes. He said that these witnesses were examined later at length, and that after they had made statements regarding an incident in which Mrs. Stokes and an alleged correspondent were mentioned at the trial Mrs. Stokes was called to the District Attorney's office to face the four witnesses. Mr. Pecora declared that each of the witnesses said that Mrs. Stokes was not the woman about whom they had testified before Justice Finch.

Mrs. Stokes was reported to have stated in Chicago last Friday that the Prosecutor had established that witnesses at the divorce trial had been found to have committed perjury in a conspiracy to destroy her reputation. Mr. Pecora said that while the witnesses had admitted that Mrs. Stokes was not the woman they had referred to in the divorce trial, there was nothing to indicate that they had wilfully committed perjury, and that their statements at the trial and at the Prosecutor's inquiry indicated that they had made an honest mistake.

Mr. Pecora explained that the investigation had not been finished and that it was not likely that the inquiry would be resumed until the divorce action is disposed of in the civil court. He said that this attitude on the part of Mr. Banton was due to the Prosecutor's policy never to interfere with the trial of a civil case through a preliminary inquiry into possible criminal features.

Builder Said to Have Declared He Loved Some One Else.

James A. O'Day, President of the O'Day Construction Company, said to have built the Capitol, Apollo and Selwyn Theatres, was directed yesterday in the Supreme Court to pay $175 a month alimony and $500 counsel fees in a suit of his wife, Mrs. Florence Boyd O'Day, for separation. The couple were married in 1912. Mrs. O'Day alleges that her husband left her in 1919 and told her he loved some one else. She believes he is now attentive to a certain young woman.

O'Day and the young woman named told the Court that their relationship has not been improper. O'Day contended that the New York courts have no jurisdiction over the case because Mrs. O'Day lives in Newark and his home is at Matamoras, Pa. Mrs. O'Day replied that she lives at 250 West Fifty-first Street and that her husband is in business here.

TWO DIE IN AIR CRASH AT SOUTHERN FIELD

A. De Mesquita and Sergt. Reece, Both of New York, Are Killed Instantly.

POPE FIELD, Camp Bragg, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Alfred de Mesquita of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Durham, N. C., publisher of the Durham Sun and the Fayetteville (N. C.) Observer, and Sergeant Edmund Reece of New York City were killed here late today in an airplane accident.

The plane went into a nose dive after taking off, bursting into flames after it struck the ground. Both men are believed to have been instantly killed.

While the airplane was privately owned, an Army Board of Inquiry has been appointed to investigate the accident.

Alfred De Mesquita was 24 years old and when in New York he lived with his parents at 600 West 113th Street. His father, J. B. De Mesquita, is Treasurer of the American Safety Razor Corporation of 308 Jay Street, Brooklyn. His parents, virtually prostrate with grief were not reached last night, but a friend said the young man had been connected with The Durham Sun and The Fayetteville Observer for some months, having interested in their ownership and acting as business manager. He had one brother, Edwin, 13 years old.

Nothing was learned of Sergeant Reece. At Mitchel Field it was said he was not known.

FINDS PICTURES ON CLIFFS.

Archaeologist Reports Discovery of Ancient Writings.

Discovery of ancient picture writing on the cliffs opposite the mouth of Noosatum River, in the Bella Coola region of British Columbia, was announced by Harlan I. Smith, Dominion archaeologist and formerly associate curator of the American Museum of Natural History, in a letter received here yesterday.

The pictures include a mammal with teeth and a tail and an eagle with outspread wings and a human face. Just how far back the rude sculptures were hewn into the rock is uncertain, but Mr. Smith said he was certain it was many centuries if not thousands of years ago.

SAYS FATHER ROBBED HER.

Mary Graffio, 18, of 126 Elizabeth Street, in the Tombs Court yesterday charged her father, Michael, with being a hold-up man. He was held in $2,500 bail for action of the Grand Jury by Magistrate Henry M. R. Goodman. The girl told the Magistrate that her father, who is 50 years old, held her up with a pistol in their home shortly before 12 o'clock Sunday night and compelled her to hand over $15 and her bank book.

After she had given him the money, the girl said, she ran out and got Policeman Harrington. The officer testified that he found the father seated in the kitchen, with a pistol in his pocket. Graffio pleaded not guilty.

MORE TANGIER MEETINGS,

British, French and Spanish Experts Will Resume Them Next Month.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The British, French and Spanish experts who have been discussing the Tangier problem, with a view to discovering whether a basis exists for a plenary conference to settle the status of the province, have arranged to resume their conversations early next month. They adjourned their meetings in July for the purpose of returning to their capitals and reporting to their respective Governments.

While the decision to reopen the meetings is regarded as an encouraging sign, British officials profess to see little hope of an agreement unless France is ready to make more liberal concessions and to relax her military and economic domination in Tangier.

After You Ride in the New Peerless Let Our Owners Complete the Story

After you have had a ride in the New Peerless, which you are welcome to enjoy at any time without obligation, you will know of your own knowledge why our owners are so strong in their conviction that no car in America is yielding finer performance.

This you can determine for yourself so far as riding qualities are concerned and the range of power from a mere whisper to a mighty torrent.

If you will then examine the testimony of our owners, you will discover other facts that are revealed only after months of daily service.

There is, for example, the peculiar quality of the New Peerless to go for an unbelievable time without carbon removal.

It will also be impressed upon you how many owners speak of utter dependability—a faculty of serving without faltering whenever called upon and no matter how severe the punishment may be.

It will be apparent to you then that only a car of very definite superiorities of design and workmanship could win so high a reputation. Possessed of these facts you will begin to realize somewhat the nature of Peerless satisfaction.

Every day of the year, no matter the condition of roads, sixteen snow-white Pierce-Arrow tank trucks haul 18,000 gallons of milk into Detroit from points as distant as 120 miles. They are operated by Ira Wilson & Sons.

The oldest Dual-Valve Pierce-Arrow now has traveled more than 100,000 miles—all since October, 1920. At 80,000 miles it was overhauled for the first time.

"We expected to spend a lot of money for new parts," says a letter from the firm, "but we spent less than $25. The rear axle (worm-drive) and transmission were perfect and we could find no need to replace any part of the engine."

For Business Men and Bankers to Think About

How far should talk about wheat, mostly based on impression instead of fact, be allowed to influence opinion regarding the prosperity of the country at this time?

While realizing the existing condition of the exclusive wheat farmers of the great plains states, we find many reassuring facts in the wheat situation at the present time.

The break in wheat price was based on July estimate of probable harvest. Since then the Canadian crop has deteriorated and promises a greatly reduced yield.

Kansas, the leading wheat state, has a big corn crop in prospect, and will greatly reduce its wheat acreage this fall. This means a better price for wheat carried over to next season.

The spring wheat states have a larger acreage in corn this year. Minnesota's big crop this season is not wheat, but corn.

Viewing agriculture as a whole, wheat is not the vital factor it once was. When you consider——that wheat represents only about 6% of the total value of farm products.

—that perhaps half the wheat consumed in this country is bought by farmers themselves in form of flour, bran, millfeed, etc.

According to the July 1 estimate of the United States Department of Agriculture, the 1923 crop of wheat was worth $61,515,000 less than the same quantity was worth on July 1, 1922. That doesn't look so good.

Yet against this decline, corn, on the same basis, will develop $699,111,000 more than last year.

Force of habit seems to have kept wheat as a sentimental index, for today it represents only about half the value of corn; while hogs, cattle, dairy products, poultry products—each has risen to more than equal the value of the wheat crop; and the fruit crop is practically equal.

In addition to these things, there are two other tremendously important items having to do with the wealth and prosperity of the country—namely, hay and cotton.

Comparing prices of these two items with 1913 prices, hay is 97% and cotton 206%. Cotton alone should show in dollars an increase of more than five times the decline in wheat.

Wheat was the keynote of prosperity.

That was before the center of population moved to Indiana. That was the time when all farmers were growing some wheat, and all were affected by both the abundance of the crop and the sales price.

Times have changed!

Give wheat its rightful place—6% of the whole—but don't let it assume undue importance.

Fundamentally, the country, from every standpoint so far as we can see, is sound; particularly sound when judged by the natural creation of wealth as it comes from the soil

THE PLAY

Flora	Marian Warring-Manley

Doctor Norton	Jay Strong

The window-frost and frozen eaves of "Icebound" have melted in the home fires of Suburbia. Owen Davis's new play may never take the Diamond Belt for all those things professors of the drama love, but it thaws the hearts of an audience. Perhaps it is not as art-artistic as its immediate predecessor; but an honest-to-goodness suspicion dawns that it is, every bit of it—though a Pulitzer committee might not admit this. In any case, its little manipulations in the favor of dramatic effect and its deft reiterations in the way of humorous characterization gently nudge the audience instead of stinging it with an icy breath. The response last night was immediate and continuous.

The father in this suburban household is a salesman of bonds, with the true salesman temperament. As none of those gilt-edged things figure among the dramatis personæ, he is chiefly occupied in selling himself to himself. For a time this comes easy, for his wife and daughter are of a humorous good sort. They know his little ways and indulge them. It is really a most amusing and attractive family. But the plot presently curdles.

Little Daughter slips out to the movies with one Tommy, though she has promised to go to bed and allows herself to be missed by Mother sees. Big Daughter has a love affair with the son of Father's very un-suburban Boss and breaks her word to dance with him at that dreadful Paradise Inn. Father himself is led into transgression with the Lonesome Wife next door. In the ensuing mix-up, Father loses his job, with his account at the office overdrawn, and is threatened with being named as co-respondent.

All the things happen, in short, that are most terrible to Suburbia. But no heart in the audience is wrung, for is not a Father a salesman? He keeps right on selling himself to himself, and in some measure to the rest of us. With a little more help from Richman, whose rounded vowels and rhythmic utterances are ill suited to character comedy, this would be a most engaging and plausible character."

The chief stoker of the home fires, however, is this suburban mother, Mary. Almost one is persuaded that Mr. Owen Davis has broken all his new ground rules by idealizing a character. Doubtless he would point to the fact that Mary refuses to believe in father's rather obvious goodness, thereby committing jealousy and all uncharitableness. But she does it so gently and with so noble a fortitude that you love her almost the more for it. Otherwise she is wisdom, goodness and forbearance itself, of which virtues Frances Underwood loses nothing in her excellent performance.

Mr. Davis's comedy touches are recy and fresh as always. Little Lillian Ross is an admirable flapper who talks of "sex" and eugenics with a wisdom that has ranged through the dictionary. She might profit by a study of her mother's far from nasal accents, but otherwise is an unending delight. Morgan Farley makes her Tommy rather excruciatingly real and refreshingly funny. "Sez he says I'm done with it. You have it or you haven't it. It's like red hair."

Memories of the Diamond Belt of the drama, frosted with New England ice, must not blind us to the fact that "Home Fires" really belongs in the category of "The First Year." It is almost as fresh and as funny as Frank Craven's masterpiece and quite as realistic, but no more so.

COMEDY OF BUSINESS TYPE

David Farnum	Robert Ames
Thomas Campbell	Stewart Kemp
Toney Platt	Jerome Cowan
Robert Brady	Geo Donnelly
Richard Walcott	Robert McWade
Prof. Bigley	Louis Mount Joy
Lucas	John Robb
James Doolin	Alex Dermon
M. Levante	Joseph Granby
Kennison	Milton Nobles Jr.
Otto Schultz	Manuel A. Alexander
Henry Mack	J. D. Walsh

A Barber	R. M. D'Angelo
Olga Walcott	Vivian Tobin
Evelyn Russell	Odia Marquette
Betty Clark	Marie Louise Walker
Miss Doolittle	Eden Gray
Miss Davis	Louise Segal
Miss Finney	Flora Finch

"We've Got to Have Money" is a comedy of the long familiar "success" type, but it moves snappily, piles one situation on another with speed if not verity, and, all in all, provides an evening of amiable entertainment. It contains just about all of the crudities and impossibilities that are part and parcel of plays of the kind: business deals are put through in a few seconds, the hero turns in an instant from a worthless rounder to a marvelous business man, and the telephone rings just about all evening. But the net result is a pretty good show.

The author is a newcomer named Edward Laska. If he has built his play with an eye to all the business comedies from "Wallingford" down—and unquestionably he has—at all events he has shown not a little facility in following the model. Things do not lag in the new comedy at the Playhouse, and there is a certain plausible ingenuity to a number of the ideas contained in it. Of its very nature a farce of this kind cannot be sound, for it is the very waterproofing that slows the pace. Mr. Laska has wisely chosen to sacrifice reality, here and there, to speed.

And so we have a dashing young fellow, out of grace with his guardian and his fiancé because of his escapades, plunging into business with a pair of his college cronies. One is a chemist and the other a lawyer, but they let it all slip, at the instant of the first act curtain, to become business men. The second and third acts find them at their desks, intent upon the business of marketing inventions, and surrounded by stenographers, telephones, and all the buzz of a stage office. Not even a seasoned business man can stand up for a minute against the brash and youthful hero of a business comedy, and the trio sweep all before them.

Robert Ames is an enormous asset to these improbable proceedings, but one does get the feeling that he is rather thrown away in a rôle which, although it dominates the play from first to last, gives the acotr but scant opportunity. Like the play, it is surface stuff, and Mr. Ames is capable of going deeper. The cast is long and hard-worked; its most important members are Leo Donnelly, Robert McWade and Flora Finch. Miss Finch, of course, is the same whose face and form used to be so familiar in the early film comedies. She is amusing in "We've Got to Have Money," although she is required to play almost continuously in the key of farce.

Nora Bayes to Go on Concert Stage.

Nora Bayes, who is now in London, will desert musical comedy this season for the concert state. She will begin a transcontinental tour in Hartford on Oct. 11, under the management of Fulcher and Bohan, and conclude it in the Spring with a concert in Carnegie Hall. Her company will include La Rocca, the harpest; a 'cellist, and a pianist.

Winter Garden May Have "Follies."

"The Greenwich Village Follies," it was learned yesterday, may play its New York engagement at the Winter Garden this season. The Greenwich production has customarily been seen at the Shubert Theatre, but that house is now occupied by "Artists and Models." The current revue at the Winter Garden is scheduled to go on tour in about five weeks.

'ARTISTS AND MODELS' IN SCANT ADORNMENT

Principals—Nancy Gibbs, George Rosener, Bob Nelson, Rose Boylan, Veronica, Bob O'Connor, Harriet Gimbel, Beth Elliott, Victor Bosaidt, Kyra, Etta Pillard, James R. Liddy, Grace Hamilton, Adele Klaer, Arthur Boylan, Charlotte Woodruff, John Adair, Nichols Cunningham, Frank Fay, Harry Kelly, Lee Morse, Buddy Doyle, Annie Pritchard, Marie Petties, Clare Thompson, Rollo Wayne, Patelle Levelle.

Good Americans need no longer go to Paris when they die. Bit by bit, Paris is coming to Broadway. Thus last night, at the opening of "Artists and Models" at the Shubert, the audience realized, with appropriate gasps a few moments after the curtain had risen, that the girls of the ensemble were entirely unclothed from the waist up. Those Americans who witnessed similar ensemble numbers at the Folies Bergere and the Casino de Paris this Summer and dismissed them with a summary and moral "That would never do back home," suddenly realized last night the dangers of snap judgments and prophecies.

The occasion for this display, the most daring in recent years and equaled in the memory of veteran first-nighters only by the opening performance of "Aphrodite," was a scene in an artist's studio. One by one the models appeared and walked in slow and stately fashion across the stage. The idea in itself was not notoriously novel—but the absence of what has hitherto been regarded as the minimum in adornment for stage models was decidedly conspicuous.

There are several beautiful settings—among them Japanese prints designs, porcelain statuettes and a pastoral scene by Watson Barratt—and one of two really comic sketches. Particularly funny was a series of pictures of life as it is in the "bug-house fables," of comic-strip fame. A sketch entitled "If Ford Were President" was delightful in anticipation, but not so good when its turn came.

Frank Fay, Buddy Doyle and a very amusing boy whose name was not supplied had several hilarious minutes in a burlesque on the professional card trickster of the vaudeville boards. Charlotte Woodruff sang her songs sweetly and gracefully, Lee Morse revealed a tremulous bass and Etta Pillard, known these many years to burlesque audiences, did her familiar acrobatic dances well.

The girls of the chorus were young and pretty.

IRISH GREET McCORMACK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUBLIN, Aug. 20.—John McCormack gave a reception this afternoon at the Shelbourne Hotel to hundreds of leading citizens, including the Governor General. It was a splendid reunion of Irish society to pay a compliment to the great tenor. Mr. McCormack was delighted. He has great hopes of his country's happiness, so great, in fact, that he intends to buy an Irish residence and even has his eye on one.

The honorary chairmanship of the music section of the Tailteann games next year was conferred on him. He will give a grand prize, and will visit the games, accompanied, he hopes, by thousands of Irish from America, to whom he assures a royal reception. Mr. McCormack regards the return to games, music and song, he said, as the greatest blessing of present day Ireland.

After a short tour on the Continent Mr. McCormack will sail for America about Sept. 12.

Elsie Ferguson Retired From 'Wheel of Life' After Disagreement.

Elsie Ferguson's retirement from the cast of "The Wheel of Life," it was declared yesterday, was due to a disagreement with Marc Klaw, the play's producer, as to the personnel of the cast. Miss Ferguson acted the play on tour last season, and was to have been seen in it here about Oct. 1.

Joseph Klaw, the producer's son, said that Miss Ferguson had asked for several changes in the cast, and in particular had demanded the substitution of two players who acted in the play when it was produced in London. Rather than accede to this request, the contract with the actress was torn up.

It is now regarded as improbable that "The Wheel of Life" will be produced here. Miss Ferguson expects to appear in another play, but no definite plans have been made.

Balieff Troupe to Arrive Thursday.

Nikita Balieff and the Chauve-Souris company will arrive in New York Thursday on the Homeric, and will begin limited engagement at Jolson's Theatre on Labor Day. The company has been appearing during the Summer at the Theatre Femina in Paris. After four weeks here the Balieff troupe will begin a transcontinental tour in Boston on Oct. 1.

"Polly Preferred" Resumes Run.

"Polly Preferred," Guy Bolton's comedy of the films, returned to the Little Theatre last night after a brief hiatus. As before, the cast is headed by Genevieve Tobin, William Harrigan and Thomas W. Ross.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"The Crooked Square" will open at the Hudson Theatre about Sept. 10. Claude King has been added to the cast.

The third "Music Box Revue" will be ready for production around the middle of September.

A modern Greek play by Spiro Melias will be produced here this season by A. A. Aikenson under the title of "The Goats."

Pauline Lord will be seen here in the Fall in a new play to be produced by Arthur Hopkins.

"The Old Soak," with Harry Beresford heading the cast, will begin its tour at the Shubert-Riviera Theatre on Labor Day. Another company, headed by Tom Wise, will be seen later in Chicago, and Raymond Hitchcock will head still another organization.

John Tiller, the English dancing teacher, arrived on the Cedric yesterday. He brought a new troup of sixteen dancers, who will appear in "Fifties of 1923."

Mlle Nelson, now here in "Sunkist" will play the leading role in "The Lady Fever," which Henry W. Savage is producing.

Otto Kruger will play the leading male role in "The Nervous Wreck," which Sam H. Harris is producing.

Frank A. Egan, who produced "The Humming Bird" here last season, plans to present a number of plays here during the coming year. He is a producer from the Coast.

THE SCREEN

Spurious Love.

Aside from one or two extravagant notions, particularly in the inevitable café scenes, "Don't Marry for Money," which is holding forth this week at the Central, is a comparatively fair entertainment. Cyril Chadwick, who will be remembered for his splendid performance as Spoofy in "Three Live Ghosts," usually helps a production in which he appears House Peters is also capable in this film; he plays the role of Peter Smith, the hero.

The theme is not especially pleasing, as it deals with crooks engaged in blackmailing schemes and who for a time have everything their own way. Peter Smith's wife is a comely fair-haired creature, weak and susceptible even to the steadfast staring of Crane Martin (Mr. Chadwick). The average woman in her place would have looked upon Martin as an insolent fellow, but Mrs. Smith, pushing up her hair a bit and pulling down the brim of her hat, prepares herself for an onslaught on her heart. Martin loses no time (this film is only five reels) and hastens in his attack, carefully refraining from kissing the beautiful Mrs. Smith. He has had lots of other affairs and is experienced. Of course in such circumstances Martin is invited to the Smithis, and he plots further with his wife to extort money from Mrs. Smith.

Arrangements are therefore made for Mrs. Martin to meet Mrs. Smith under another name. The two women become friendly and in the course of a week the crook's wife confesses to Mrs. Smith:

"It's hard to say—but I love your husband—and I think that he has learned to care for me."

She is therefore leaving the house, deterred insistently by Mrs. Smith, who is slightly puzzled. That night (it must always be that night) Mrs. Smith is wild with her husband because she believes that he has forgotten that it is the anniversary of their marriage. He hopefully wants her to think so, but intends to surprise her later in the evening.

Martin seizes this as the psychological moment, so while Mr. Smith is supposed to be with an old friend at his club he forthwith seizes the opportunity and Mrs. Smith, kissing her on the lips, just as Mr. Smith, who had not left the house, slowly opens the door expecting to see his petulent wife sitting in the room all alone.

There is a scene, hot words, and so forth, giving Mrs. Martin her opportunity. She threatens Mrs. Smith with publicity and demands all her jewels. Mrs. Smith hands over everything, and Mrs. Martin is leaving when she encounters her own husband. He wants his share of the loot, and in the struggle, during which he has pulled out a pistol, the weapon explodes and he is killed. Mrs. Martin flees, and when the police appear Mr. Smith believes his wife shot Martin and she believes Smith did it. They both confess their guilt, and are saved by a policeman who arrests Mrs. Martin because she is walking so fast and has the jewel case in her arms.

Then the whole story comes out.

The photography in the picture is very bad in places. The sets are adequate and the acting of the principals makes up for some of the shortcomings of the production.

Other Photoplays.

"The Midnight Alarm" is at the Rialto.

NEED FOR GOD-WORSHIP.

Miss Christabel Pankhurst, former suffragette leader, who has been giving a series of theological talks at the Tent Evangel, Ninety-fifth Street and West End Avenue, in her final address last night replied in part to the statements made recently by Dr. Charles P. Steinmets that the world would be freed from hard physical labor within the next hundred years.

Dr. Steinmetz contended that with the aid of electricity and the full development and utilization of the sciences, life could be made a great deal easier for both the laborer and the scholar, and the maximum working day reduced to four hours. Miss Pankhurst said: "I am not a scientist, but I believe Dr. Steinmets's statement greatly overestimated. If man will join in common union—scientist, worker and industrialist working for a mutual good—things will reach the state predicted by Dr. Steinmetz within ten years."

Miss Pankhurst traced the different phases of evolution, defining then as the age of king-worship, autocracy-worship, wealth-worship, and now democracy-worship. All these, she said, are fallible, "the only real solution resting in God-worship. She characterized the present age as a tear and blood-stained one, the outcome of which would be either complete retrogression into barbarism or an upward trend of spiritual well-being and consequent mental and physical peace.

Miss Pankhurst has been invited to speak at the Prophetic Conference at Stonybrook, L. I., next week.

But British Visitor Says We Have Time for Courtesy to Strangers.

The keynote of America is speed and hurry, according to H. L. Jenkins of London, England, who believes no country in the world hurries quite as fast. Mr. Jenkins also believes the American women are the best dressed of any in the world.

"Although I have been in this country for only ten days, everywhere I see evidences of taste and style in the dressing of the women here," said Mr. Jenkins at the Hotel Pennsylvania. "My trip to the United States was primarily for sight-seeing, and so far I have not been disappointed. Boston is a delightful city, and I am looking forward to visiting Philadelphia and Buffalo. One is impressed upon arriving hee by the great bustle and hurry; compared with the sluggishness of Europe, the visitor realizes that no city in the Old World has the system and organization of New York. The keynote of American is speed—speed in all directions, combined with a marked efficiency. Your people are extremely courteous to the stranger within your gates, and I have been treated with the greatest kindness.

"The buildings in New York have a distinct style of architecture, and differ radically from those in Europe. It is remarkable to me that the skyscrapers, huge constructions, have such beauty of line, for one does not expect it in large structures.

"America today is striving for high ideals, and from the tourist's point of view, has achieved much. It is obvious that she must give close attention to the immigrant question. On the boat on which I crossed there were forty-four different nationalities.

"The late President Harding was popular and respected in England. His will be mourned there deeply and sincerely. Another American who was loved and revered in England was the former Ambassador, Thomas Nelson Page. He did more for England than any other foreigner of his time, and rendered early in the World War the deep and far reaching effect of the first German attack.

"I find it difficult to find my way through the traffic, which seems to me to be enormous. In London, there is nothing like it. In fact, although I have traveled well over the world, I have never seen so many automobiles and cars of every description, and this large bulk seems to be fairly well handled."

WIDOW SAYS OIL MEN TOOK HER FORTUNE

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 20.—A widow told on the witness stand today, at the trial of three former officials of the Black Panther Oil Company charged with fraudulent conversion of more than $1,250,000 of stockholders' money, how she had been led to invest $15,000 of a $17,000 estate bequeathed by her husband in stock of the concern, which is now in the hands of a receiver.

"I purchased the stock," said the witness, Mrs. Margaret Huff of this city, "after a meeting I attended in 1921 with a number of stockholders of the company. The President of the company spoke at the meeting and said the concern earned and paid 100 per cent. dividends in 1920. Since the loss of my money I have been forced to work to support myself and three children."

The defendants—Max W. Friedell of Marion, Ind., President; Harry E. Lindley of Harrisburg, Pa., Vice President, and Reuben Douglass of this city—are charged specifically with conspiracy, false pretense and circulation of an erroneous statement as to the financial condition of the oil company.

"We will show," declared Assistant District Attorney Shofield in outlining the prosecution's case, "that this Black Panther venture was a gigantic fraud, promoted and engineered by these defendants, and that some 3,000 or 4,000 trusting investors were duped."

He added that officers of the company had represented the production of oil at thousands of barrels a day from extensive wells said to have been scattered throughout Montana and other parts of the mid-West.

Edward W. Cooch, receiver for the concern, testified that its first charter was issued in Delaware in 1919. This charter, he said, showed the company had been incorporated for $250,000, while a second charter, issued in 1920, fixed the amount of capital stock at $10,000,000.

Friedell and Lindley have been held in prison here in default of bail. Friedell was arrested in Los Angeles last October.

PITTSBURGH VICTORY PULLS GIANTS BACK

MORRISON IS HARD TO HIT

The Giants were hauled back closer to the rest of the National League procession yesterday. The Pirates beat them at the Polo Grounds, 3 to 1, and the Reds gathered in a pair from the Phillies. Result: Only four and a half games lead over the Cincinnatians and only five over the gentlemen from Pittsburgh. The latter don't look especially dangerous, but the Reds are tearing along like the Braves in 1914—six out of seven in the East, and coming so fast in the Giants' wake that the McGrawmen seem to be standing still.

Still, the champions don't seem to be worrying over the situation. They tried hard to cut the Pirates down yesterday, but not hard enough. A fatal weakness for hitting into double plays bobbed up to harass the home team, and after three of these incidents had taken the punch out of as many nice rallies the champs decided to let John Dewey Morrison and the other Pirates have the laurels of battle.

It was a good game, but the wrong team won—the same view that the Pittsburghers took of the notable twelve-inning affair Sunday. Morrison wove the same spell over the Giants that Jack Scott did over the Pirates. He got into a number of jams and good support pulled him right out, aided no little by the fact that John's own roundhouse curve and slow ball were more than enough to stop men like Frisch and Meusel and Kelly and Snyder when a hit meant a whole flock of runs.

Nehf's Support Wabbles.

Art Nehf, the Giants' sharpshooter, was good, but Morrison was invincible. The Pirate got cracking good support and Nehf didn't. There was the difference. An error by Irish Meusel caused trouble in the first inning, and a flaw in the infield play allowed another one in the eighth. These two runs were enough to win.

The Pirates went after Nehf early, figuring to get the thing over before twelve innings. After Bigbee had grounded out to Kelly in the first inning, Max Carey carved out a single through Frisch, and got to third when Nehf unloosed a wild pitch that carromed away and darted into the Pittsburgh dugout. After this bad break Johnny Rawlings struck a blow against his old pal, John McGraw, by singling to left, scoring Carey. And when Irish Meusel fumbled the rolling pill, Johnny sprinted to second. From there he moved to third while Jackson was cutting down Pie Traynor, the Pirates' big hitter, and Mueller, the youngster right fielder, scored the second run with a single to right.

Morrison settled down behind the lead and feasted on the Giants, mailing three batters on strikes in the first two innings. But there was trouble in the third. With one down Nehf walked and Young singled to centre, Nehf going to second. Bancroft followed a hit past Rawlings, and Nehf, after rounding third, changed his mind about trying to score and scrambled back to third, after falling flat on his back. This little episode nearly threw the base running into a tangle, for Young, thinking Nehf was going on, ran away off second and would have been caught dead if Schmidt had thrown instead of fondling the Spalding.

Eason full and one out looked like the proper time and place to inter Mr. Morrison with full honors, but Frisch, after looking over the possibilities of the setting, did exactly the wrong thing. He smashed one straight at Rawlings, and a double play wiped the Giants out of the picture.

Giants Again Miss Chance.

The same thing happened in the next round. After Meusel's painless death on a tap to Morrison, Stengel floated a triple betwixt Carey and Bigbee. Kelly was passed as too dangerous, and young Jackson had the same situation in front of him as had Frisch. Travis chopped a grounder over Morrison's head, but Maranville was nimble and checked the ball with his glove at second base. Then he stepped on the bag and threw to Grimm, and the fans went back to the business of gnashing teeth.

Carey singled with two out in the Pirates' fifth, stole second and kept on to third when Snyder's throw seeped through Bancroft. Rawlings walked and stole, but Traynor lifted a soft fly to Kelly. For the Giants Young tried the larceny tactics in the same inning and was easy for Schmidt and Maranville.

Kelly aroused a flutter of hope in loyal breasts by singling at the start of the seventh, but Jackson fired a grounder at Rawlings and was embroiled in another double killing. Very discouraging, this business, and Snyder showed how the Giants felt about it by standing by while Morrison hooked a third strike over the pan.

Traynor hit one down the channel in right centre at the beginning of the eighth and made third on the play, but half a motion to try Young's stunt of Sunday and break for the plate, but big Kelly ran into the outfield and gathered in the relay throw and Traynor was trapped. He also played safe on Mueller's fly to Young, although as events turned out he could have scored standing up, for the ball skipped past Snyder and nearly evaded Nehf, who was backing up.

However, he bided his time and finally reached port. When Maranville hit to Jackson the kid shortstop let the ball hit his foot before his glove, and this faux pas gave Traynor time enough to score, although Frisch picked up the pill and threw to first ahead of Maranville. Nehf closed up with a burst of speed and fanned Charley Grimm for the third time.

Nehf Passes On.

It was L'il Artha's last inning. Jack Bentley batted for him in the New York half and got the scratchiest of singles down the first base line. Maguire, running for Jack, moved to second on Young's walk and the outlook took on rosier hues. But alas and alack! Bancroft grounded to Grimm and Young was forced at second. Frisch almost hit into another double play. Rawlings and Bud Sprathey of Seabright.

RED SOX BEAT TIGERS, 6-2.

Timely Hitting Wins for Boston—Burns Knocks Homer.

DETROIT, Aug. 20.—Opportune hitting on the part of the Boston Red Sox enabled them to defeat the Tigers today by a score of 6 to 2. Cobb made a brilliant running catch off Burns's long drive in the first inning.

HOME RUN BEATS NEWARK.

Niebergall's Drive in Eighth Wins for Syracuse, 8-7.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Niebergall's home run in the eighth with Makin, who had just doubled on second, gave Syracuse an 8 to 7 verdict over Newark in the first game of the series with the Bears today.

The game was a free hitting affair all the way through. Niebergall and Gislason featuring with the bat for the Stars, the former getting a double and a triple in addition to his timely home run, while the latter knocked the ball out of the park twice for home runs.

Smithers to Box Marks.

Bert Smithers of Elizabeth and Tommy Marks of Long Branch are scheduled to furnish the action in the main bout of ten rounds at the Ocean Park Casino, Long Branch, N. J., Friday night. The eight-round semi-final will bring together Sandy Taylor, local lightweight, and Bud Sprathey of Seabright.

Caught at the Plate.

You can't keep Claude Jonnard out of it. The Great Finisher was summoned and pitched the ninth, striking out Schmidt as a starter.

Hamilton or Babe Adams will probably try for the third game today, and McGraw may reply on John Watson. It will be the Pirates' last appearance of the season unless they come back to play the Yanks in October. And not many folks would bet money on that proposition.

Since feasting on the juicy offerings of Rube Benton the other day, the Giants' hitting has been nothing to speak of. Donohue, Sixey, Cooper and Morrison are four good pitchers, and the Giants know it better than anybody else.

Groh's knee is so bad that Heinie nowadays doesn't bother to put on a uniform. He was in street clothes yesterday, looking on from the press reservation.

Among the bloomers of 1923 count Rab Russell, the demon hitter and second Babe Ruth of the year to-be. With Barnhart hurt, young Mueller is playing right and the Reb just sits on the bench.

The Giants have already won the season series at the Polo Grounds. The Sunday victory being their sixth over the Pirates. The Bucs have won four.

Hoyt Indefinitely Suspended; Ruth Bat Mystery Explained

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Pitcher Waite Hoyt of the Yankees was notified today of his indefinite suspension by President Ban B. Johnson of the American League as a penalty for his attack on Umpire Brick Owens in the eighth inning of the second game of the champions' series here. At the same time, Babe Ruth received an explanation of Mr. Johnson's recent ruling prohibiting the use of the Sam Crawford bat which the Babe used exclusively throughout the Yankees' second tour of the West and their subsequent stand at home. The Crawford bat is barred, according to Mr. Johnson, because of the glue used in its construction. The glue, he says, increases the velocity of the ball and makes the bat just as illegal as the emery or the shine ball. If its use were permitted, the league executive says, the batmakers would try to introduce the use of rubber and other foreign substances which are now forbidden by the rules.

YANKEES SMOTHER WHITE SOX, 16 TO 5

PENNOCK AN EASY WINNER

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—The Yankees were in a hitting mood this afternoon and smothered the White Sox 16 to 5, in the third game of their series here. Fifteen hits, for a total of twenty-seven bases, rattled off the champions' bats and two Chicago pitchers—Urban Faber and Claude Gillenwater—were forced to retire under cover.

Southpaw Herbert Pennock went the entire route for the Hugmen and yielded only three hits in the first five innings. With an overwhelming lead under his belt, Herb eased up a bit thereafter and the Sox made eleven hits and five runs in the last four innings.

Both managers revised their batting orders for this afternoon's affair. For the White Sox, Kid Gleason benched Bib Falk and moved Billy Barrett into left, Johnny Mostil resuming his accustomed place in centre. For the Yankees Miller Huggins switched Wallie Pipp and Elmer Smith and also reversed the order of Wallie Schang's and Everett Scott's appearance at bat.

The new Yankee batting order functioned quite profusely from the start. Whitey Witt opened the game with an infield hit and went to third when Sheely made a wild throw past second in an attempt to start a double play. Ruth was called out on strikes, but Pipp singled to left and Witt came home with the first run of the game.

Elmer Smith also fanned, but Ward sent a drive into the bleachers for a home run, on which both Dugan and Pipp also scored. McClellan fumbled Scott's easy grounder at the start of the second and the Deacon completed the circuit on Pennock's sacrifice, Witt's infield out and a wild pitch.

Ruth Walks in Third.

Ruth opened the third with a base on balls and went to third on Smith's single to centre after Pipp, trying to sacrifice, had bunted a pop fly to Kamm. Ward grounded to McClellan for a force out at second but sprinted to first ahead of the throw for a double play, Ruth scoring. Ward stole second and was left on the lines when Schang struck out.

Scott promptly went at the youngster and reached second on a wild throw past first. Pennock then sacrificed and Witt brought the run across with a triple to centre. Dugan grounded to deep short and Witt sifted through. Ruth then tripled to right and scored a moment later on Pipp's double to left. Smith also took a smashing crack at the ball and was robbed of an extra base hit when Mostil backed out into deep centre and gathered in his powerful drive with one up-reaching hand.

The champs went out in order in the fifth but started another crushing attack in the sixth and drove young Gillenwater out of the game. Pennock started the drive with a double to left and Witt and Dugan followed with similar smacks. With two runs in, a runner on second and none out, Gillenwater retired in favor of Paul Castner, former football and baseball star at Notre Dame.

Castner Takes Costly Wind-up.

Dugan stole third when Castner took a wind-up in pitching to Ruth and scored on Ruth's high fly to Happeny, who had replaced Eddie Collins at second. The next two men were easy outs, but in the seventh the Yankees filled the bases with none out on a pass to Ward and singles by Schang and Scott. Pennock hit into a force-out at the plate, but Haines, who had succeeded Witt in centre, punched a double against the left field bleachers and two more runs clattered over the plate. There the rally petered out, Dugan and Ruth being easy outs.

The Yanks scored two more in the ninth on passes to Pennock and Haines and Ruth's long single to right.

The Sox did not break through Pennock's delivery until the sixth, when they scored one run on Happeny's single and Sheely's double. They made three more in the eighth on singles by Hooper, McClellan, Sheely and Mostil and Kamm's double to left, and bagged another in the ninth on Hooper's single and Happeny's double.

PROTEST WILLIAMS'S BAT.

Senators Say Browns' Home-Run Hitter Uses Two-Piece Stick.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 20.—Kenneth Williams, home run slugger of the St. Louis Browns, uses a bat with a wooden plug in the business end of it, and Umpire George Hildebrand today asserted he would make a detailed report of the matter to Ban Johnson, President of the American League.

Hildebrand's announcement followed a statement by Manager Hush of Washington that he would protest against all victories the Browns won from the Senators in which the bat was used by Williams. Bush asserts the bat is illegal because it is made out of more than one piece of wood.

Williams explained he had the bat made especially for his own use, and after receiving it he found it a bit too heavy, so he had a hole bored in the middle of it and had the hole plugged up at the end. Bush's knowledge of the plugged bat was obtained recently when the Washington Club accidentally came in possession of the bat. Williams later complained the war club from the Senators. Williams used his alleged illegal bat in today's game with Washington. Manager Austin said Williams would continue using the bat until Ban Johnson ruled on its legality.

Luque and Benton Win by Scores of 6-3 and 8-3—Cy Williams Hits 30th Homer.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 20.—Cincinnati took two games from Philadelphia today, winning the first 6 to 3 and the second 8 to 3. Coupled with Pittsburgh's defeat of New York, the Reds are now only four and a half games from first place.

Cy Williams of the Phillies hit his thirtieth home run of the season in the third inning of the second game, scoring Sand ahead of him. Benton hurled fine ball in the closing game, while Luque was effective in the opener.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 20.—Washington made it three straight from the St. Louis Browns by winning today's contest by a score of 7 to 2. The Senators had twenty-two assists, making forty-three in two days, and Peckinpaugh handled fifteen chances.

In the fourth inning Manager Austin was banished by Umpire Evans for objecting to decisions, and in the next inning Evans ordered all the team, except the playing regulars and three substitutes, out of the dugout for "booing" him.

CUBS MAUL GRIMES AND DEFEAT ROBINS

Capture Second Game of Series at Ebbets Field by Score of 10 to 4.

The Chicago Cubs made it two in a row for their current visit to Ebbets Field yesterday afternoon when they defeated the Robins in the second game of the series by a score of 10 to 4.

COCHRAN'S CONVENT BEATS LADY POLKA

DEADLOCK BADLY BEATEN

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Gifford A. Cochran this afternoon carried off the second event of the Consolation Selling Stakes for two-year-olds, over the full six-furlong route, with his home-bred bay filly Convent, which he raised at his Runnymede Stud, near Mount Kisco, in Westchester County. Convent beat J. S. Cosden's Lady Polka handily by a length and a half, and won $3,430 for her owner. She ran the six furlongs in 1:13 3-5.

Sport seemed rather tame after the brilliant racing and great crowd of Saturday, but there were a number of exceptional finishes to keep the good-sized Monday crowd interested. Earle Sande carried off the riding honors for the afternoon with a double. Followers of form had an off afternoon, as only two favorites rewarded their backers.

A field of eight went to the post in the Consolation Selling Stakes, and they were sent away to a good start, with August Belmont's Batsman showing the way down the back stretch. The son of Rounds was forced to give way to the Rancocas Stable's Rival as they went around the turn, Convent following Rival up to the head of the procession. There was a good battle in the stretch, where Rival stopped to finish outside of the money, while Lady Polka came up from fourth position to challenge Convent. The latter had plenty left, however, winning by the good margin of a length and a half from Lady Polka, the latter being two lengths in front of Batsman. The Belmont colt lasted to take third money from H. C. Fisher's Mr. Mutt.

Convent is a boy colt by His Majesty — Marie Odile, and was trained by Carroll Shilling, the former jockey, who is having a lot of success with the Cochran horses during the present meeting. In the wagering Convent was an outsider, receding from an opening of 10 to 1 to 15 to 1. The disappointment of the race was W. Salmen's Flying Fur, the 16 to 5 favorite, which failed to get going, and ran last for most of the journey. Lady Polka had some support at 4 to 1.

Deadlock Runs Last.

The defeat of Mrs. John D. Hertz's four-year-old bay colt Deadlock in the Johnsonville Claiming Handicap was a stunning blow to the players, and inexplicable in view of the fine race he ran in the famous dead heat with Missionary. Deadlock, which was the favorite at 6 to 5, ran with the leaders in the early part of the journey over the route of a mile and a furlong, and then faded away to finish last in the field of five starters.

J. B. Smith's Autumn Bells had the early speed of the party, but the bay son of Ballot likewise was unable to hold the speed, and after setting the pace the half of the distance was raced down by E. F. Cooney's Athelstan and failed to get into the money. Callahan sent Athelstan on to win easily by five lengths from S. Burch's Pilgrim, which took second money from William Daniel's Lighter by three lengths. The race was run in 1:53 3-5.

The Greenwich handicap for three-year-olds and upward over the six-furlong course brought another small field to the post, scratches reducing the overnight entry of twelve to four. No more thrilling finish could be desired than the battle put up by N. Loscalzo's Aviack and the Audley Farm's Fair Phantom, the former gaining the decision over the four-year-old filly by just a nose. Fair Phantom set the pace for the quartet all the way to the finish line, Aviack running second for the Rancocas Stable's Knobbie third and J. S. Cosden's Blazes bringing up the rear.

Corcoran held Aviack a couple of lengths behind Fair Phantom all the way down the stretch well into the homestretch, and then he sent the chestnut daughter of Jack Atkin up to challenge the leader. At the end Aviack just nodded her nose in front. The six furlongs was run in the fast time of 1:11 under the track conditions.

Knobbie carried top weight of 118 pounds and could not give nine to the winner in a very speedy filly which has won at Saratoga and has been in the money all but once in nine starts this season. Her victory was worth $1,050 to her owner. Knobbie was the favorite at 13 to 10, with Aviack closing at 11 to 5.

Favorite Finishes Third.

Four likewise made up the field in the Wilton Handicap for mares over a mile route, with another favorite going down when the Idle Hour Stock Farm's three-year-old Blossom Time finished third, after leading all the way to the turn for home. At that point Sande, who had the mount on Marshall Field's Emotion, sent the four-year-old out in front and won handily by a couple of lengths from the Audley Farm's Miss Cerina, which came up to take second money away from Blossom Time. The race was run in the good time of 1:38 1-5. Blossom Time opened as an odds-on favorite at 7 to 10, but receded to 6 to 5 at post time, while Emotion was quoted at 3 to 1.

Fourteen maiden two-year-olds went to the post in the claiming event over the course of five and a half furlongs and it took five minutes before the juveniles were straightened and then they were sent away only to a fair start. The winner was the Rancocas Stable's Stanwix, a chestnut son of Ballot, making his second start of his racing career. The colt was away slowly and did not appear to be a contender until well into the homestretch.

George Peterson's Shine On showed the way for a space, giving way to Ormesvale of the R. T. Wilson Stable. Both weakened in the final drive, Bees showing in front as they straightened out for home. Sande, meantime, had brought Stanwix up from the rear and gave him a vigorous ride in the last sixteenth to beat Rose Pine by a head at the wire. The latter, with Burns in the saddle, got up in time to win her second money by half a length from Bees. The short end went to Bees by a margin of two lengths from the Greentree Stable's Fredericktown.

The winner was the public choice, closing at 5 to 2; Huon Pine was at 10 to 1 and Bees at 7 to 1. The Quincy Stable's Parvenu, second choice at 7 to 2, finished fifth. They ran the race in 1:07 1-5

Jockey Kelly Hurt.

The Glen Riddle Farm's five-year-old chestnut gelding Boss John was the best in the Hudson Falls Steeplechase over the course of about two miles through the field. Akers held the son of The Manager behind the pace set by Arthur Fowler's Fane Lady until they rounded the last turn and then came on to win in a fine drive by two and a half lengths. The mare was eight lengths in front of the Driftwood Farm's Wheat King. Jockey C. K. Harrison Jr.'s Reasrf took a bad tumble and threw Jockey A. Kelly heavily. At one time R looked as if he was dangerously injured, but he revived after being taken to the jockeys' house and later was able to go home.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 20.—The smallest crowd of the season braved the chilly breezes this evening for the first of the final week of the yearling sales of the Saratoga season. There was a mixed offering of yearlings and breeding stock, the property of Edward McLean of Washington, and the complete dispersal of the Ayondale Farm of Rochester, N. Y.

There was a total of thirty-one head offered, which realized $8,700, an average of $280. Top price of the evening was $950, which was brought by a bay filly by imported Lough Foyle out of imported The Minx 2d, the buyer being George Goodacre. Prices ranged down to $100, no bids being received for many of the offerings. It was the poorest of all the sales of the current season.

only defeat as a three-year-old came in the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico. Until Zev went amiss by stepping on a stone at Belmont Park in training during the Aqueduct meeting he appeared to be on the way toward a place in the hearts of the racing public equal to that held by Man o' War, the champion, and Exterminator, the iron horse.

Most every one connected with the turf would like to see Zev meet the English Derby winner. The brown colt is in the midst of his training here in preparation for his return to the races and Sam Hildreth, his trainer, said last week: "Zev's doing fine." When he will again show under silks is a question that only his work and condition can determine. He is working regularly, his last workout being reported as a mile and a quarter in 2:12. He may be started late in the present meeting, or he may be reserved to start in the Lawrence Realisation at Belmont Park, for which he is eligible.

Papyrus's Sire Bred Here.

Papyrus, which is coming to the United States as the leading three-year-old of the English turf, is the son of the American bred sire, Tracery, bred by Major August Belmont, one of the moving spirits in arranging the present international race, at his nursery stud in Kentucky. Papyrus's dam, Miss Matty, is a daughter of Marcovil, a son of Marco.

The pedigree reads:

Papyrus, by Tracery—Miss Matty, by Marcovil, son of Marco, from Simoniath, by St. Simon, from Philomath, by Philamon, by Solon, from Chrysalis, by Lecturer, from Winged, by Artillery, from Queen Bee, by Artillery.

Tracery, which was the son of the great Rock Sand, was sold by Major Belmont to Senor Unsue of Argentina a few years ago for the record price of $265,000.

JUST DAVID WINS OPENING DAY TROT

PEARL BENBOE IS NINTH

CLEVELAND, Aug. 20 (Associated Press).—Just David, second choice in the betting, won the North Randall $5,000 purse, feature on today's Grand Circuit opening program, from one of the best fields of 2:10 class trotters ever to face the starter here. The winner, driven by Charley Valentine of Columbus, Ohio, took the first two heats and was a close third in the final heat after a break. This mile went to Fayette National, which won second money. Taurida was third.

Pearl Benboe, Tom Murphy's $25,000 mare and favorite to win the event, went into a break in the stretch run in each heat and finished a bad ninth. However, Murphy maintained his lead in driving winners, taking two firsts with Merriman and Count Bugle today.

The Tanner plan of three-heat racing was inaugurated here today and will be continued for the rest of the meeting. It provides for the elimination of the third heat if one horse wins the first two. This plan applies only to purse events, the early closing stakes continuing to be raced under the old system.

WILL GO TO ENGLAND.

Miss Collett, National Golf Champion, Plans Trip Next Spring.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 20.—Miss Glenna Collett of this city, national woman's golf champion, expects to retain her title in the national tournament at the Westchester Biltmore Country Club beginning Oct. 1, and declares her intention of going to England, possibly in the Spring, although she dislikes the idea of playing in the "Island of Fogs." Miss Collett feels that the necessity of playing in wet weather in heavy clothes is a severe handicap to the American golfer accustomed to freedom in dress.

UMPIRE'S RIBS FRACTURED.

Eastern League Official Out for 30 Days as Result of Riot.

HARTFORD, Conn., Aug. 20.—Hughie Rorty, local member of the Eastern League Staff of Umpires, will not officiate again for a month. Rorty was hurt during a riot after a game in Bridgeport yesterday. An X-ray picture of Rorty's body today disclosed three fractured ribs.

The attack on Rorty has apparently brought the so-called "open season" on umpires to a close. Since the start of the present race, the officials have been subjected to all sorts of verbal abuse, with pop bottle showers thrown in occasionally. Dan O'Neil, President of the League, plans to investigate the trouble.

Hammer Beaten by Jeskid.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 20.—K. O. Jeskie, Toledo lightweight, won the judges' decision over Eyer Hammer of Chicago in a slow twelve-round bout here tonight. The bout was twice halted by the referee, who warned the boxers for alleged "stalling."

Miss Stirling Lowers Record By Shooting 73 at East Lake

According to word received from O. B. Keeler of Atlanta, Ga., Miss Alexa Stirling, now a resident of this city and holder of the women's metropolitan golf championship, is determined to make a strong bid to regain both the Canadian and national women's golf crowns. Unlike last year when she entered the national women's championship with comparatively little practice, the little Southerner is now working hard with her game under the direction of Stewart Maiden, known as "Kittie, the Maker of Champions." It was Maiden who taught both Miss Stirling and Bobby Jones. That the plan is producing results is seen in a recent round Miss Stirling played over the East Lake course. Her score, made from the back tees, was 73, which lowered her best previous record by seven strokes. On another attempt she had a 36 for the first nine holes. A continuance in this form will make her a dangerous contestant in both national tournaments in which she will compete.

TORONTO FOUR WINS WELLESLEY TROPHY

Special to The New York Times.

ALEXANDRIA BAY, N. Y., Aug. 20.—In the finals for the Wellesley Island Cup today at the Thousand Islands Polo Field on Wellesley Island, Toronto's four defeated the Montreal team by a score of 11 to 5. Four of Toronto's goals were received in handicap.

Marshall scored the first goal for Toronto. In the toss MacBrien secured the ball and after a brilliant rush down the field missed the goal by a yard. On a nice backhand shot by Oglivie, MacDougall got the ball and carried it toward his goal and Gordon scored for Montreal. Case then got the ball in the toss and carried it swiftly down the field to within a few feet of the goal, but made a splendid save. A few minutes later General MacBrien scored for Montreal and Cowan, who played a splendid game, also scored.

In the scrimmage at the beginning of the fourth period Case secured the ball and tallied for his team. Cowan and Laidlaw each scored a goal for Toronto and Major MacDougall tallied for Montreal in the fifth period. Case, who played a brilliant game for his team, scored, and in the sixth MacBrien rolled a goal. In the eighth Cowan and MacDougall also counted.

The second match was between the Myopia Seagulls and the Thousand Islands and the latter team was defeated in a close contest by a score of 9 to 8. Myopia gave a handicap of three goals to the Thousand Island team.

Miles and Bostwick played brilliantly for their team and Shaw, and Mandell shared the star honors on Myopia's team. About the middle of the first period Shaw was hit in the chest by a ball, but recovered sufficiently within a few minutes to attack the Thousand Islanders strongly and make five tallies.

In the first period Miles made a beautiful shot at centre field and carried the ball within a few feet of the goal and Bostwick scored. In the second, third and third periods neither team scored, but there was good hard playing up and down the field. In the fourth Mandell scored one. In the fifth Clark and Miles each tallied for the Thousand Islands. In the sixth Shaw rolled one goal and Mandell again scored. In the seventh Shaw tallied twice and Mandell shot one goal. Bostwick and Miles each rolled a goal in the eighth, as did Shaw and Mandell.

QUEEN MAB WINS YACHT RACE PRIZE

MAISIE IS SLOOP VICTOR

Special to The New York Times.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., Aug. 20.—In the fourth racing run of the New York Yacht Club cruise, sailed in light and fluky airs, with the wind gentle and almost around the compass during the day, the schooner Queen Mab, owned by Captain Nathaniel Ayres, won the cup offered by Commodore Vanderbilt in the schooner class today and Harold Tobey's Larchmont thirty-nine-footer Maisie won the cup for sloops. It was a case of racing in baffling airs that left some of the yachts becalmed at times, while others, more fortunate in finding the breeze, came along in the lead.

Queen Mab, whose skipper was lucky in picking up some favoring airs as the yachts sailed eastward in Vineyard Sound, defeated her nearest competitor, Irolita, on corrected time, by over twenty-one minutes. There were six schooners racing and William E. Iselin's Enchantress led the fleet home, but was defeated by all the others on corrected time. Irolita won in the race for Class D schooners and Sonnica in a special race for Classes B and C.

F. D. M. Strachan's fifty-footer Harpoon once more defeated Virginia; Squaw won the forty-foot class, with Mistrial second, Pampero third; Alice defeated Butterfly in a special class of sloops and S. C. Pierle's Oriole won in the thirty-foot class, leading from start to finish. Seven of the thirty-footers raced. The course sailed took them over a distance of thirty-nine and one-half nautical miles, with the starting line between the committee boat and the buoy at Tye Ledge, outside Mattapoisett, thence down Buzzards Bay to Hen and Chickens light vessel, and then through Vineyard Sound eastward to the finish line outside this harbor.

Light Northeast Breeze.

When the starting signal was given for the thirty-footers at 10:10 o'clock there was a light northeast breeze blowing which sent the yachts along at a good clip. Oriole had the best of the start, followed by Countess, Nautilus Minx, Alice, Adios and Lena. Oriole sailed well during the day and was defeated by Maisie, the thirty-nine-footer, by only fifteen seconds on corrected time.

The schooners were sent away at 10:10:15 and Irolita had the best of the others, crossing near the committee boat, with Vagrant just to leeward. Enchantress was next and Sonnica passed through Irolita's lee. Sonnica, Queen Mab and Wildfire followed. All crossed on the starboard tack and set balloon jibs for the broad reach to Hen and Chickens.

Sonnica and Vagrant tried tacking down the wind, but Irolita set a spinnaker and held the starboard tack, as did Wildfire and Queen Mab. Sonnica and Vagrant were astern of these three from Hen and Chickens, but caught a good slant of air and Sonnica was half a mile ahead of Enchantress the next time they came together. Soon after Enchantress caught a breeze and was the leading boat at the lightship. The wind had hauled to south-southeast, making the leg to Hen and Chickens a close reach.

Enchantress rounded at 1:28:50, Sonnica at 1:33:45, and Vagrant at 1:40:06. Squaw was the next boat around, at 1:43:15, beating the fifty-footer Virginia to the lightship. Harpoon was next, with Wildfire and Queen Mab following. The next leg of four miles to Vineyard Sound lightship was a beat to windward, but the breeze was full of soft spots.

Enchantress took a long hitch in toward Penikese Island, lost the breeze and was beaten, while Vagrant, skirting around Hen and Chickens, picked up a wandering puff and was soon on even terms with the Iselin schooner. Enchantress then pulled out in the fickle breeze and at Vineyard Sound lightship was eight minutes ahead of the flagship Wildfire, the Astor Cup winner, was unlucky, and was the fourth schooner at this mark.

Enchantress Opens Lead.

After rounding Vineyard lightship, Enchantress opened up a big lead on the others and held it until the Middle Ground buoy was reached, when she ran into a flat calm and all the leading boats were hung up. Then a southerly breeze came in and brought the rest of the fleet up to the leading boats.

The new breeze proved to be a true one and blew with considerable strength while the yachts were finishing the cups offered by Vice Commodore, the finish line at 5:41:51. Vagrant at 5:45, and Wildfire at 5:48:50. Queen Mab was the last of the schooners to finish at 5:50:45, but was the winner on corrected time.

Tomorrow the fleet will have a squadron run back to Newport, the prizes being the cups offered by Vice-Commodore George Nichols. The race for the King's Cup will be sailed on Wednesday.

KINSEY BROTHERS BEATEN AT TENNIS

SCORES ARE 6-3, 6-3, 6-3

Johnston and Griffin, Tilden and Norton Among Teams to Advance —Upsets in Junior Play.

Special to The New York Times.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 20.—Further complications set in today in the American Davis Cup situation when Robert and Howard Kinsey of California, one of the combinations being considered for selection on the team that will meet Australia in the challenge round at Forest Hills, were defeated by Manuel Alonso of Spain and Wallace F. Johnson of Philadelphia in the opening round of the national lawn tennis doubles championship at the Longwood Cricket Club. The victory of Alonso and Johnson was as decisive as it was surprising. They won in three straight sets at 6—3, 6—3, 6—3. This setback of the second ranking team in the country, coming only a few days after the defeat of R. Norris Williams and Watson Washburn by Phillip Neer and James Davies of Stanford at Newport, leaves William M. Johnston and Clarence E. Griffin of California, three times holders of the national doubles title, as the only one of the three pairs that have maintained a clean escutcheon. This might be said to clarify the situation, instead of complicating it.

This upset was the only one of the opening day of the tournament. With but thirty-one teams entered, representing the best talent in the country, in addition to several foreign Davis Cup combinations, the play was of an unusually high order. So many matches of interest were going on at the same time that the large gallery present hardly knew where to turn its attention.

Johnston and Griffin, playing easily, and winning their points with little effort on flashing drives that were ingenuously placed, eliminated John Barr and Leven Jester of Dallas, Texas, Southwestern champions, at 6—3, 6—1, 6—3.

Tilden-Norton Extended.

William T. Tilden 2d, the champion, and B. I. C. Norton of South Africa were put to a severe test in their first appearance as a double combination in this country. Neer and Davies, the pair that put out Williams and Washburn at Newport, gave the Wimbledon singles finalists of 1921 a stiff battle for four sets before submitting at 4—6, 6—3, 7—5, 6—3. Vincent Richards and Dean Mathey of New York, the new combination that was formed when the Yonkers youth and Tilden parted company as the titleholders, never extended themselves in defeating Wesley Howels and Cyril Hammond of Utah, intermountain champions, at 6—2, 6—1, 6—2. Williams and Washburn put out Commander Leonard Darby of Australia and Carl Fischer of Cynwas, Pa., in straight sets, allowing them only three games.

Both of the Australian Davis Cup teams advanced with difficulty. Captain James O. Anderson and J. B. Hawkes lost the first set of their match with Leon de Turren and H. V. Johns of Seattle, Pacific Northwest champions, before they were able to win at 2—6, 6—3, 6—3, 6—3. I. D. McInnes and W. E. Schlesinger, the two youthful members of the antipodean combination, were tamed in five sets by Clyde Curry and Charles K. Shaw of Providence, the scores being 6—4, 2—6, 6—3, 6—3, 6—3. Rene Lacoste and Jacques Brugnon of the French cup team gained their second round bracket in straight sets at the expense of Raymond B. Bidwell and W. E. Porter of Boston, winning at 6—2, 6—1, 6—4.

Play in the national junior and boy championships was started in the morning on the courts at the old Longwood Club and continued in the afternoon while the men's doubles pere in progress at Chestnut Hill. Many players of prominence fell during the completion of two rounds of play in the junior event. David O'Loughlin of Pittsburg and Julius Sagalowsky of Indianapolis, boy champions respectively in 1922 and 1921, were put out in their first match. Both drew byes in the first round.

O'Loughlin was eliminated by Alan Herrington of Hollywood, Cal., at 6—3, 6—3. Sagalowsky put up a stiff battle before he bowed to Frank Donovan of Detroit at 6—4, 2—6, 6—1. Among the other prominent winners during the day were Gail Borden of Easthampton, N. Y., who put out in succession Brainerd Whitbeck of New York, 6—1, 6—4, 6—4, and Charles Leslie, Canadian junior titleholder, 6—4, 6—4.

Appel Also Advances.

George Lott of Chicago also was a double winner, eliminating Harry Shaw and John Van Ryn of East Orange, N. J., each at 6—2, 6—2. Kenneth Appel, also of East Orange, was one of the two juniors to reach the round before the mid-finals, drawing a bye and defeating two opponents.

E. G. Chandler of San Francisco was the other to gain this bracket when he defeated William Einsmann of Astoria, N. Y., at 6—3, 6—2. Horace Orser of Stuyvesant High School, New York, defeated C. C. Haines of Texas in the second round in another of the feature matches of the day, winning by the comfortable margin of 6—2, 6—3.

The victory of Alonso and Johnson over the Kinsey brothers was achieved through both the deadly smashing of Alonso, ably partnered by the Philadelphian and the lack of steadiness of Robert Kinsey. Alonso has never played better tennis in this country than he put on today. His overhead work was so accurate and finishing that to place a high ball in front of him was to throw away a point.

The Kinseys showed poor control, if not lack of judgment, in their lobbying when they fed the ball to the Spanish star repeatedly in spite of the fact that he invariably sent the ball back with such terrific speed that it was impossible for either of them to get their racquets on it.

Alonso Is Deadly.

Alonso was not only deadly overhead; his whole game was wonderfully fine. So keyed up was he for the fray that his hands almost shook at times from an abundance of nervous energy. The continental star was intolerable of faulty strokes. When he sliced too sharply on two of his overhead smashes he spoke apologetically to his partner. In spite of the fact that he won the point on both occasions with the shot. On another occasion, when he volleyed the ball into the net, when he had a clear field for a winning shot, his vexation was so great that he bit the handle of his racquet. There are few players who take their tennis so much to heart and are so completely absorbed in their work as is Alonso.

A single break furnished the margin of the international team's victory in the first set. It came in the fourth game at 4—3, when Alonso's smashes and Robert Kinsey's errors paved the way for the points that decided the frame. In the second set Robert Kinsey's errors again started the Californians on the decline.

Their opponents broke through at 4—1 in the third game, but lost the fourth when Johnson's errors nullified his partner's fine work. The internationalists came right back in the fifth and broke through, after which they increased their lead to 4—2 on service. The Californians won the seventh, and then dropped the next two games and the set.

Robert Loses Service.

Robert Kinsey lost his service in the last game after it had gone to deuce. The point that gave the opposing team the advantage was gained on a net cord shot. In the third set Alonso and Johnson started off by taking the first three games. Again it was Robert Kinsey's errors and Alonso's brilliant overhead work that brought about the Kinsey team's downfall. Howard Kinsey was playing brilliant tennis in stretches and his work in general was of a high order, but any good that he accomplished was offset by his brother's faulty strokes. It was plainly an off day for Robert Kinsey.

The Californians won the fourth game, and then Alonso, giving a fine exhibition of sharp volleying, in which some of his returns went back almost parallel to the net, won the fifth. Games followed service in the next three games until Alonso and Johnson had captured six games while their opponents were getting three. Johnson got in some fine overhead smashes at the end.

Davis Cup Committee Will Select Tennis Defenders Today.

The final list of four players who will represent the United States in defense of the Davis Cup against the Australian team will be named this afternoon by the United States Lawn Tennis Association. Under the terms of the international agreement, the personnel of the team must be named ten days before the opening of the matches, which will be held at the West Side Tennis Club Stadium at Forest Hills, L. I., on Aug. 31, Sept. 1 and 3.

Although no one in authority has intimated what the selections will be, it is considered practically certain that two of the choices will again fall to William T. Tilden 2d of Philadelphia, the national champion, and William M. Johnston of San Francisco, this year's Wimbledon winner.

The committee making the selection is composed of Julian S. Myrick, George T. Adee, Karl H. Behr, Louis E. Dalley, Dwight F. Davis, Harold H. Hackett, Henry W. Slocum, Edwin W. Torrey, Holcombe Ward, Joseph W. Wear, George W. Wightman and Robert D. Wrenn.

The announcement of the United States cup defenders is expected to give added impetus to interest in the forthcoming matches. Many of the spectators who attended the closing days' play in the womens' titular tournament immediately made reservations for the Davis Cup contests, requesting in some cases the same seats that they occupied on Friday's and Saturday's contests. Harry Parker, whose office at 101 Park Avenue is conducting the advance ticket sale, is authority for the statement that requests for Davis Cup reservations are coming from all sections of the country.

Play in the Quaker Ridge tournament at the New Rochelle Tennis Club yesterday reached the round before the semi-finals. One upset occurred in the day's play when Warren E. Schoenmaker, the former Yale player, by default and later defeated Biltchick, 6—3, 6—0, 6—2. Ernest Kuhn furnished one of the day's features when after being on the verge of defeat at the hands of Fred Pianisani, he rallied and won the match. The scores were 2—6, 7—5, 6—2.

The summaries:

Third Round—Warren E. Osgood won from S. V. Schoonmaker by default; Ernest Kuhn defeated Fred Pianisani, 3—6, 7—5, 6—2.

U. S. Women Can Do No More Than Tie English at Tennis

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 20.—By the fortune of the draw America can do no more than gain a tie by tomorrow's play in the women's international tennis matches at the Casino Club courts here. England went into the lead today by taking two of the four singles matches and the only doubles event, making the score tonight England 3, America 2. Of the three matches scheduled for tomorrow only one will count in the international scoring. The doubles will bring together Mrs. Geraldine Beamish and Mrs. R. C. Clayton of England and Miss Lilian Scharman and Miss Ceres Baker, representing America. In the singles the players will meet fellow-country women, because of the draw. Mrs. Molla B. Mallory will play Miss Eleanor Goss, and Mrs. B. C. Covell will have as her opponent Mrs. Clayton. The singles are drawn on a tournament basis, so that they will count in the national ranking at the end of the season. Because of this arrangement the draw cannot be changed, officials said tonight.

ENGLISH TAKE LEAD IN WOMEN'S TENNIS

MRS. MALLORY TRIUMPHS

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 20.—British and American women tennis players divided four singles matches on the Casino Courts here today and the English team won the doubles match. Mrs. Molla Mallory, former national champion, defeated Mrs. Geraldine Beamish, 6—3, 6—1, and Miss Eleanora Goss defeated Miss Kathleen McKane, 7—5, 6—4.

Great Britain's victories in the singles were accomplished by Mrs. R. C. Clayton, who defeated Miss Lilian Scharman, 6—3, 3—6, 6—2, and Mrs. B. C. Covell, who won from Miss Leslie Bancroft, 6—1, 6—0.

Mrs. Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman and Miss Goss encountered Miss McKane and Mrs. Covell in the doubles. Each pair had defeated the other once and both were determined on gaining the deciding victory. The Americans defeated the two British women in the international matches, while the English pair returned the defeat in the national doubles championship. The Britons were again the victors today, 6—4, 6—6, turning back the Americans in the second set when they needed only one point to win the frame and tie the score.

The singles play is sanctioned by the United States Lawn Tennis Association and will count in the national rankings for the year, but the doubles matches are being played only in the form of exhibitions. The winners of today's singles will meet tomorrow in the two final matches, while a second doubles exhibition will complete the series of international meetings.

Mrs. Mallory Supreme.

Mrs. Mallory was supreme today, outmanoeuvring her opponent and scoring with beautifully executed placements. The former American champion drove with sharp, accurate force to the alternating corners of the court, and at the crucial moments reversed her methods, constantly passing Mrs. Beamish as she darted in the wrong direction.

In the first set Mrs. Mallory scored thirty-seven points, nineteen of which were accomplished by placement aces. She scored twelve more placement aces in the second set, in which her total of points was 31.

Mrs. Beamish started off in formidable fashion, taking the first two games, both of which went to deuce, but then Mrs. Mallory found her strength and took the next two games at love and the third at 3—3. Mrs. Beamish took the sixth as the American was forced into error making. But with a string of placement aces that were impregnable Mrs. Mallory took the next three innings for the set at 6—3.

Although Mrs. Mallory took the second frame at 6—1, Mrs. Beamish's defense was stronger than the score indicates, five of the seven games going to deuce for a decision. But Mrs. Mallory's ability to cover the court and manoeuvre her opponent where her placements could be scored proved too much for the Englishwoman.

Miss Goss was forced to her best against the English champion. Miss Goss carried the attack to her opponent at all times, striving to earn her points with aces. In the first set the American led at 5—3 and twice in the ninth game needed only one point for the set, but Miss McKane brought the issue to deuce together and took that game and then deuced the set by capturing the next. Miss Goss came back strong and ran out the next two with the loss of only one point, taking the set at 7—5.

In the second game followed service until the count had reached 4—all, each placer following the ball to the net and killing the other's returns for earned points, but Miss Goss broke through in the ninth game at love and took the next for the set and match, 6—4.

Miss Scharman Tires.

Miss Scharman put up a steady fight in her match with Mrs. Clayton, but after each had won a set the Brooklyn girl tired perceptibly, and the English player found little difficulty in winning the deciding frame at 6—2.

Miss Bancroft proved unequal to the task set for her by Mrs. Covell, who won as she pleased, losing only one game in two sets.

Miss McKane and Mrs. Covell took the opening set of the doubles match at 6—4, the greater accuracy of the English pair told in the end, although it was Miss Goss who carried the burden of the attack. She forced with every stroke, abandoning all caution in her effort to earn her points on placements. It was this daring display which finally caused the downfall of the Americans, for with the British women leading at 5—4 in games and the score of the tenth inning at deuce Miss Goss served doubles on the next two points, giving the English the opening frame.

The American pair came back with a rush in the second set, taking the first two games by a spectacular display of stroking by both players. They held their lead as game followed service until the British women broke through in the ninth, bringing the contest to 5—4 with the Americans leading. In the next game Miss Goss and Mrs. Wightman were within one point of the set when they lost 40—30, but the English forces checked the rally and came from behind to tie the count at 5—all. They took the next also and led at 6—5, but this time the Americans produced a strong defense and again tied the count. But the English champions were not to be denied and they ran out the next two games for the set and match, 8—6.

JUNIORS TO PLAY TENNIS.

Rockaway Hunting Club Team Tourney Starts Tomorrow.

The Rockaway Hunting Club's annual invitation club team tennis tournament for juniors 19 years of age and under will be played at Cedarhurst, L. I., tomorrow and Thursday. Nine clubs will be represented by teams. Those that competed last year include the Midstone Club, the Meadow Club, Piping Rock Club, Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club and the Islip Tennis Club. Four new competitors will send teams representing the Baltimore Country Club, Newport Lawn Tennis Club, Germantown Cricket Club of Philadelphia and the Point Judith Country Club of Narragansett, R. I.

This event was organized by the Rockaway Hunting Club two years ago to promote interest in tennis among junior members of the leading Eastern country and tennis clubs. A handsome challenge cup was presented for initial competition with the understanding that the club winning it three times would retain permanent possession of the trophy. These conditions have now been changed and the trophy is now a perpetual challenge cup.

The club winning it each season retains possession of the same until the following year. Replicas of the cup are given to each member of the winning team. Under the revised conditions the winning club, if it is located within reasonable distance from New York, has the privilege to stage the tournament the following season. Otherwise, the succeeding tournament is to be played at Cedarhurst, L. I.

Tennis Championship Postponed.

The Manhattan doubles championships which were scheduled to begin at the New York Tennis Club tomorrow were called off yesterday by the club officials because of a lack of interest. After opening the entries the tournament committee reported that there were not enough prospective participants to justify holding the tourney.

Four Star Women Swimmers Leave to Race in the West

Four of the leading girl stars of the Women's Swimming Association of New York, the Misses Gertrude Ederle, Aileen Riggin, Virginia Whitesack and Ethel McGary, set out in quest of fresh laurels yesterday afternoon. They will be in Indianapolis from Thursday to Saturday and take part there in the National A. A. U. Senior 880-yard swimming championship, an invitation 400-yard relay race, in which they will face the foremost teams of the Middle West, and several other contests. Then they will proceed to Chicago, where they are entered for the National Senior title tests at fifty yards, free style, and 150 yards, back stroke.

GOURDIN MAY NOT DEFEND PENTATHLON

Conflict in Dates Likely to Force Broad Jumper to Abandon Trip West.

Unless there is a revision in plans for holding the annual championship test, it is probable Ned Gourdin, holder of the world's running broad jump record, will not defend his national pentathlon title this year. Gourdin, as part of a campaign to make the American Olympic team as a broad jumper, has entered for his specialty at the outdoor athletic carnival of the Wilco A. A. to be held on Sept. 8 at the Yankee Stadium.

The national pentathlon championship, which has been awarded to Detroit, is scheduled for the same date. According to Hugh Hirshon, chairman of the Wilco Games Committee, Gourdin has notified the Detroit athletic authorities that unless the date for the pentathlon is changed so as not to conflict with the Yankee Stadium carnival he will not be able to compete in defense of his title.

Gourdin has a world's record of 25 feet 8 inches for the running broad jump. He is directing his activities almost exclusively to the jumping pit in an effort to attain form which will bring him distinction as the leading broad jumper in the country, thus insuring him a berth on the team which will make the journey of conquest to Paris for the Olympic games next year.

The former Harvard star is promised a clash with DeHart Hubbard, University of Michigan jumper, in the Wilco carnival. Hubbard twice has cleared over 25 feet in the jumping pit and is a dangerous rival of Gourdin's for national supremacy in this test. Albert Rose of the University of Pennsylvania and Paul Courtois, New York A. C. star, are other prospective competitors in the Wilco competition, which promises an interesting clash among the foremost broad jumpers of the country.

BICYCLE STARS IN RACE.

A one-hour motor-paced team race will be one of the features tonight at the New York Velodrome bicycling carnival. Three teams are scheduled to strive for the premier prize. The combinations are Vincent Madonna, Italy, and Clifford Papworth; Clarence Carman and Lawrence Gaffney, and Percy Lawrence and Emil Aeris. The Madonna-Papworth team is favored to win the event. The race will be decided on a point basis, five points being awarded to the team leading at the end of each five miles and twenty-five points being awarded to the team leading at the end of the hour.

Arthur Spencer, Pete Van Kempen, Cecil Walker, Orlando Piani, Alf Goullet and Al Grenda are the foremost riders entered in a two-mile sprint race against Willie Spencer, recent winner of the American title. This race will be run in nine heats, exclusive of semi-finals. It is expected to provide a final heat in which three of the speediest cyclists of the country will engage. There will also be a two-mile consolation, a two-mile handicap and a mile-and-out invitation race for professionals. Amateur riders will compete in a two-thirds of a mile handicap, a two-mile Class A invitation race and a one-mile consolation.

RULES OUT TWO GAMES.

President Hickey Finds Milwaukee Used Ineligible Player.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Two baseball games which Milwaukee won from the Indianapolis Club of the American Association while playing Art Bues in the Brewers' line-up, today were thrown out by Thomas J. Hickey, President of the league. Hickey, acting on a protest from the Indianapolis Club, found that Bues was an ineligible player.

In 1922, Hickey said, Bues, who was the property of the Louisville Club, had been placed on the voluntary retired list. The Milwaukee Club gained permission from the Louisville Club to employ Bues and he reported. Investigation by Hickey developed that Bues by their lead as game followed service until the British women broke through in the ninth, bringing the contest to 5—4 with the Americans leading. In the next game Miss Goss and Mrs. Wightman were within one point of the set when they lost 40—30, but the English forces checked the rally and came from behind to tie the count at 5—all. They took the next also and led at 6—5, but this time the Americans produced a strong defense and again tied the count. But the English champions were not to be denied and they ran out the next two games for the set and match, 8—6.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 20 (Associated Press).—Phil Ball, principal stockholder of the St. Louis Americans, today issued a statement designed to clarify the wording of his recent telegram announcing the release of Lee Fohl as manager. The telegram stated Fohl was released for the "good of the game and the morale of the players," and today's statement adds that the manager was released "for the good of the game as played by the Browns and for the morale of the Browns' team."

The statement was issued following a conference of Mr. Fohl with Mr. Ball. The statement was satisfactory to him, Mr. Fohl said.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKE HOPATCONG, N. J., Aug. 20.—Two hours' play and an eighteen-move victory in the twelfth and semi-final round today enabled Marshall, the United States chess champion, to hold his lead in the masters' tournament of the ninth American Chess Congress at the Hotel Alamac. Sournin of Washington opposed the famous international expert, but struck his colors as soon as Marshall had his big guns in action.

The game was surprisingly brief, but this was due to two pawn advances that Sournin did not reckon with in time. The manoeuvre so surprised the capital city player that in trying to save a piece he made a move which, as he thought, protected it. Instead, he should have made an exchange, even though it left the champion with the superior position.

As matters went Sournin found himself a clear piece behind. His resignation then followed as an act of courtesy. The score of Marshall advanced to 10 to 2, comprising eight wins and four draws games. Unless Hodges should be successful in the final game tomorrow, the leader will go through without having had a single reverse scored against him.

Close behind Marshall comes Kupchik of New York, who won his game from Chajes after an exciting struggle. Kupchik's score is 9½-2½ despite the fact that he lost two games to Marshall and Lasker, respectively. This is explained by the fact that he has drawn only one of his games the one with Tenner of Syracuse. Palmer will be Kupchik's opponent tomorrow. His only chance for chief prize is in the event of his winning and Marshall losing. He has also a fair chance of a tie for first place.

Janowski Has Hard Fight.

Janowski of Paris, who was in sore need of an extra point so that he might keep his place in the race, had a hard fight on his hands with Santasiere, the young City College expert of the Marshall Chess Club. The latter, in a stonewall variation of the queen's pawn game, weathered the storm after Janowski was a pawn ahead and later captured another. Santasiere, who had also drawn against Marshall and Lasker, fought back in good style and was rewarded for his efforts when he escaped into a rook and pawn ending, with only one pawn minus.

After two adjournments each was left with a rook and pawn, which Janowski thought it to be his duty to try to win. In all likelihood this game will end in a draw, in which case Janowski will drop to third place. Janowski's opponent tomorrow will be Chajes.

Fourth place is still in the possession of Lasker of Chicago, who today defeated Palmer of Toledo. Keeping pace with Lasker is Schapiro of Columbia University, who is champion of the Manhattan Chess Club. Schapiro had a most eventful game with Hodges, in which he was three pawns down at one time. His attack, however, was so well calculated that eventually he came through with two powerful bishops against a rook. His pawn position, too, was superior.

One of the best games of the tournament, which may be entered for the brilliancy prize, was won by Black of Syracuse from Tenner of New York. Black had Tenner in the grip of a fine combination which permitted him to offer his queen as a sacrifice for several moves. In each case checkmate would have followed capture. This victory placed Black ahead of Chajes in the score table, so that he is within reach of fifth place in case any of those ahead of him should break down tomorrow.

Maxim Congratulates Marshall.

Morrison, the Canadian champion, won a nicely calculated ending from Bigelow of New York. There were bishops on squares of different colors, but the Toronto man won out in spite of this handicap.

Hudson Maxim, whose guests the players were last week, paid a farewell visit to the congress today and congratulated Marshall upon his splendid score. The inventor recalled that Marshall had beaten him at his own war game.

Board 6—Janowski, Paris, vs. Santasiere, New York; adjourned after 60 moves.

The longest game of the tournament was the one between Bigelow and Sournin, adjourned from the seventh round. It was drawn in 118 moves after 14 hours and 11 minutes of play.

In the thirteenth and final round tomorrow the pairings will be as follows: Hodges vs. Marshall; Santasiere vs. Schapiro; Chajes vs. Janowski; Palmer vs. Kupchik; Black vs. Lasker; Bigelow vs. Tenner, and Sournin vs. Morrison.

HARD ON THE PESSIMISTS.

Some of our weeping philosophers, just returned from Europe, are having experiences like that of Dr. JOHNSON'S old college friend. He told the doctor that he had often tried hard to be philosophical, but that somehow "cheerfulness always broke through." Certainly a great many cheerful dispatches from Europe break through, almost before our despondent travelers have finished unpacking their trunkfuls of gloom. In the first place, the crops are nearly everywhere reported to be unusually good. France will grow more wheat this year than ever before in her history. The agricultural news from Poland and Rumania and Bulgaria, also from Hungary and the other secession States, is good. The outlook for the harvest in Russia and also in Germany is reported excellent. It is evident, therefore, that the great majority of the people in Europe are now freed from the spectre of starvation. They have gone to work on the soil, the great source of the production of wealth, and are surely going to have enough to eat this coming Winter. That fact cannot fail to be of great political significance. There will not be mobs of hungry men threatening a revolution.

Many other reports reach America about as soon as our discouraged voyagers, all of a sort to discredit their prophecies of dire and instant ruin in Europe. The facts quickly catch up with the theories and leave them a good deal shattered. Last week, for example, we were told that France had finally thrown aside her mask. She stood revealed as the great imperialistic and military plotter, resolved to break with England and to keep her iron heel on the breast of prostrate Germany, while proceeding to execute her plan to dominate the whole of the Continent. But in only a few days a great change visibly came over the spirit of this horrifying dream. The French Prime Minister declares that France would consider it "criminal" to do anything to weaken the Entente with England. Moreover, communications are proceeding between Germany and France looking to a settlement; the great industrialists of the two countries being notably active in trying to bring about a compromise. As for England and France, far from having reached that definite rupture over which so many pessimists were gloating, they are still negotiating, and the belief in both countries is that the next step will be a general conference of all the Allied Prime Ministers in the hope of working out a plan of adjustment agreeable to them all.

Turning to conditions at home, our American revelers in gloom find their comforts being taken away from them one after another. The prospect of being able to avert a strike in the hard coal mines is brighter than for several weeks past. As regards the general status of business and employment, official reports of the Department of Labor and surveys by trade associations indicate, in the words of Director JOHNS of the Employment Service, "a healthy undertone and a splendid spirit of optimism practically throughout the entire industrial field." Even the maligned railroads are making high records for efficiency. The ton-miles of freight during the first six months of the present year show the largest tonnage for any similar period in our history, being 7 per cent. greater than the previous top figures set in the first half of 1920.

All these signs of promise are, of course, consistent with the existence of many danger points both in international affairs and domestic conditions. It is no time to settle down into a complacent but blind optimism. Business men and statesmen alike need to be on their guard against perilous tendencies. But, on the other hand, there is no justification for the fears and the cries of alarm raised by so many. When they foretell new wars worse than the worst ever known before, and picture civilization about to be pushed into the abyss, they are open to reproach for not taking into account all the facts—especially the most weighty ones. Merely a few of these have been indicated above, yet any one not irrevocably committed to despair must see that they imply a world not given over wholly to the evil one and still quite livable for the vast majority of mankind.

DISAPPOINTED HOME RULERS.

It is a harmless diversion to cry for the moon, but if she consented to come down, she would prove what is technically known as "a cold proposition." For thirty years the Democrats of the cities, and especially of this city, have been crying for "home rule." It was a magic phrase, a satisfying "slogan." If cities were misgoverned, that was the Legislature's fault. Make them practically autonomous, and New York would be a City of the Sun. But this millennial fervor was chilled just as soon as the realization of the blessed dream was in sight. To put the Democrats in a "hole," the Republican brethren united with them on the Walker-Ullman municipal home rule amendment to the Constitution, thus throwing away, on paper, a considerable part of their powers and business.

Home rule is all right so long as you don't get it. Mayor HYLAN and his friends were sure that they would set up Utopia here if the pettifoggers at Albany would only keep their hands off. The interfering hands can now be kept off; but gloom and silence reign among the professional home rulers. The Mayor could lay many shortcomings of the Municipal Administration on the Legislature. Stripped of that defense, how can he defend himself? He loses the greater part of his political capital. How is it with the up-State Mayors? Isn't their case the same? As for organized labor, it would rather deal with the Legislature direct. The school teachers, the firemen, the police, to say nothing of other citizens, don't want to lose, can't afford to lose, their right to appeal to the Legislature. Governor SMITH has called home rule a "political principle," but he couldn't get any further in the definition of it than the dogmatic example of subway building. When it comes to the application of "principle," those who have howled the loudest for it are, as Governor MILLER said last year, "besieging the Legislature to pass "laws, and me to sign them, violating "the principle of home rule."

The last Legislature, by which the sacred principle, incorporated in the amendment, was approved, cluttered its calendars with hundreds of bills, introduced by Democrats, shamelessly forgetting the immortal principle of home rule. Plenty of intelligent men and women and associations are laboring for home rule; but it is the last thing municipal statesmen want. If it should be put into the Constitution, they could no longer try to shift the responsibility for incapacity, extravagance and misgovernment. By the cry of "home rule" they have sought to cover a multitude of sins. It is their ewe lamb. Shall the confounded Republicans be allowed to slaughter it? The Walker-Ullman amendment is of the widest scope, but it isn't wide enough to satisfy Mayor HYLAN and the other professionals. Any such amendment will always be too broad or too narrow for those fastidious souls.

THE FILIPINO BANK.

The publication in Manila of Governor General WOOD'S report on the failure of the Philippine National Bank throws new light on the antagonism to him of the Filipino leaders. Not only were the facts set forth in the report discreditable, but the refusal of the Legislature to publish it when issued last February opens the members of that body to the charge that they feared the exposure. The Governor General merely elaborated the conditions shown in the preliminary survey of the islands made by the Wood-Forbes mission in 1921. At that time the story of the Philippine National Bank was characterized as "one of the most unfortunate and darkest pages in Philippine history." The bank's affairs were managed with the utmost incompetence; loans to sugar centrals and cocoanut plantations had been made in excessive amounts at boom times with little security; funds had been used for speculation in exchange; the Government's reserves for currency had been dissipated; in short, the credit of the institution had sunk to such a level that banks in Japan and Borneo had refused to honor its notes or drafts.

General WOOD reports that during its six years of operation the bank has lost $52,700,000; that it has practically no reserves behind its $40,000,000 of deposits and $15,000,000 in notes, and that it has on its hands the operation of large properties at a considerable loss. Irregularity or, if a more charitable term is preferred, bad judgment in making loans is charged against Filipino politicians. As early as 1921 the managers of four of the bank's branches whose accounts had been audited were indicted.

It is not a pleasant story. The manner in which the Governor's message was received by the Filipino politicians and newspapers is even less agreeable. Although submitted to the House and Senate in February, and purposely withheld from publication so that these bodies might deliberate upon its contents, it now appears that the majority leaders in both houses did not even make its contents known to the members of other Filipino parties. Furthermore, when finally given to the press by General WOOD, all but one of the Filipino papers refused to publish it, and The Herald, generally supposed to carry out the wishes of the Philippine leader QUEZON, raised the question of the legal right to make public such a State document.

There is an element of ironic humor in two statements attributed to the same newspaper. One resents the publication on the ground that it imperils the credit of the bank. This seems a little superfluous, in view of the known facts. The other reads: "Prominent members of the Legisla-"ture view the present agitation con-"cerning the affairs of the Philippine "National Bank as something more "serious than interference by the "Governor General with prerogatives "of the department secretaries." If the report contains detailed evidence of the way in which the funds of the bank were squandered and the establishment was mismanaged, small wonder that such uneasiness should prevail.

A TOO QUICK DESPAIRER.

Mr. D. H. LAWRENCE, the Sherwood Anderson of England, has dropped in from the Middle West on New York for a moment. He sees her towers and palaces crumbling. Civilization will fall if there is another war and America goes into it. Thousands of cities will perish. Our old friend, The Fall of Rome, will be multitudinously outdone. Nothing but "the inertia of women" keeps the tottering world on its feet. The inertia of women! O HELEN, SEMIRAMIS, CLEOPATRA, ELIZABETH, CATHERINE, Mrs. PANKHURST!

Mr. LAWRENCE sees in his mind's eye "the faces of the big men in their of-"fices. They look as if they were try-"ing hectically to keep it [civilization] "going." Perhaps he misreads those faces. Perhaps they look so weary because their owners have been trying to make their way through the dark, interminable wood, peopled with lunatics, of Mr. LAWRENCE'S and Mr. ANDERSON'S novels. And what if civilization does fall? Sex will still exist; and Mr. LAWRENCE won't have to go out of business. Perhaps, by a happy fortune, civilization will fall so hard and long that those curious treatises will be the sole survivors of our literature. Then they who have the impudence to live after the destruction of this mechanical and monotonous civilization will not go unpunished. Archaeology shouldn't be made too easy; and, painfully deciphering those mysterious monuments, posterity won't wonder that civilization fell.

WILLINGNESS VS. ABILITY TO PAY

While the report of Mr. BASIL MILES to the International Chamber of Commerce confirms the admitted fact that France is not getting out of the Ruhr all the material returns for which she had hoped, it also emphasizes the ability of the Ruhr region, and of all of Germany, to make a quick recovery as soon as the deadlock is ended and the finances are placed on a sound basis. French expectations have undoubtedly been somewhat disappointed, in spite of the fact that France went into the Ruhr as a means to bringing Germany to a sense of her responsibilities rather than as a method of increasing the deliveries in cash and kind for the account of reparations.

Mr. MILES, who is a trained observer with years of experience in studying and investigating international problems, makes particular reference to the reaction of the employers in the Ruhr to the French occupation. Unwilling to work for the French, they have devoted their energies to betterments and improvements.

Accordingly, the factories and plants are being carefully overhauled, new veins of coal are being opened, factory extensions are being pushed forward, and housing schemes for workmen enlarged. A particularly striking example of new development on a large scale is the enormous 1,100-foot lock in the Dortmund-Herne Canal at Buhrort to cost, it is said, 300,000,000 gold marks.

These and many other similar details have been previously reported not only from the Ruhr but also from the rest of Germany. Improving and renovating are among the few effective methods of saving which can be employed under existing monetary conditions. Mr. MILES'S conclusion, so far as the Ruhr is concerned, is that given six months or a year of freedom from allied control the Ruhr, as a result of the improvements now being made, will be able to produce more than at any time heretofore.

What sums Germany can pay are not forecast by Mr. MILES. Mr. IRVING T. BUSH, who also hesitates to name a specific sum, suggests that a first payment be made to France large enough to satisfy her present needs, and that a special commission of business experts determine how much she can pay thereafter, and in what manner. This implies an adjustment from time to time of the amount which remains to be paid, much as is provided for by the Treaty under the powers of the Reparation Commission. How acceptable the free use of such a recourse would be is not clear. Anything that holds out hopes to the Germans of being able to scale down the payments at some future date will be used by them as an incentive to defer rather than to pay up. It would introduce an element of uncertainty which, if not so great, would none the less be as paralyzing as the uncertainty which has attended the previous demands upon Germany.

SPOON RIVER FLOWS TEARS.

Since SHAKESPEARE unlocked his heart—or else didn't—in his sonnets, there has been nothing like the sonnet sequence just published by Mr. EDGAR LEE MASTERS. It is divorce done into poetry. The afflicted author shows how his efforts to prevent having "the one he loved headlined and pictured in the daily press" broke down in consequence of the lady's extreme domesticity. At least two unhappy breakfasts wind in and out of the sonnets, at one of which the poet reached the breaking point when "she begins to pass the toast." Lord BYRON, it will be remembered, was "damnably" irritated by having to see Lady BYRON eat, but that trial was light compared with the poet of Spoon River asked to take a hearty meal while his heart is broken, and also to be compelled to undergo such family torture as is implied in the lines:

Between the stove and sink with feet of lead.

In other respects the tactics of the unfortunate wife were sadly mistaken in dealing with so sensitive a husband. She asked him if he were not happy to be home again with her. She spoke of the pleasure it gave the children to have him in the house once more. Worst of all, she suggested that they go to a concert together. That really ended everything. The poet "turned and staggered out of doors." Still, after many days and several sonnets, he came to a mood of resignation. He began to meditate on the great numbers of his brother-men who also had been divorced. This led to the dying fall of the last sonnet, "His pain is lessened, being democratized." It must have helped a little that his pain was likewise poetized.

WICKED LONDON.

From the report of Sir WILLIAM HORWOOD, Commissioner of London Police for 1922, let us take first the only comforting details. These relate to the clothing and lighting of the London bobbies, an amiable, polite, patient, but, as will be seen, inefficient set of men. In Winter those robust logs are to be encased in trousers "of a dainty cloth equal to that sup-"plied to Inspectors, instead of the "harsh stuff of former days." Will not this luxury have a demoralizing effect? Conservatives will regret the change in the lighting system. An electric concern is to replace the dim, familiar oil lamp on the belt. This mechanical improvement only makes sharper the demoralization of London morals which the Commissioner records. In spite of the utmost efforts of the police, hundreds of prosecutions, fat fines and costs paid by convicted bookmakers, the evil of street betting "does not abate."

The picture of drunkenness is sinister, if much less so than in 1914, when 77,000 persons were charged with it. In 1918, under the severe restrictions of the war, the number fell to a little more than 11,000. In 1922 it was almost 34,000. Of these persons, 6,400 of them women, 30,799 were convicted. This is an increase of more than 3,300 since 1921, an increase of more than 900 convicted drunken women. Compare these figures with those of our own more self-controlled community. According to Commissioner ENRIGHT'S report for 1921, arrests for intoxication in that year were 8,169, whereas the average for the years 1910 to 1914 was 27,504. According to statistics published by Municipal Judge GEMMILL of Chicago, there were 11,402 arrests for drunkenness here in New York in 1922. Even if this unofficial statement be accepted, it shows that this city is three times as moral as London. Only in the matter of comparative peccadillos, such as murder, does London shine.

Twenty-six cases of murder of persons above one year of age were recorded, as against twenty-one in 1921. Arrests were effected in thirteen cases, and in the remaining thirteen the murderer committed suicide. The total number of persons apprehended and charged was sixteen, as against seven for 1921. Of the sixteen (one being for a murder committed in 1921), thirteen were convicted and sentenced to death, and three were found to be insane at the time of the commission of the crime.

In New York in 1921 237 murders were reported. There were 34 convictions. New York is devoted to the prevention and punishment of crimes worse than murder.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Diversion, But Not Productive.

Now it is Dr. CHARLES P. STEINMETZ who has utilized in constructing another Utopia in what, considering his many and important activities as an engineer, must be his scanty leisure. Well, that doesn't take much time and next to no ingenuity, so often has the thing been done since PLATO may or may not have started the game. One only need assume the abandonment by men of all their present habits of thought and picture them as unselfish, indifferent to the acquisition of wealth and each of them ready to share the products of his toil with any neighbor, industrious or idle.

As an electrician, Dr. STEINMETZ naturally prophesies great benefits from the use of electricity. In his Golden Age to come so nearly everything toilsome will be done by this fluid that nobody will have to work more than four hours a day. The rest of the time everybody will devote to "productive diversion." Incidentally, great numbers of people will be attracted to "voluntary agriculture," and that, of course, will solve the food problem.

It is curious that a man who has had so much to do with machines, including those called "labor-saving," has not noticed that none of them has done more than increase the productive power of each worker and reduced the cost of each unit of product. The length of workdays has been reduced for most workers by influences wholly apart from the higher efficiency of production which machinery effects, and in not a single trade has it lessened the amount of work done.

On the contrary, it has vastly increased that amount. There are far more shoemakers, just as hard worked, now than there were in the days when all shoes were made by hand, and the old stage drivers were a minute tribe in comparison with today's army of locomotive engineers and firemen.

Farming Done for Sport.

Quite the most amusing of Dr. STEINMETZ'S expectations are those relating to "voluntary agriculture"—farming for fun, as it were. There is farming of that sort now. It is done by men who have made money in other pursuits, have bought a lot of land, and hired a more or less scientific superintendent to boss a lot of more or less experienced workers. This must be amusing, else so many would not undertake it, but only in the rarest instances does it pay its way, and a world depending on "voluntary agriculture" would be more than likely to go hungry. Not a little gardening is voluntary, and the amateur sometimes does get his reward in the shape of flowers and vegetables, but it approached in moments of confidence he usually will confess that what he raises costs him more than the shops would ask for the same things.

Farming of any kind is about the closest imitation of hard work that is known to man. It also is the most precarious of all businesses, and has the greatest number of anxieties and frets connected with it. Only in Utopia will it become a sport—an occupation for idle hours.

What a pity it is that great specialists like Dr. STEINMETZ will not stick to their own domain! He has a magnificent position with appreciative employers, and he fills it with distinction, but when he ventures out into politics or economics, all the evidences of genius vanish.

Objection Was Justified.

Poor New Rochelle! It is in for no end of derision, and not a little of solemn denunciation because some of its officials saw fit hastily to shroud in canvas a MacMonnies group presenting that distinguished sculptor's idea of Venus and Adonis. Much will be heard about New Rochelle's lack of appreciation for high art, and more about its prudery.

There are points of view from which all this scolding and ridicule might seem deserved. To join in it will be the first impulse of most commentators in the press and elsewhere, and, of course, all the artists will resent the condemnation of a brother artist's work as unfit for public display in a suburban town.

But there is another side of the story. Unquestionably this particular group will be innocuous and admirable after it reaches the permanent pedestal in the Metropolitan Museum for which it is destined. There its realism will be understood by those who see it, or if any visitors declare themselves shocked, a pitying smile will be the sufficient answer. A museum, however, is one place, and the lawn in front of a public library, close to a town's main street, is quite another, and one is not necessarily a prude or a barbarian if he thinks objection to this sort of realism in such a place justified.

This should have been realized before the loan exhibition was arranged. Now the yelling of the group has concentrated attention on qualities of the statues that would have passed unnoticed elsewhere, and a vast amount of unworthy and demoralizing talk has been started among the very persons whose delicacy it was sought to protect.

A Lesson From Experience.

If Mayor HYLAN or anybody else really thinks that buses are or can be adequate substitutes for street cars, subways and elevated roads, the article printed in THE TIMES on Sunday, telling in detail what the experience of Newark has been with buses as the only means of transportation for an urban population, should have been a convincing lesson.

A far smaller city than New York, and with only a fraction of as many passengers to carry between home and work or business, Newark has suffered terribly since its accustomed means of transit were taken away by the strike of the Public Service employés. All that has been said about the worst of our subways crowding is not enough to describe what has happened there. The buses have been packed to the very limit of human endurance and far beyond the point where annoyance becomes danger and indecency.

Buses have their uses, but they become merely an abuse when they attempt to carry more passengers than those for whom seats can be provided. So restricted, however, their inadequacy, in conditions such as have existed in Newark and as would exist here, becomes grotesquely obvious. As auxiliaries they are commendable; as substitutes they are at once absurd and outrageous.

Fortifying Pacific Bases.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"One hundred and eleven million dollars allotted Pacific navy bases; projects at Honolulu and other stations covered." And this by the foremost nation in the crusade for the limitation of armament!

What must our neighbors across the Pacific think of us, and at what valuation will they appraise our professions of friendliness? Why do not our legislators understand that elaborate preparations for defense are the surest methods of exciting suspicion, and are among the greatest obstacles to the establishment of enduring peace?

Does anybody suppose that if our northern borderline had been bristling with forts, 100 years would have passed without a clash?

It is trite, but nevertheless true, to say that a tithe of this vast amount spent in promoting mutual confidence and friendship would provide a mightier safeguard than can ever be established by the engineers of Mars.

A BRITON BACKS FRANCE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As an Englishman I should like to be permitted to record my entire disagreement with the policy of the British Government as disclosed in the documents bearing on the occupation of the Ruhr by France which were published in extenso in your issue of Aug. 12.

It is too late in the day for Great Britain to question the legality of the Ruhr occupation, as my country tacitly agreed to it at the outset, and even aided France in certain details. It savors of insincerity and worse for my Government to raise that issue at the present stage. There has been far too decided a disposition on the part of British statesmen like Lloyd George and Lord Curzon to treat France and its leaders de haut en bas, and the resulting resentment is not to be wondered at. It would be as impossible for France to withdraw from the Ruhr at the dictation of Great Britain as it would be for Great Britain to withdraw from Egypt as the result of external pressure. France has her full measure of national pride as well as other countries, and cannot brook dictation even from a powerful ally who fought by her side during the great war, and who is suffering very heavily from the present unsettled and ominous condition of affairs in Europe.

But that suffering is largely the result of the inconsistent and vacillating policy of the present and preceding British Cabinets. Had my country stood firmly by France throughout, and insisted, despite the pro-German warnings of men like Maynard Keynes, on Germany abiding by the Treaty of Versailles and paying in full without delay or equivocation, the two countries would not have been brought to the present impasse and threatened parting of the ways. But the chameleon-like Lloyd George, who at one time promised his countrymen the head of the Kaiser on a charger and who insisted that "Germany's pockets should be searched," is now venomously attacking M. Poincaré for trying to carry out the latter part of his (Lloyd George's) own policy; while his successor, Mr. Baldwin, from whom we expected much better things, has been frightened into something like a stampede and a betrayal of his country's most important and powerful ally.

This, of course, is the result of the delays, insolent protests and, in fact, the scheming of German politicians and capitalists, who recognized that the one and only way to evade paying their country's obligations for having caused the war and carried it on with unexampled barbarity was to set the Allies at loggerheads and quarreling among themselves, and that this could best be done by arousing their cupidity and commercial antagonism. Germany, the spirit of which is as hateful and arrogant as ever, can and should be made to pay in full all that was demanded of her under the Treaty of Versailles, for it only represents a small part of the immense injury she wrought. Her great capitalists and barons of commerce and industry, like the unspeakable Stinnes, Krupp, Thyssen and many others, have accumulated during and since the war, as the result of the woes of the world, vast stores of wealth, much of which is hidden within the country, while a large part has been sent abroad. At the same time the currency has been deliberately reduced to a point beyond which it can scarcely go lower, thus defrauding home as well as foreign investors; while, apart from reparations, Germany has no foreign debt. And while this has been going on great industries have been built up in an amazing manner, new buildings erected, new ships built, and Germany is ready, the moment international claims against her have been brought down to the point which she herself dictates, to embark on the commercial conquest of the world, just as nine years ago she aimed at its military domination.

France, which suffered more than any other country from German brutality and destructiveness, is in the Ruhr, and personally I hope she will not leave it until Germany is forced to disgorge. The junkers of industry and commerce in Germany are every bit as bad as the junkers of militarism and imperialism. Indeed they are rather worse, for, as the result of their greed and selfishness, the German people are approaching utter destitution. These plutocratic autocrats have only to give the word, backed by cash, for the position to be relieved immediately. It is men like Stinnes who have brought Germany to its present pass, and they should be made to suffer and share the fate of Krupp von Bohlen until they have disgorged.

But for my country to try to force France out of the Ruhr by threats of financial pressure, so that Germany may be able to get on her feet and laugh to scorn those whom she attempted to destroy and has since insulted and deluded, is an act of almost incredible perfidy, and a complete betrayal of the cause for which Great Britain and France fought side by side, and for which ultimately America joined them as a combatant.

JEROME HART.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I cannot resist the "S. O. S." call from Miss Hattie Ferryman of Heflin, Ala., as published by her letter to you in today's TIMES.

In our efforts to help those who cannot help themselves it would be difficult to find any class that need it more than these "pure-type, pure-blooded native Americans," who live lives with so little opportunity as those living in the mountain districts of the Southern States, or who, when given half a chance, show qualities of high and noble citizenship hardly equaled, as shown by the life of Sergeant York.

Would it not be possible to start a fund to raise this $6,000 so urgently needed to help the twelve cases mentioned by Miss Ferryman?

I am inclosing my check for $100 to be sent to Miss Ferryman or placed in a fund to be sent to her.

A SONG THAT WAS HUMMED.

I shall steal off some morning
(But who will make the bed?)
And follow up the hill road
Where many a sun has fled.

I shall go out some morning
And not come in all day.
(But who will cook his dinner
And put the things away?)

I shall climb up the hill road
And come to the top and take
A road leading down to another.
(But who will churn and bake?)

And when the dusk is showing
There'll be one gray road more.
(But who will light the lamps and bolt
The windows and the door?)

Oh, I shall be taking counsel
Of stars for a longer track—
For when I steal off some morning
I'm never coming back!

CHEMIST CORRECTS HAYNES

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is generally said that some prohibitionists are so fanatical that justice and truth are disregarded, if they conflict with the "cause." I should, however, have expected that a man in the position of Mr. Haynes would confine his articles to the truth, or at least to the possible. Apparently, he is no exception, and it appears that, in addition to many highly exaggerated statements, he has made some that are absolutely false and unscientific. As his purpose is, evidently, to frighten would-be drinkers, this may be entirely pardonable from the standpoint of the Anti-Saloon League. Still, as a chemist and one interested in scientific truth, rather than in reforming a nation, I desire to correct some of these false statements.

In the tenth instalment of his series I find the statement that by Government analysis, confirmed by private laboratory findings, 99 per cent. of bootleg whiskies are contaminated with poisonous ingredients. In the several laboratories with which I am acquainted the percentage of such findings is rarely over 10 per cent. or 20 per cent.; and, when one remembers that only suspected samples are generally sent to a chemist for analysis, this is a very low figure.

"Thousands of men who may live for years have written with bootleg liquor their own inevitable doom. They may stop drinking, but, shaken by the cumulative effects of bootleg poison, they will not live to the end of a normal life. Though death come ten years hence, it will be as truly hastened by bootleg poison as the death of a man who swallows a wood alcohol concoction and dies the same day."

By these jumbled statements he evidently means that although no immediate effect be produced, still in years to come death will be hastened. To this I will reply that there is no poison known that will produce any effect ten years from its administration, if it has failed to produce any injury when taken. Furthermore, none of the common bootleg poisons are cumulative, but are soon completely excreted and cease to produce any effects after a few days.

In the eleventh instalment of his series Mr. Haynes makes the statement that moonshine liquor sometimes contains poisonous quantities of lead, copper and zinc, due to the acids of the distillate dissolving small amounts of these metals. As acetic acid, the only acid present to any extent in the mash, distills at 118 and ethyl alcohol at 76 degrees centigrade, there would hardly be any appreciable quantity of this coming over with the distillate. This small amount could not dissolve sufficient to be poisonous, and as copper and zinc salts are used medicinally in rather large amounts, it is evident that they would be only slightly toxic. Lead, the most toxic of the three, is soluble with difficulty in such weak acids and renders poisoning from this source impossible.

In the twelfth instalment I find potassium permanganate described as a violent poison. In reply to this it need only be mentioned that this substance is used as a medicine and as an antidote for poisons. In tremendous doses, due to its oxidizing action, it would be slightly poisonous, but in doses sufficient to color a wine it could not exert even a mild action, much less a "violently poisonous" one.

In the same instalment I also find the statement that lye, a "harmful ingredient," is added to moonshine to prevent the formation of acids. To this I will reply that any solid, as lye, in the mash would not pass over the distillate; and, it added directly to the distillate, it would render the liquor undrinkable, due to the strong soapy taste imparted by quantities too small to be poisonous.

In conclusion I desire to refer Mr. Haynes to the standard books on toxicology, such as Witthaus's "Manual of Toxicology" or Blyth's "Poisons—Their Effects and Detection." Perhaps from a casual perusal of these books he might be able to avoid such gross errors in the future.

If Mr. Haynes or any one else believes that he can disprove any of the above statements or substantiate any that I have challenged, I should like to hear from him. HORACE GREELEY JR.

Women as Public Accountants.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In an article in THE NEW YORK TIMES, Sunday, Aug. 12, 1923, under the caption "Women Workers Invade Nearly All Occupations," there appears a paragraph which is not in accordance with the facts in some respects.

It is stated: "The distinction of being the first woman certified public accountant in Rhode Island and the second in the United States came recently to Miss Adele Emin."

I passed the required examinations for certified public accountant in the State of New York in June, 1909, but my certificate was not issued by the Regents of the University of the State of New York until April 7, 1916—Certificate No. 675.

I was discriminated against because I was a woman, and although I had passed the examinations and had had the required education and experience, my certificate was withheld for seven years.

At that time the Board of Examiners told me a young woman by the name of Theodora Daub had secured a junior certificate, but no woman had secured a full certified public accountant certificate.

I understand that a young woman by the name of Harriet Lowenstein passed the certified public accountant examinations in the State of New York about 1911 or 1914.

I was the first woman to pass the required examinations and become a member of the American Institute of Accountants.

Albino Robins.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am very grateful to those who, both directly and through the columns of THE TIMES, have given me information concerning albino robins. I protest, however, that I drew no conclusions concerning them in my previous letter, having tried all my life to follow that rule of logic which forbids us to draw conclusions from insufficient data. The reports which I have received present a coincidence, at least, which gives rise to interesting speculations, if not conclusions. Detailed stories of four albino robins have come to me. Two of them were lonely, matureless, avoided or persecuted by others of their kind. These were both male birds. The other two were females, both mated to seemingly exceptional superior specimens of robinhood, and in both cases the male "seemed very proud of his mate"—"always kept near her when she was feeding, as though zealously guarding his prize."

Now for our little speculation: is it easy in the male (of course, we are speaking of robins!) that extraction and loneliness are the penalties of being "different," while on the female a touch—or more than touch—of the bizarre lends added fascination?

FISHER SAYS LEAGUE IS NATION'S SAFETY

Yale Professor Tells Church Conference We Must Choose Between It and War.

OUR ISOLATION SUSPECTED

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y., Aug. 20.—America faces the alternative of competing in armament with the rest of the world and building up the biggest army and navy or combining with the rest of the world in disarmament, it was declared tonight by Professor Irving Fisher of Yale University in an address at the Conference on International Relations from the Christian Viewpoint, which is being held under the auspices of the Federal Council of Churches.

The League of Nations, he declared, is not only desirable but essential from the standpoint of the entire world and the United States in particular.

Prof. Fisher said in part:

"The United States has reached the parting of the ways. Either we must compete in armament with the rest of the world and have the biggest navy and the greatest army in the world, or combine in disarmament with the rest of the world.

"Pershing and Sims are entirely right in urging an immediate start in this deadly race if we are not all to join in disarmament.

"Politics alone is responsible for keeping us out of the League of Nations. We should undoubtedly have been in the League—and without reservations—had the White House and the Senate been of the same political complexion, both Democratic or both Republican.

"The League of Nations or a League of Nations is not only desirable but absolutely essential from the standpoint of the self-interest of the world in general and of the United States in particular.

"The only way to prevent further war—and former Justice Clarke states that seventeen nations are now actively preparing for war—is for the United States to co-operate in helping Europe to build itself up and in doing away with the ill-feeling that was aroused by the war.

"The policy of isolation today is a delusion and a snare. It means no real isolation but merely a refusal to recognize that the world has become one vast neighborhood.

"To destroy war is becoming a necessity. No other interest can be allowed to hold it back.

"War or Civilization Must Go."

"Either civilization must destroy war or war will destroy civilization. One of these alternatives leads us through the League of Nations to a world of peace, justice and prosperity. The other leads us through war to a world of death and destruction. Which shall it be, League or war?

"We have not yet joined the existing League of Nations. We have not yet created the 'Association of Nations' promised in the 1920 Republican platform. We are not yet officially represented in the Permanent Court of International Justice.

"This is surely a most unrealistic situation. In view of the fact that the vast majority of the people of the United States earnestly desire peace and do not care whether the organization for preserving peace is the existing League unimpaired, the existing League with the Senate reservations, the Association of Nations or anything else, provided only it be effective to keep the peace. Four years is a long time in which to do anything but discuss what shall be done.

"But facts are now being realized, with the result that public opinion is beginning to turn away from the policy of isolation toward a vague idea of some participation in European problems. In short, Uncle Sam is making up his mind again to shake hands across the sea and is beginning to look shyly at that seat reserved for him at Geneva.

"At present fifty-two nations are members of the League. Only four important nations—Germany, Russia, Turkey and the United States—are outside. As has been said, these fifty-two have solemnly signed a short, simple round-robin agreement, first, not to go to war without arbitration or conciliation, and, second, to work together for the general betterment of world relations.

"The world needs a league of nations in order to avoid a recurrence of what has constituted a veritable curse even in times of peace—competitive armaments. Before the war for many years Germany and France had been competing in armies. In the same way Germany and England were racing each other with respect to their navies, so as to compel almost all countries, to the great cost and injury of every producer of real wealth.

"The United States has reached the parting of the ways. Either we must compete in armament with the rest of the world or combine in disarmament with the rest of the world.

League an Insurance Against War.

"The (or 'a') League from a commercial point of view constitutes a great mutual war insurance company, each nation joining because it is both cheaper and more effectual to provide against war by paying small insurance premiums to pay for a league than by maintaining a great army.

"There are five principal methods on which the League relies to avoid war. They are: First, referring the dispute to a third party—in other words, judicial decision or arbitration, or conciliation; second, a 'cooling off' time while the third party is trying to arrive at a fair decision or recommendation; third, the possibility of a second or a third attempt at adjustment if the first is not accepted by the two contending parties; fourth, if one of the two contending parties holds out against the decision or recommendation and the opinion of the world, the recalcitrant nation can be boycotted; fifth, military force can be applied if the other nations individually so decide.

"With the United States safely inside the League, we would possess a veto power in the Council. No action could be even recommended unless we as a member approved. And, of course, any military step by the United

One of the Foremost Economists of Europe Dies in Switzerland.

ROME, Aug. 20.—Word was received here today of the death in Switzerland yesterday of Senator Vilfredo Pareto. The news was received with deepest regret by Premier Mussolini. Senator Pareto, who was considered one of the foremost economists of Europe, was a supporter of the Fascisti movement from the beginning, and the Premier included him in the list of new Senators named several months ago.

The Marchese Vilfredo di Parigi Pareto was in his seventy-sixth year. Previous to his appointment as Senator he had belonged to no political party, but his articles, written from Lausanne, Switzerland, where he held the Chair of Political Economy in the university, attracted the attention of Mussolini, then the Duce of the Fascismo, a year ago, and his name appeared on the first list of Senators nominated by Premier Mussolini last December.

Senator Pareto came from an old and noble family of Genoa. was educated as an engineer, and for some time was director of the great iron plant of San Giovanni Valdarno, and later Director General of the Italian Forges. He is best known, however, by his studies in economics and sociology and by a ponderous volume of criticisms of the works of Karl Marx. His masterpiece is considered to be "Tratto di Sociologia Generale" ("Treatise on General Sociology") published in 1916, the year after he accepted the chair at Lausanne.

MUTUAL RENT PLAN INTERESTS COOLIDGE

PROVIDES OLD-AGE INCOME

Walter Russell, artist and architect, of 560 Madison Avenue, yesterday made public a letter from George B. Christian Jr., sent on behalf of President Coolidge, with regard to Mr. Russell's plan for universal rent mutualisation.

Mr. Russell had sent President Coolidge data on the plan. The letter said in part:

"The President fully realizes the seriousness of the problem to which you are addressing attention and has been much interested in your suggestion as to measures for coping with it."

In brief, Mr. Russell, who is credited by many with fathering the co-operative home-owning method, of which the new plan is an outgrowth, hopes to establish a corporation to be known as the National Rent Mutual Company, through which tenants of buildings to be erected by that corporation will, eventually, reach a point at which they occupy their apartments without cost and, in addition, receive an annuity in the form of dividends developed from their early rent payments.

Plan Explained in Detail.

In explaining the plan Mr. Russell said:

"Rents are mounting beyond the ability of the people to pay. They have reached the danger point where national welfare is affected. This new plan will rid old age of the fear of dispossess. It will convert the waste of a life-time into the savings of a life-time. It will make a nation of home-owners.

"Rent mutualization means universal property ownership through normal rent-paying. It puts a dividend-paying value into rent receipts just as life insurance receipts become dividend-paying through mutualization of the companies. It means participation by the rent payer in the potential value represented in the rent receipt. It means gradual elimination of rent paying. It would give back to the rent payer annually that share of the deed which his money has paid for after paying taxes, operating expenses and fair service charges. It should cut a man's rent in half in seven years or give him rent free and a substantial cash annuity in twenty-one years. Nobody can be evicted so long as his participation credit is unused. It gives a family two years of free rent if the bread-winner dies. It is the final solution of the rent problem.

"The company will be officered by men of much experience and will have an advisory board consisting of an architectural committee and of highly technical experts. The capital will be $10,000,000, of which the founders' preferred stock, 8 per cent. cumulative, will be $100,000. There will be $4,900,000 in preferred 6 per cent. cumulative and $5,000,000 in common stock. The preferred stock will be sold universally, with additional common stock as bonus. This $5,000,000, together with $5,000,000 of temporary mortgage money, will be invested in National Rent Mutual buildings and filled with tenants who shall pay normal rents.

Aiding to Be Aided First.

"The first demonstration buildings will be studio buildings, for the arts are sadly in need of proper housing and the majority of founders are prominent artists. The company, acting as construction company and owner, can save from 15 to 20 per cent. of the cost of a building by eliminating all extravagant methods of financing and secure better buildings by idealizing working conditions between architect and sub-contractor.

"When a building is completed and filled with paying tenants and operated at least one year a detailed statement of its exact cost shall be issued. It shall include an insurance fund to be set aside at the rate of $10 per $1,000 to give two years' rent free to any family losing its bread-winner by death. The statement will show that about two-thirds of the gross income will be used to pay operating expenses and one-third as gross profits. Upon this statement of fact the company will issue and sell 6½ per cent. guaranteed bonds for 80 per cent. of the total cost of the buildings. These will be redeemed and canceled at the rate of 5 per cent. of the issue annually, beginning at the end of the third year. This will give the company four years of earnings to release its 20 per cent. of capital tied up, part of which is cash and part service charge or profit, for construction.

"Out of the one-third gross profits left over from rental income a depreciation fund, based on 2 per cent. of the cost of the building, shall be set aside for replacement. The balance will represent net profits. Rent Mutual dividend-paying participation certificates will be issued for 60 per cent. of this amount and given to tenants in the exact ratio of their respective interests. Participation certificates will equal in value the common stock, but will be non-voting. The remaining 10 per cent. will be retained as the company's share of net profits.

Life Income for Old Age.

"The tenant shares not only in the net profits, but also in the profits of construction, management, financing, earnings from subsidiary companies and interest savings on redeemed bonds. The company virtually is a trustee for its tenant stockholders, whose surplus rent money is pooled for the one purpose of gradual elimination of rent paying and the accumulation of life income for old age."

Donn Barber, the architect, wrote Mr. Russell of the plan:

"It is economically sound and is a stirring and far-seeing vision, strong in material and spiritual possibilities. It offers a new hope to the great mass of rent-paying Americans who at present seemingly have no practical means of becoming home-owners."

Egyptian Engineers See City Hall.

Eight Egyptian engineers, who are on a visit to the United States to study airplanes, automobiles and transportation methods generally, visited City Hall yesterday. They were received by William T. Collins, Vice Chairman of the Board of Aldermen, who is Acting Mayor in the absence of Mayor Hylan and Murray Hulbert, President of the Board of Aldermen.

LEGION URGES PARLEY FOR AIR DISARMAMENT

Will Ask Coolidge to Call World Conference if National Leaders Support the Plan.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 20.—A world conference for the limitation of airplane construction for war purposes is proposed by the American Legion in an announcement made at its national headquarters here today. The Legion will conduct a referendum to obtain the views of prominent Americans in regard to the advisability of holding such a conference in Washington.

All members of Congress, all Governors, 1,000 editors, 100 college Presidents and many others will be asked to express an opinion on the proposal, and if the response is favorable President Coolidge will be asked to call an international conference.

Statistics gathered by the Legion show that France has 140 squadrons of military flying machines and intends to have 220 squadrons by the end of 1923, according to Commander Owsley. France, Commander Owsley said, has ships which carry seventy-five millimeter guns and others which can transport six machine guns and their crews, enormous bombers, special fighting ships armored with battleship steel and actual troop ships of the air.

England, the Legion points out, is France's nearest competitor and has voted an extra $27,508,000 to enlarge its air forces.

The statement declares that naval and land forces have been reduced materially by international agreement, and that the Legion purposes to attempt to obtain similar measures in regard to the air.

"The crying need of the world today is peace—industrial, commercial, economic peace—a restoration from the ravages and horrors of war, a settling down and getting back to pursuits of home industry, quietude of heart and mind, to live at safety, secure from the covetous invader," the statement read.

The statement challenges "the right of any nation to prepare any instrument of destruction and claim the name of defender of world peace."

"America," it says, "is ready to lead the way to secure peace in the air, and she has gone far by example to make war impossible on the land and sea."

Why U.S. Rubber Products enjoy such an Enviable Reputation for Uniform Quality

At one time or another—probably many times—you have used some article made of or containing rubber, and bearing the celebrated "U. S." Mark of Quality.

It may have been a pair of Keds, or "U. S." Rubbers or Rubber Boots—or a Raynster—or a length of Garden Hose—or a sheet of "Rainbow" Packing—or a Hot Water Bottle—or a Royal Cord Tire.

But whatever the specific item, large or small, you found it showing an exceptionally high standard of quality.

Positive Control of Raw Materials

Much of this exceptional "U. S." quality is the inevitable outcome of the ideals and experience of the oldest and largest rubber organization in the world.

But even the highest order of skill and ideals and integrity can go only so far in manufacture unless the quality of raw materials is under positive control.

In furthering its ideals of what rubber should be and do about 15 years ago the United States Rubber Company started to gain control of its own supply of rubber latex—uniform in quality and adequate in quantity.

It has 5,000,000 rubber trees—selected specimens of Hevea Braziliensis, planted and cultivated as intensively as an orchard of prize fruit trees.

It produces its rubber latex to the extent of millions of gallons every year—uniform in quality.

It has practically unlimited facilities for expansion as more trees are planted—and as the plantations now bearing come into fuller maturity.

It is the only rubber manufacturing company in the world that grows its own rubber in any considerable quantity.

• • •

Now—even if this were all, you would probably agree that it in itself would be enough to give "U. S." Rubber Products the preference among buyers and users of rubber goods.

But this is not all, by any means.

A few weeks ago, the United States Rubber Company announced its new Sprayed Rubber.

It is the first truly scientific method—because it is the first that works with the natural qualities of the latex instead of against them.

It does away both with the old primitive smoke treatment, and the acid treatment of the latex, the only two methods known before.

One Hundred Per Cent Pure Rubber

In the panel on the right you will see the names of a few of the outstanding "U. S." Rubber Products to the manufacture of which Sprayed Rubber is applicable.

These products are uniform in quality, service and value. They are under the direct control of this Company every step of the way, beginning with the tapping of the latex from the rubber tree.

At the same time that this Company announced Sprayed Rubber, it also announced two other discoveries of major importance—with special application to Cord Tires:

The new Web Cord

The new Flat-Band Method of Building a Cord Tire

For some time now, motorists of this country have been riding on "U. S." Royal Cord Tires built on a new principle. Unannounced, but delivering a service that has been unquestionably the outstanding tire performance since the beginning of the automobile.

This may explain perhaps why you hear people saying everywhere that "U. S." Royal Cords are the most uniform tires made.

Web Cord is the first true rubber-webbed cord structure. It depends entirely on the United States Rubber Company's control of an adequate supply of pure rubber latex.

The cords soak up the latex. It penetrates into, between and through all the fibres of the cords. Chemical solutions of rubber merely surround the cords.

Then the impregnated cords are laid side by side into a wide Web Cord sheet.

Web Cord is free from cross tie-threads such as are used in ordinary cord fabric. It is free from internal causes of friction. It is highly resistant to puncture and wear, ensuring long and uniform service.

The Improved Method of Building Tires

The Flat-Band Method of building a Cord Tire is the first tire-building method to ensure equal length, equal angle, and equal tension of all the cords in the tire.

This flat band is then gently formed to tire shape by an easy air pressure, so that every thread moves freely to its normal position in the finished tire.

There is no variation in the twist of the individual cords. Each accepts its proportionate share of the load on the finished tire. No disproportionate strain can be laid on any cord.

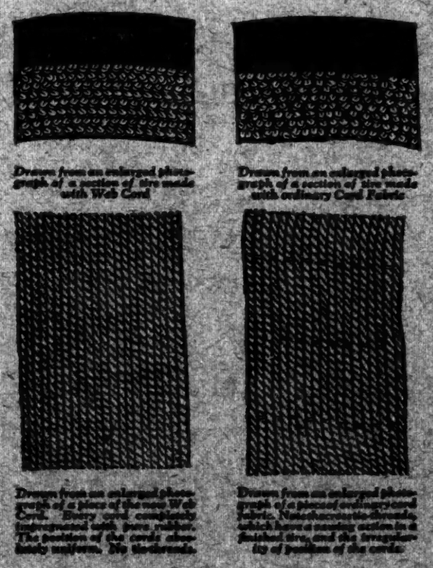
These three discoveries date the beginning of a new science of rubber manufacture—of the greatest interest to the 110,000,000 American users of all kinds of manufactured rubber.

They were developed by the technicians of the United States Rubber Company, and are its exclusive property.



For "U. S." Products Exclusively

"U. S." Rubber Footwear—"U. S." Royal Cord Tires—"U. S." Spring-Step Rubber Heels—"U. S." Royal Golf Balls—Keds—Water-bottles, Gloves, Tubing, and other surgical and household rubber goods—Raynster Raincoats—"U. S." Rubber Hose—"U. S." HIGH COURT'S STAND PRAISED BY HAYNES

Decisions on Prohibition Laws Pointed To as Bulwark of Enforcement.

HOSTILE JUDGES DEPLORED

AGENTS HELD FOR SPEEDING

Criticises Judges Who Fined Them, and Charges He Returned Money in Private.

PROHIBITION INSIDE OUT
Thirty-Eighth Instalment

The position of the Supreme Court with regard to prohibition is reviewed today by Commissioner Haynes, who praises its decisions. Tomorrow he will turn his attention to the public attitude toward the law.

By ROY A. HAYNES
U. S. Prohibition Commissioner.

A PERUSAL of some of the recent decisions of the United States Supreme Court might be of interest to the few Judges who hold the prohibition laws in light esteem. These decisions, covering many points raised by persons out of sympathy with law enforcement, are both clear and illuminating.

One of the first attacks upon the constitutionality of the national Prohibition act was carried to the Supreme Court in the case of Ruppert vs. Caffey. In that case, the power of Congress to define as intoxicating liquor "any beverage containing one-half of 1 per cent. or more of alcohol by volume" was considered. Certain brewers contended that the definition of intoxicating liquor by Congress worked a peculiar hardship and loss to owners of breweries and manufacturers of beer and, by becoming effective immediately upon its passage, the law was arbitrary and unreasonable.

The Supreme Court held that Congress had the power to enact Title I. of the national Prohibition act and that it acted within the scope of its constitutional authority in defining intoxicating liquor.

The States of Rhode Island and New Jersey sought to enjoin the execution of the Volstead act. In the case of Rhode Island vs. Palmer the Supreme Court settled the validity of the Eighteenth Amendment and the power of Congress to enact legislation making the amendment effective.

In the cases of Street vs. the Lincoln Safe Deposit Company and Cornelli vs. Moore, the Supreme Court decided the status of liquor stored in private and Government bonded warehouses.

Old Laws That Still Stand.

Attempts to nullify the Internal Revenue laws relating to intoxicating liquor on the grounds that they had been repealed by implication when the national Prohibition act was passed, were brought before the Supreme Court in the case of United States vs. Bose Yuginovich. In that case the Court held that some of the less important provisions of the former statutes had been repealed.

That decision was quickly followed by the enactment by Congress of the Willis-Campbell act, including a provision that all laws relative to the manufacture and taxation of liquor effective on the date of the passage of the national Prohibition act should be considered as still in effect and that the Government should have the option, in appropriate cases, to proceed either under the Internal Revenue laws or under the national Prohibition act in the prosecution of cases. It was provided, however, that conviction under one law should be a bar to prosecution under the other.

After the enactment of this law various convictions were secured under the Revised Statutes, and on a constitutional question a case reached the Supreme Court again to test the effect and force of the so-called revenue laws. On Jan. 2, 1922, the Supreme Court, in the case of the United States vs. Stafoff et al., held that the former decision in the case of the United States vs. Yuginovich was nullified as to violations of law committed after passage of the Willis-Campbell act and that offenses committed after the passage of that act were punishable under the Revised Statutes covering illicit distilling or under the national Prohibition act as the Government might choose to elect.

Prosecution of violators of the prohibition laws by both State and Federal Governments for the same offense was upheld by the Supreme Court in a decision handed down in the case of United States vs. Vito Lanza et al. The Court held that an act denounced as a crime by both national and State sovereignties is an offense against the peace and dignity of both and may be punished by each.

Supreme Court's Consistent Stand.

There are other decisions of importance by the Supreme Court, but those cited above suffice to illustrate the attitude of our highest tribunal with respect to the Eighteenth Amendment and the laws enacted thereunder. One looks in vain for a phrase or words to indicate that the prohibition laws are held lightly or in low esteem by the highest court of the land.

Happily, the Judges of America for the most part, have taken a similar attitude in most of the cases originating in their courts. And gradually the violator of the law is coming to realise that he may not disobey the prohibition laws with impunity. True, the realization has come more quickly in jurisdictions where prison sentences are imposed, but almost everywhere it is appearing. One of the most distinguished Federal Judges in the United States wrote recently as follows:

"My colleagues and I have been enforcing the law, and I am proud to report that, comparatively speaking, in this district the law is respected and our experience shows that it can be enforced. You would expect that this would be one of the most difficult centres in the United States, but among the crooks of the underworld this city has the reputation of being a place to avoid in the traffic in intoxicating liquor, and likewise — has the same reputation.

"Of course, we have plenty to do, but I assure you that it is not anywhere near the burden that I expected it would be, and it is getting lighter all the time. If in other districts the same degree of insistence on honoring the law was reached, our own burdens would be much lighter."

The Judge Who Is Hostile.

Let us look at another kind of Judge. To quote an enforcement official:

"There is only one source of hindrance (to enforcement work) and that results from the attitude of Judge ——. His hostility to prohibition cases clearly encourages the criminal class, as it manifests itself in his rulings from the bench, and correspondingly discourages our agents. Most of the cases in which they are witnesses are dismissed upon peremptory instructions from the bench."

When public officials take an attitude hostile to law it is difficult to get juries to convict. The attitude of the Judge and prosecuting attorney has much to do with the verdict of the jury. In some cases, I am informed, it would be difficult for an observer in the courtroom to tell at times whether it is the bootlegger or the prohibition agent who is on trial.

The attitude of these public officials undoubtedly would change if some of our better citizens would attend the courts. Friends of the bootlegger throng the courtroom, but friends of the law remain away.

The Christian citizenship of America is beginning to realize the patriotism of serving in the jury box. This sense of duty should be extended to the point where we should feel also an obligation to be present in the courtroom whenever opportunity permits or necessity demands our presence there. Wherever this favorable attitude of citizens toward the law is manifested, the prohibition laws are respected and made effective.

Agents Arrested for "Speeding."

On reading the foregoing I find that I have failed to include in this presentation an illustration I had in mind of difficulties occasionally placed by some officials in the pathway of loyal workers for law enforcement. The record would not be complete without this illustration, extreme though it be:

In a certain city, where violation of the prohibition laws appeared to be open and frequent and where some of the authorities were reputed to be in sympathy with the lawless element, prohibition agents set out one night to apprehend bootleggers bringing supplies of illicit liquor to the city by automobile.

The agents employed two cars. They left the city about 3 o'clock in the morning and while on their mission one of the cars was held up by a city policeman, who charged them with speeding. The agents denied speeding, but admitted that they might have violated a city ordinance or minor traffic regulation. They were required to put up a cash bond for their appearance in court, and the next morning were taken before a local Judge.

The policeman who made the arrest testified that the agents' car was proceeding at a speed of about thirty-five miles an hour. The agents testified that the speed of the car did not exceed twenty miles an hour. The Judge accepted the evidence of the policeman and delivered a stinging rebuke from the bench, during which he said he had given the police instructions to bring the agents before him whenever they violated the minor traffic regulations.

The Judge imposed a heavy fine upon the agents and the newspapers carried articles under sensational headlines describing the Judge's action.

But one development was not printed.

Soon after this Judge had fined the agents he visited the local enforcement offices, called the agent in charge out into the hall, and returned the fine he had imposed. In doing so, he asked that nothing be said about the return of the money.

"I'm in politics," he explained, "and I can't afford to let you fellows off when you come before me."

MAGNUS JOHNSON SAYS HE BELIEVES IN BOOKS

AUSTIN, Minn., Aug. 20.—Senator Magnus Johnson addressed a gathering at the Christgau farm, ten miles east of here, yesterday, on the subject of co-operation, attacking the operation of the Federal Reserve Bank system, declaring it favored the manufacturing interests to the detriment of the farmers.

Mr. Johnson declared the farmer, business man and laborer must co-operate in politics as well as in business undertakings.

He branded as "lies" reports which, he said, misrepresented his policies, and declared his intention to fight to the end for the system of cost plus reasonable profit for the farmers in marketing their product on the same basis as the business man.

The reduction in gasoline prices by Governor W. H. McMaster of South Dakota was deprecated by the speaker, who said the cut should have been 3.5 cents a gallon instead of 4.4, because "too radical an action permits the Standard Oil Company to kill off the independents dealers."

The Senator denounced "a false charge" in certain newspapers that he did not care for books. He said he believed in books and was, in fact, an ardent reader.

Prices realized at Swift & Company sales of carcass beef in New York City for week ending Saturday, August 18, on shipments sold out, ranged from 9.50 cents to 20 cents per pound, and averaged 14.82 cents per pound. Live

Killed by Fall Into Caisson Of New Hudson River Tube

Falling from the top of a caisson of the New York and New Jersey tunnel to the concrete floor, sixty-five feet below the surface of the Hudson, near the Spring Street shaft, Dennis Sullivan, 28 years old, of 200 Pacific Street, Brooklyn, was killed yesterday. He was walking on the footway when the handrail gave way and he toppled into the pipe.

Employes got Sullivan out and an ambulance was summoned, but Sullivan was dead when the doctors arrived. Every bone in his body had been broken.

Workmen preparing to go down the caisson when the accident occurred were unnerved and refused to take their turn under water yesterday.

2 O'CONNORS RIVALS FOR CONGRESS SEAT

ASSEMBLY FIGHT IN 23D

Time for Filing for Candidates to Be Voted Upon at Primaries Will Expire at Midnight.

John J. O'Connor, Assemblyman from Charles F. Murphy's district, the Twelfth, was agreed upon yesterday as the Tammany candidate for Representative in the Sixteenth Congressional District to fill the vacancy caused by the death of W. Bourke Cockran.

Mr. O'Connor's selection, which was agreed upon by the Tammany leaders of the seven Assembly districts, parts of which are in the Sixteenth Congressional District, ended reports that Tammany might nominate Mrs. William Randolph Hearst or former Mayor George B. McClellan for the vacancy. Mr. O'Connor has served three terms in the Assembly. Although representing the Twelfth Assembly District in the Legislature, Mr. O'Connor lives in that part of the district of which City Clerk Michael J. Cruise is leader.

Mr. O'Connor was born in New York City Nov. 22, 1885. He received his early education in the public schools of the city and was graduated from Brown University in 1903. He received the degree of LL. B. from the Harvard University Law School in 1911. Since then he has practiced law in this city and is now a member of the firm of O'Connor & Bain, 45 Cedar Street. He is a member of the National Democratic Club, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Catholic Club and the Tammany Central Association.

Two O'Connors in Race.

The name of the Republican nominee will be almost identical with that of the Democratic candidate, as the Republican organization leaders have agreed upon the designation of John C. O'Connor, who was a candidate against Mr. Cockran last Fall. The district is normally strongly Democratic, the vote at the last election having been 23,370 for Mr. Cockran and 8,277 for John C. O'Connor.

With the time for filing designating petitions expiring at midnight tonight, the Tammany factional fight in the Twenty-third Assembly District had not been settled yesterday, and William J. Murphy, leader of the insurgents, persisted in his intention of fighting John Mara for the leadership despite the efforts of Charles F. Murphy and other Tammany leaders to avert a contest.

Mr. Murphy filed a full ticket for members of the County Committee against the candidates designated by the supporters of Mr. Mara and designated John A. Byrne as candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Assembly and David F. Mayer as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Alderman. The regulars, under the leadership of Mr. Mara, have named Nelson R. Ruttenberg as a candidate for the Assembly and Joseph R. Smith as a candidate for Alderman. The Twenty-third is the district represented by George W. Jeans, Republican, who has been under attack by Mayor Hylan for his position on proposed transit legislation. The Democrats have believed that they might carry the district if they could get harmony in their own ranks, and the attempt to bring about a compromise between the factions is likely to continue today.

Murphy Checks Insurgents.

A curious situation has developed in the Sixth Assembly District, where the attempt of a group of insurgents to wrest the leadership from David Lazarus has been checked by the intervention of Mr. Murphy. The insurgents, headed by Adolph Stern, had filed a full ticket. Mr. Stern has filed his declination as a candidate for Alderman, and the declination of Samuel Tullman, the insurgent candidate for the Assembly, is expected. Difficulty has developed in getting the declinations of the candidates for the County Committee, more than 800 in number. Those whose declinations cannot be obtained will have to go on the primary election ballot.

The time for filing designating petitions for candidates to be voted upon at the primary election will expire at midnight. Assemblymen and Aldermen are to be nominated throughout the city. Candidates for Representative in Congress will be nominated for the Eleventh and Sixteenth Districts. Municipal Court Justices will be nominated in the Second and Fifth Districts, Manhattan, the First and Second Districts in the Bronx, and in the First and Second Districts in Queens.

A Sheriff, County Clerk, Register and District Attorney are to be elected in Kings County, a Sheriff and District Attorney in Queens, and a Surrogate and County Clerk in Richmond.

Ten Supreme Court Justices are to be elected in the First Judicial District, composed of Manhattan and the Bronx, and one in the Second Judicial District, composed of Kings, Queens, Richmond, Nassau and Suffolk Counties. Nomination for these offices will be made at conventions to be held the last part of September or the first part of October, but delegates to those conventions will be selected at the primaries. The candidates for Judge of the Court of Appeals, the only State-wide officer to be elected this Fall, will be selected by the respective State committees.

HARTIGAN IN BELLEVUE.

Former Commissioner Sent to Hospital for Observation.

Joseph Hartigan, 42 years old, former Commissioner of Weights and Measures, who was arrested Thursday night charged with burglary and violation of the Sullivan law, was sent to Bellevue Hospital for observation yesterday by Magistrate Peter A. Hatting in the Jefferson Market Court. His case was adjourned until Aug. 31.

Hartigan is charged with having attempted to rob the cigar store of A. Tascale at 45 West Eighteenth Street. Tascale said he saw Hartigan leaving the store about 11 o'clock Thursday night, after the door had been locked, and found that the plate glass window had been scratched and cut.

At Hartigan's home in the Bronx it was said that he had been suffering from a nervous breakdown for the last two months.

WANT TO HEAR FROM SON.

Parents Think That R. W. Bailey Jr. Is in Canada.

The parents of Robert W. Bailey Jr., 16 years old, who live at 536 First Street, Brooklyn, want Robert to communicate with them. He has been missing from home since March 17 last. He had often expressed his desire to go to Canada and the Hudson Bay country and his parents are convinced he has gone there. The Bureau of Missing Persons has sent out 3,000 circulars bearing his picture and description, which have gone to the Chiefs of Police in all of the principal cities of Canada and the United States.

"We have communicated with the Hudson Bay people, the lumber camps, the Boy Scouts and the Salvation Army and many other organizations about Robert," said his mother yesterday. "We have perfect confidence in him and know that he is able to take care of himself. We want him to understand that we will not interfere with any of his plans, but we do want to hear from him."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 20.—Preparations for Queen Wilhelmina's coming jubilee festivities are now in full swing, and everywhere there are signs of the celebration, which begins in The Hague on Aug. 31. Shops are full of all manner of flags, among which the orange flag of the House of Orange predominates. Grand stands are being built in many places.

Today the Queen received at the Summer Palace of Hatloo the Pangeran Aria Koesoemojoedo, Prince of Solo, Major of the General Staff of the Netherlands Indian Army, who came in the name of Soesoehoenan of Soorakarta, a Dutch East Indian Prince. Pangeran wore the magnificent national costume which is worn when representing an Indian Prince. The Prince brought many magnificent presents from the Dutch East Indies, including some for the little Princess Juliana.

This evening the Queen will receive another mission from Djokjakarta, in the Dutch East Indies.

In view of the riots in some frontier towns and possible incidents along the German-Dutch frontier, Dutch troops have left to increase the frontier guard. Hordes of Germans are crossing the frontier at some places and buying up all the Dutch foodstuffs, which, it appears, are even dearer in Germany than in Holland in view of the tremendous shortage of provisions. These Germans often spend 20,000,000 to 30,000,000 marks each.

DRY AGENT HELD IN $500

Twenty-two persons charged with violating the Volstead act pleaded guilty when arraigned yesterday before Judge Robert A. Inch in the Criminal Branch of the Federal Court in Brooklyn. Fines ranging from $10 to $200 were imposed. In a majority of the cases the Court showed leniency because the defendants pleaded that it was their first offense, and also because the Essex County Jail in Newark can house no more prisoners.

Frank Hale, 31, of 26 West Sixty-third Street, a special Federal agent who was sent here to investigate liquor violations, was held in $500 bail yesterday by Magistrate Jean Norris, before whom he was arraigned by Patrolman John Maher of the West Forty-seventh Street Station. Maher said the prisoner refused to move on when ordered to do so in front of a Broadway restaurant between Forty-ninth and Fiftieth Streets.

Hale, who was there in the performance of his duty, was represented in court by Assistant United States Attorney Herman L. Falk. He was locked up over night. His case is complicated against Patrolman Maher for alleged interference with a Federal officer.

United States Commissioner Samuel M. Hitchcock had a warrant issued against Maher. It will be served on the policeman today when he appears against Hale.

NOTE ON 12-MILE LIMIT IS NEARLY COMPLETED

Will Reject Hughes Plan, It Is Said, but Seek to Meet Our Viewpoint.

LONDON, Aug. 20 (Associated Press).—Officials of the Foreign Office, Treasury and Board of Trade are now at work on the British reply to the American note concerning enforcement of liquor prohibition within international maritime limits, and it is hoped to dispatch the document within a fortnight.

The reply is described as "constructive" and as offering an advance on previous notes. It is based upon the findings of the Interdepartmental Committee headed by Ronald McNeill, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and will point out the British Government's desire to meet the American viewpoint wherever possible.

The reply is expected to offer certain measures intended to reduce or do away with illicit traffic in alcohol within the prescribed coastal limits by vessels flying the British flag, but, as already reported, it will reject the twelve-mile limit proposal as constituting too radical a departure from present international practice and the British laws and regulations bearing on sea boundaries and rights of vessels in foreign waters.

PROTEST KOSHER MEAT RISE

Brooklyn Retailers Charge Twenty Wholesalers With Profiteering.

Brooklyn retail dealers in kosher meat yesterday asked District Attorney Dodd to investigate the prices charged by twenty wholesalers, principally in the Williamsburg and Brownsville districts.

The dealers told the prosecutor that Brooklyn wholesalers were advancing prices 7 cents a pound for fowl beyond prices charged at present by wholesalers in Manhattan.

It was alleged that a combination of the wholesalers was operating as a credit association, and that this or similar advance in prices had been the yearly rule preceding the Jewish Fall holidays. The District Attorney said he would investigate and punish offenders if the facts supported the complaint.

BLASTS ROCKFRONT STREET

Detectives from the bomb squad, under Lieutenant James Gegan, are investigating a number of explosions which occurred yesterday in Front Street, between Roosevelt and Dover Streets. The last of the explosions shattered windows in two tenement houses at 216 and 220 Front Street.

According to Lieutenant Gegan and Inspector James Callahan of the Bureau of Combustibles, a truck loaded with some kind of chemical was driven through the block and one of the casks boys sprang a leak. The chemical leaked down on the stone blocks and when the iron-rimmed wheels of a truck came in contact with the mixture the explosion resulted.

TWO LITTLE GIRLS INJURED

HAMMONTON, N. J., Aug. 20.—A bomb explosion which rocked this town occurred last evening at 11:03 o'clock, when several sticks of dynamite, to which a fuse had been attached, let go with terrific force in the cellar of the bakery conducted by Pietro Lomasino, on Fairview Avenue.

Tearing out the side of the building, badly damaging the store of Joseph Marcurio, adjoining the Tomasino Building, and shattering the glass in windows and doors for blocks away, the explosion was heard and felt in Folsom, three miles away.

Sergeants Campbell and Tighe of the State police, on traffic duty on the White Horse Pike, a mile away, gathered a number of troopers and proceeded to the scene. Two sisters, Angelina and Theresa Molino, aged fourteen and sixteen years, respectively, were found to have been injured by fragments of timbers, although a hundred feet from the explosion. None of the seven members of Tomasino's family was injured seriously.

An hour later, a few hundred feet from the scene of the explosion, Antonio Ordille, fifty years old, attacked his wife with an axe, leaving her unconscious and bleeding from numerous wounds. Ordille then put two bullets into his body, dying almost instantly.

Nothing was known of this tragedy until this morning, when one of Ordille's children, after a night of terror with her little brother and sisters, went to a neighbor's home and told of her father's act.

Two months ago Ordille borrowed a shotgun from Antonio Carbonaro, a neighbor, of whom he was jealous because of alleged attentions to Mrs. Ordille, a woman of 40, and shot Carbonaro twice. Ordelle was at liberty on $5,000 bail at the time of last night's tragedy.

Authorities are working on the basis that the bombing and the suicide of Ordille were connected, caps such as are used on dynamite fuses having been found in Ordille's home today by the State police. It is stated that Tomasino was about to proceed against Ordille for a bill of $72 which was due him.

GEN. GOURAUD VISITS TROOPS AT PEEKSKILL

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Today was one of the big days of the year at the State Camp, when 2,000 State troops, forming the Eighty-seventh Brigade, General George R. Dyer commanding, were reviewed by General Henry J. H. Gouraud, hero of France.

General Gouraud and party arrived at the camp at 3:30 P. M. and were the guests of Major Gen. Charles W. Berry, Commander of the Guard; Brigadier Gen. Dyer, and Colonel J. Phelan of the 165th.

Review of the brigade was held at 4:30 o'clock and the formation drew remarks of admiration from the noted French General. Following the review, General Gouraud was taken on a tour of the camp, rifle range, &c. He declared the big plateau and housing arrangements were ideal for the purpose of training.

The inspection trip completed, General Gouraud and party proceeded to the headquarters of Colonel Phelan, Commander of the Sixty-ninth, where an informal reception he met with every evidence of great pleasure, many of the members of the Sixty-ninth having fought under him in the World War. The battle flag of the Sixty-ninth, containing fifty-nine battle engagement rings, was examined by him with reverence and great interest.

BLASTS POLICE GRAFT.

Daly Will Investigate Charge Against Two Officers in Bronx.

Two policemen attached to the Simpson Street Station were suspended yesterday pending an investigation by Deputy Police Commissioner John Daly, of the Fifth Inspection District, as a result of a fight they had on Sunday afternoon which attracted hundreds of persons to Tiffany Street and Southern Boulevard, the Bronx.

The policemen, John C. Brennan, 226 East Thirty-ninth Street, and Charles J. Hession, 540 Ellsworth Avenue, the Bronx, were off duty at the time. When taken to the station house they were pronounced unfit for duty by a police surgeon and Lieutenant Thomas E. Hayes.

Witnesses said the policemen fought each other after their autos had stalled, that the quarrel started in the car and was followed by a fist fight in the street.

Shoplifter Gets Four Months.

A sentence of four months in the workhouse was imposed yesterday in Special Sessions on Jack Kincaid, alias Jack Graves, found guilty of shoplifting by Justices Edwards, Nolan and Levine. He was arrested Aug. 8 as he was leaving Best's store on Fifth Avenue with a fur for stolen under his arm.

WALLACE ANSWERS POLICE INQUIRY CALL

PETRUCCIS UP AGAIN TODAY

Magistrate Corrigan's Counsel Asserts He Has Evidence of New Case of Graft.

District Attorney Dana Wallace of Queens, whose presence as a witness in the police inquiry before Judge Thomas C. T. Crain in General Sessions has been sought since the hearing was resumed a week ago, returned to his office in the County Court House at Long Island City yesterday after a vacation at Fire Island. He declared that he was ready to appear before Judge Crain at any time and testify concerning the so-called Blackwell raid in Astoria, following which, according to other witnesses, Chris Hohmyer, described as Wallace's chauffeur, was arrested and several cases of whisky, said to have come from the Blackwell mansion, were seized.

"I have written to Mr. Lindsay, informing him that I have returned from my vacation and am ready to appear at any time at his convenience," said Mr. Wallace. Asked whether he had received a subpoena which a representative of John D. Lindsay, counsel for Magistrate Corrigan, had had left at his office, Mr. Wallace said that he had, but that it did not specify any date for his appearance.

"Hohmyer never was in my employ as a chauffeur, as has been stated, nor was he in any way connected with the District Attorney's office," said Mr. Wallace. "He rents out automobiles and I have employed him, as have a great many others in Queens. As to the Blackwell raid, I am perfectly willing to tell all I know about it. If Mr. Lindsay wants me I will be at my office on Tuesday."

When the hearing is resumed this morning the Petrucci brothers—Nicholas and Ernest—will be recalled. Acting District Attorney Pecora was in the midst of his cross examination of one of them when the hearing was adjourned last Thursday and he had entangled them in a maze of conflicting testimony as to the stopping of a truckload of liquor in May, 1921, which resulted in charges that high police officials were interested in the liquor and that two detectives accepted a $2,500 bribe to let it pas.

Beside the Petruccis several other witnesses have been directed by Judge Crain to be present today. Among them is Alfred W. Thor, formerly Chief of Staff in the Police Department.

If the Petrucci case is disposed of today, Mr. Lindsay it was learned yesterday, will submit evidence relating to an entirely new case in which the police are said to be involved in bootleg graft.

Recently police orders have announced action in a number of cases in which policemen were tried for dereliction of duty in connection with Mullan-Gage enforcement. Some of them occurred more than fifteen months ago. Among the cases are

Thomas A. Lyons, West Sixty-eighth Street Station, charged with being absent from raided premises on Dec. 20, 1922, and with permitting intoxicating liquor to be sold in raided premises on Dec. 18, 1922; fined five days' pay on each charge.

James J. Mcloney, East Sixty-seventh Street Station, failing to prevent the removal of part of the contents of a barrel of wine on June 14, 1922, fined five days' pay; Arthur F. O'Keefe, same station, same offense, fined fifteen days' pay, and Frank Spacek, same station, same offense, fined five days' pay.

William J. Wynne, East Sixty-seventh Street Station, failed to prevent removal of wine from raided premises on May 16, 1922, fined five days' pay, and Patrick McCaffery, same precinct, same offense, fined five days' pay.

Assemblyman Louis A. Cuvillier, in a letter to Acting District Attorney Pecora yesterday asked that official if he would co-operate in having the charges of criminal libel which Mr. Cuvillier want to bring against Mayor Hylan and Police Commissioner Enright laid before Judge Crain, when the police inquiry is resumed today.

In the same letter Mr. Cuvillier also asks that the whole mass of evidence of alleged police brutality which he has gathered be laid before Judge Crain. He urges that the whole conduct of the Police Department "from the Commissioner down" be taken up and that the prosecutor "spare no one."

LARNEY CALLS IN POLICE.

Alderman Says 250 Nominating Petitions Were Stolen From Desk.

Alderman Patrick H. Larney, who has announced himself as an independent candidate for renomination against the Democratic organization in Brooklyn, complained to the police yesterday that 250 nominating petitions, each containing ten signed names, had been stolen from his desk in the Downtown Democratic Club, 24 Myrtle Avenue. The clubhouse door was demolished some time after the last members had left, and his desk opened, he said. The police looked around and went away, remarking: "It doesn't look like a robbery."

Unsigned petitions were torn and scattered over the floor, but there was no trace of the 250 petitions. Larney immediately filed his petition at midnight. He started out to get 250 more names and signatures, which is the number required for this office.

Last year Larney contested the leadership of James J. Browne, who is the leader of the lower section of the First Assembly District, in the vicinity of Borough Hall. Then the Alderman resigned from Browne's Sewanaka Democratic Club and Larney and his supporters established the Downtown Club. Recently the political and personal rivalry became acute in the district when Browne designated Patrick J. McCann as the candidate for Larney's job in the City Hall, backed by the Democratic organization.

SUSPEND POLICE IN FIGHT.

Daly Will Investigate Charge Against Two Officers in Bronx.

Two policemen attached to the Simpson Street Station were suspended yesterday pending an investigation by Deputy Police Commissioner John Daly, of the Fifth Inspection District, as a result of a fight they had on Sunday afternoon which attracted hundreds of persons to Tiffany Street and Southern Boulevard, the Bronx.

The policemen, John C. Brennan, 226 East Thirty-ninth Street, and Charles J. Hession, 540 Ellsworth Avenue, the Bronx, were off duty at the time. When taken to the station house they were pronounced unfit for duty by a police surgeon and Lieutenant Thomas E. Hayes.

Witnesses said the policemen fought each other after their autos had stalled, that the quarrel started in the car and was followed by a fist fight in the street.

Shoplifter Gets Four Months.

A sentence of four months in the workhouse was imposed yesterday in Special Sessions on Jack Kincaid, alias Jack Graves, found guilty of shoplifting by Justices Edwards, Nolan and Levine. He was arrested Aug. 8 as he was leaving Best's store on Fifth Avenue with a fur for stolen under his arm.

RECANTS POLICE BRIBE TALE

Bus Owner Now Says He Gave Only "Cigars and Presents."

Louis Kaufman of 555 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn, owner of Coney Island sightseeing buses, who told Magistrate Steers, when arraigned several days ago on a charge of violating traffic rules, that he had paid four policemen $20 weekly a year ago to refrain from interfering with his cars, recanted his charge of police graft yesterday in a statement to District Attorney Dodd.

"I was misquoted and misunderstood," Kaufman told the prosecutor. "I didn't pay any money to policemen. What I meant was that I had given cigars and presents to policemen, which had amounted in value to $20 a week."

Kaufman couldn't recall the name or shield number of any policeman who had received cigars or presents from him. Then Kaufman told the District Attorney he had received a threat since he had made his statement in court. He produced an unsigned postcard, on which were these words:

"We see that you are making a squeal about graft. If you go further, we will kill you."

The receipt of this card, Kaufman said, had not induced him to change his story. Kaufman asserted that Policemen Schultz, who had one of Kaufman's chauffeurs fined $1 in Traffic Court yesterday, had told him some time ago he would keep him "busy with summonses." The District Attorney will question the policeman about this.

Rockefeller Gives Nickels To Crowd, Dime to New Yorker

Henry R. Macht, a real estate broker of 917 West 181st Street, Manhattan, happened to be passing the church toward the end of the service and stopped to watch Mr. Rockefeller leaving. Mr. Rockefeller noticed a strange face as he emerged from the church and, returning Mr. Macht's bow, stopped and conversed with him for a few moments. According to Mr. Macht, the millionaire talked upon the excellence of Pocantico Hills as a place of residence.

When about to go, Mr. Macht says, Mr. Rockefeller asked the New York man if he would like to have a token of their meeting. Upon Mr. Macht's acquiescence, Mr. Rockefeller handed him a new dime, got in his automobile and was driven off.

SCHOOLS OPEN SOON FOR APPRENTICES

TO EASE LABOR SHORTAGE

Co-operation of the Board of Education with the Apprenticeship Commission of the New York Building Congress is an accomplished fact, and night school registration for future mechanics will begin on Sept. 10. A week later seventy classes will be opened in ten school buildings, and an endeavor will be made to train young men to make up the shortage of mechanics in the building trades.

Fred F. Moran, managing director of the Apprenticeship Commission, announced recently that a comprehensive apprenticeship in the bricklaying industry was in the course of preparation, and that the bricklayers' unions and the Mason Builders' Association had promised to give their help.

The example set by New York in trying to solve the apprenticeship problem had been followed by other cities, notably Boston, Philadelphia and Cleveland said Mr. Moran. Employers and workers are acting through the instrumentality of local building congresses in arranging to give novices steady employment and regular wage advancement during their training.

The extension courses for apprentices will be attended by upward of 2,000 students, Mr. Moran said. They include the following trades: Carpenters, 1,000; electrical workers, 200; sheet metal workers, 300; painters, 100; upholsterers, 50, and drafting room assistants, 50.

When the course of study now being prepared is approved by the unions and the employers, 1,000 bricklayers' apprentices now working will be enrolled for the classes. Attendance is compulsory and is part of the training necessary before a young man can become a journeyman. Nobody who is not a member of the trade can enroll in the Board of Education's night classes.

"The movement to develop apprentices by co-operation of the employer and the labor unions and the public school system is growing rapidly," Mr. Moran said. "We are getting encouragement from all sides. Employers who were formerly reluctant to take on boys to learn a trade, or dispensed with them after a few months' trial as an unprofitable investment, are now pledged to see it through. We have by careful explanation broken down the suspicion that existed for generations in the minds of leaders of the labor movement. It was natural for them to seek to protect the jobs of the already skilled men. Our object is not to flood any trade with boys and semi-skilled workers. We are part of a mutual arrangement of the labor and employers' groups to bring about a steady, normal supply of apprentices to replace vacancies in any particular trade. It is but part of the larger work of building congresses everywhere to stabilize the building industry by providing steady work the year around."

The Building Congress will now attempt to secure the co-operation and endorsement of the national contractors' associations and the building trades labor unions.

RULES RODEO IS SPORT.

Charge That Cowboy Contests Violated Sunday Law Is Dismissed.

The question whether steer-wrestling and broncho busting can properly be called athletics was decided yesterday in Morrisania Court by Magistrate H. Stanley Renaud when Tex Austin and four performers from the rodeo now in progress at the Yankee Stadium were arraigned for alleged violation of the Sunday law. Two performances of the rodeo were held Sunday, the receipts going to charity. According to Sergeant Joseph Murray of the Highbridge Station, it was doubtful if Tex Austin's permit for a Sunday athletic exhibition included cowboy stunts. He handed the producer a summons on Sunday afternoon.

Magistrate Renaud ruled that the rodeo events could properly be termed athletic contests. As the receipts were for charity, he dismissed the charge. The defendants rode to court in cowboy regalia.

At yesterday afternoon's performance in the Yankee Stadium 500 orphans from the Mount Loretto (S. I.) Orphanage and the Bronx Settlement House were guests of honor. Frank Gardenhour broke the record for "bull-dogging" by throwing his 1,000-pound steer in 17.5 seconds.

Beginning today, matinee performances will start at 2:30 o'clock.

John Cullinane, 56 years old, who said he fought with the 165th Regiment of the Rainbow Division and later with the Twenty-sixth Division at Cantigny and Soissons, told the police of the Poplar Street Station, Brooklyn, yesterday that pickpockets had robbed him of his wallet containing $500 on a Brooklyn-bound subway train of the B. M. T.

Cullinane said that he went to Washington last week and obtained $300 compensation through the Veterans' Bureau for injuries he suffered when wounded in the stomach and gassed. Yesterday, he said, he went to the Veterans' Bureau at 125 West Forty-ninth Street here and his check was cashed. He was returning to his home in Brooklyn he said, when the money was stolen probably by one of two men who jostled him and then apologized as he was entering the subway train.

The Baronet looked much improved in health since last year. He wore a new style gray fedora hat with a tiny feather at the side, blue serge suit and blue polka-dot bow tie with a batwing collar. He had his mustache trimmed down very small, with a tiny vestige of beard in the centre of the chin after a fashion that was made popular many years ago by the French Emperor Napoleon III.

Financial interest centred rather sharply yesterday on the current dip in sterling—which depressed that exchange below the year's previous low point—and in the moderate tightening of money rates, incident to the seasonal movement of liquid funds away from the financial centres and toward the agricultural regions. It was rather a curious development that the pressure on sterling, unlike that on the franc last week, should be so entirely disassociated, in financial opinion, from political development abroad, and should be attributed almost entirely to commercial developments. Last week's pressure on the franc, it will be recalled, was to great extent tied up with pessimism over the reparation's outlook.

Sterling yesterday sold at $4.54⅞, a decline of almost 1 cent for the day and three-eighths of a cent below the previous low, established on July 5. Yet financial opinion clung resolutely to the view that this was due almost entirely to the pressure of commercial bills in all markets, rather than a reflection of pessimism over the international outlook. Doubtless both factors were important in the decline, for the tone of London financial cables was far from optimistic. But at the same time francs and lire rallied sharply and French bonds in the New York market were under the unmistakable pressure of accumulation.

More attention was paid to the advance in the call money rate to 5½ per cent. yesterday than is ordinarily given to the gyrations of what is seldom a visible quotation. It had, at least, the effect of slowing up the stock market. There is not at all likely to develop a dearth of loanable funds at this or any other financial centre, but such heavy withdrawals by "interior institutions" as have taken place in the last three or four days must of necessity cause replacements, from one source or another, and the call market is always likely to be upset as these readjustments are going on.

Yesterday's stock market occasioned little surprise because of its irregularity. It is quite well understood by even those who take but casual interest in Stock Exchange quotations that the market, at the moment, is undergoing a severe test, and for that reason is attracting more interest than the size of the market and the narrowness of quotations would appear to warrant. The test lies in the manner in which the selling which is due and entirely anticipated will be met. This selling will doubtless come from two sources: from those who purchased stocks a week or so ago, and have "quick profits"; and from the re-selling by operators who have cleared away their short commitments and who once more are anxious to "take a position" on the market. Then, too, there is a broader and more significant reflection to be gained from stock prices. They have developed into what might be termed a long range "business barometer," eagerly watched by business men in all lines, for indications of what is to happen two, three or even six months hence.

Some selling of this nature doubtless was met yesterday. It brought irregularity of a sort and a general slowing down. But that it did no more than eliminate some of the buoyancy which characterized the markets of last week was quite evident. Trading was on a very restricted scale, and prices at the close exhibited but inconsequential changes. Quite likely, in Stock Exchange parlance, the week will prove a "pivotal" one. It is hardly according to precedent that Autumn trade of normal volume will develop in the near-by future without stocks taking cognizance of it.

The day's news was not without cheerfulness. It brought a résumé of increased employment in many industrial lines during July and reports of the resumption of full-time work in several cotton mills. Exports of grain are on the increase, and, according to figures announced yesterday from Washington, more than doubled in the last week in which statistics were available. Despite the doubts which have been expressed by many leaders of the iron and steel industry that the "short working day" was impracticable, it now appears that the lopping off of four hours from the "ordinary day" of the iron and steel worker has had the unexpected, but none the less gratifying, effect of attracting very large numbers of new men to the plants.

MONEY.

MONDAY, AUG. 20, 1923.

Calling of loans imparted a firm tone to the market for demand Stock Exchange funds, the rate moving up to 5½ per cent. in the last hour, the highest since Aug. 2, following opening and renewal at 4½ and interval of 5. Just before the close, however, the charge declined to 5 per cent. Time money market continued extremely quiet and unchanged in quotation at 5¼ per cent., occasional loans for short periods going at this figure. Most commercial paper discounted unchanged at 5¼ per cent., and on prime New England names the rate was shaded ¼ fraction.

Dillon, Read & Co. yesterday announced that interim certificates for the Kingdom of the Netherlands fifty-year 6 per cent. sinking fund bonds, due March 1, 1972, Series B, may be exchanged on or after today for definitive bonds upon surrender of the receipts at the office of the Central Union Trust Company.

The United Oil Producers Company has deposited the August interest on its 8 per cent. and participating production bonds with the Coal and Iron National Bank, trustee, at the rate of $1.27½ per barrel for oil, compared with $1.25 a year ago and $1 two years ago, the company announced yesterday.

NATIONAL LEAD EXPANSION.

The program of expansion outlined by officers of the National Lead Company is progressing rapidly, and officials yesterday announced the acquisition of the National Pigments and Chemical Company of St. Louis, which owns extensive mines of barytes. The company also manufactures ground barytes at its St. Louis plant. According to the announcement, the National company's purchase was for the purpose of assuring an adequate reserve of raw material for the manufacture of titanox, a pigment made by the Titanium Pigment Company, which is controlled by the National Lead Company.

The National Lead Company has been producing titanox for years at its plant in Buffalo, but, due to the increased demand for its product, it was necessary to establish another unit in the Middle West. In line with this, the company through a subsidiary recently took over the Mineral Refining and Chemical Company of St. Louis, previously engaged in the manufacture of lithopone.

SALES OF CYANAMID TWICE 1922 TOTAL

The American Cyanamid Company reports net sales of $5,582,078 for the year ended June 30, 1923, against $4,808,194 in the previous fiscal year. After payment of all expenses, interest charges and taxes and other deductions, there was reported net income of $2,000,967, which after allowing for preferred dividends was equal to $25.38 a share on the $0,504,300 common capital stock outstanding. Net income in the previous year totaled $197,902, equal to $3.54 a share on the common stock.

C. M. Grant, treasurer, in a statement to stockholders said: "The company has purchased a portion of the stock of the Owl Fumigating Company which it did not previously own, so that it is now sole owner of that company. During the year good-will amounting to $2,216,904 was written off the books out of surplus. As a matter of business prudence it seemed advisable to set up a contingent reserve of $950,000 to provide against Government suit for back taxes and suits growing out of formation of the Amalgamated Phosphate Company. None of these claims is admitted by the American Cyanamid Company.

Assets: Cash, $766,612; notes receivable, $1,800; accounts receivable, $483,477; United States Government securities, $1,963,956; inventories, $1,370,037; due from subsidiaries, $210,355; investments, $5,068,139; property accounts, less depreciation, $3,830,877; patents and licenses, $2,145,585; prepaid insurance, taxes, etc., $360,772; total, $16,124,424.

Liabilities: Common stock, $4,504,300; 6 per cent. cumulative preferred stock, $5,395,900; accounts payable, $280,203; dividends payable, $149,863; reserve for taxes, $226,715; due subsidiaries, $225,073; reserve for contingencies, $950,000; surplus, $1,496,351; total, $16,124,424.

GRAIN EXPORTS HEAVIER.

Decrease in Week of Harding Funeral Due to Suspension of Business.

Exports of grain were heavier during the week ended Aug. 18 last than in the preceding week. The difference is said to have been due to the suspension of active business on the day of President Harding's funeral. Total grain exports were 4,784,000 bushels, as compared with 2,062,000 bushels the week previous.

Corn exported was 220,000 bushels, against 72,000 bushels the week before; oats, 12,000, against 31,000; rye, 245,000, against 111,000; wheat, 3,901,000, against 1,744,000, and flour, 235,400 barrels, compared with 260,300 barrels.

A falling off in Canadian exports was reported, grain in transit having been placed at 219,000 bushels of oats and wheat and 1,000 barrels of flour, as compared with 627,000 bushels of barley, oats, rye and wheat, and 2,000 barrels of flour the previous week.

The Market Meets Profit-Taking.

Although trading on the Stock Exchange yesterday was again on a moderate scale as compared with the markets earlier in the year, some profit-taking sales were met with during the day and many of the active leaders ended the day with fractional losses. This profit-taking was considered a natural development following the rapid rise of the last ten days, and the manner in which the selling was absorbed was considered gratifying. At the opening the firm tone which prevailed during the greater part of last week was again in force, and this strength continued during the greater part of the forenoon, many issues topping the high points reached last week. Shortly after noon, however, selling predominated for a time, causing a fractional decline in numerous of the leaders, but on the decline trading became less active. As shown by the averages, most of the active leaders ended the day with net declines. This, however, does not indicate that the entire market was lower, as many stocks, especially among the so-called inactive issues, ended the day with substantial gains, many of which ranged between one and two points above Saturday's closing levels.

Await New Oil Developments.

Wall Street heard yesterday that new and important developments were pending in the oil industry and that an important announcement could be expected within the next few days. Details were lacking, but it was learned in good quarters that important conferences were held over the week-end by some of the most important leaders in the trade. In the absence of details, it was natural that conjecture was rife. In some quarters the opinion was expressed that the leading independent interests in the Middle West, which have been as much affected by the current low prices for oil as those in other sections of the country, were planning to pool their interests for the purpose of solving the problems of the industry, in the interest of all, rather than make it a proposition of survival of the fittest. Whether this can be accomplished is a matter of doubt because of the many interests involved. In other quarters it was predicted that the announcement would have something to do with further efforts to curtail production and further restrict refining operations. The situation, according to information, is such that wells with settled production in the midcontinent can now be bought for about one-fifth of the prices quoted earlier in the year. Further reductions in the price of crude oil also are predicted.

The new week witnessed an increase in the demand for copper metal, according to statements made in the trade yesterday. Consumers who held off placing orders last week were free buyers yesterday. The demand, however, was created at the expense of prices, most of the business being done at 14 cents a pound, the price now being quoted by practically all interests in the trade and, incidentally, the lowest price quoted for the current year to date. The price is 3¼ cents a pound below the peak level for the current year to date, which was 17¼ cents, established last March, when demand for the metal was the heaviest witnessed since the war.

Unlisted Securities.

One of the largest dealers in unlisted securities in the financial district said yesterday that the demand by investors for "over the counter" stocks has increased visibly in the last two or three weeks, and that it has had the effect of materially narrowing the spread between the bid and asked prices. In some cases where this "spread" between the bid and asked has been maintained at 5 or 6 points for several weeks it has been cut down to 2 or 3 points.

Scrapping the Mark.

The paper mark again fell heavily yesterday, having been quoted in New York dealings at 12 cents for a million, or the equivalent of 8,500,000 marks for a dollar. Although dealings ran well into the billions of marks, the volume could not be described as heavy, since a turnover of 1,000,000,000 marks, for example, would represent only $120 in United States money. The break was coincident with reports from Germany that the new administration of that country contemplated the establishment of a new currency on the foundation of present gold holdings and that nothing would be done in an effort to redeem, even partly, the great total of paper now outstanding. A million paper marks now sell for considerably less than the par value of one gold mark.

Oil and the Panama Canal.

A Director of one of the large oil corporations who has just returned from a visit to the California oil fields via the Panama Canal declared yesterday that if it had not been for this ocean-to-ocean waterway, crude oil would be selling for as low as 20 cents a barrel, instead of the present price of "70 cents and up." To the extent that overproduction can now be taken up at either side of the United States by utilizing this great traffic link, he expressed the opinion that it had literally saved the oil situation, and pointed to the great increase in tanker service through the the canal as evidence of this. Just as the canal had made possible a greater uniform consumption of oil products in the country, he said, so also had it served to stimulate production and keep it on a paying basis.

The Sugar Anomaly.

Explanation of the present downward tendency of the sugar market was found yesterday in the statement of a leading American refiner that production of sugar from all sources available to this market now amounts to about twice what the country can consume and that export demands are considerably below those of last year when a total of 800,000 tons were shipped from American ports, as against about 300,000 so far in 1923. Prices yesterday receded to the lowest figure since last February, refined being quoted by one company at 7.50 cents and by other refiners at 7.60. The lowest price of the year was reached on Jan. 27, when refined sold at 6.50. The price amounted to 7 cents on Feb. 2, to 8.26 on Feb. 15, and reached the peak price of 10.30 on April 25, since which time the course has been steadily downward.

Cutting Railroad Rates.

Officials of transcontinental railroads are explaining the apparent contradiction between their desire to cut rates on the one hand and their contention that revenues are insufficient on the other. The cuts requested in the transcontinental rates are merely on "paper rates"—these rates being defined as those "printed but never received." As example is the rate on steel from New York to San Francisco, one never collected by the railroads except in rare cases, because the water rate is two-thirds below it. Whatever cuts the railroads accept will be on new business, these officials point out, and therefore instead of decreasing revenues will be an additional source of income.

PLAN TO INCREASE HOLDINGS IN MEXICO

CENTRAL BANK ASSURED

American oil companies operating in Mexico are prepared to push their development plans and make new acquisitions once recognition of the Obregon Administration by the United States becomes a fact. Nearly all of the companies having interests in the southern republic, it was stated yesterday, have made plans for extending their holdings and will proceed to carry them out, provided they are guaranteed protection for their interests in accordance with the assurances contained in the agreement reached between the American and Mexican conferees.

Mining and smelting interests are also prepared to embark upon new operations in Mexico following recognition. Among these as well as in local banking circles there is a feeling of confidence in the Obregon Administration remarkably different from that which characterized the attitude of American business men up to two or three years ago.

That Mexico will be able to draw upon this market for needed finances in the carrying out of her own development work is another phase of the effects of recognition which local bankers are known to be considering. It was pointed out that with diplomatic relations of the two nations re-established on the basis planned there will be no obstacle to the resumption of normal financial relations.

Scaltiel L. Alatriste, Mexican Commercial Attaché in New York, said yesterday that Mexico's plan for a central bank was now certain of being carried out.

"The inflow of money through this national bank will, with the co-operation of foreign banks, enable us to establish relations with the largest of the international banking houses, a thing which Mexico greatly needs," said Mr. Alatriste.

"The issuance of a large amount of well-secured notes and the new investments that surely will take place as soon as recognition is a fact will cause the almost immediate execution of many governmental projects, both Federal and State, along the lines of agricultural improvements, immigration, water supply and transportation.

"Since recognition by the United States began to appear certain I have been surprised by the demands made on this office for information regarding Mexico. I have been supplying information regarding lands, colonization and primary industries such as lumber, mining and numerous kinds of manufacturing.

"This increased activity that will result will cause a larger production of raw materials which Mexico already exports and a definite effort to organize the exploitation of materials which Mexico is potentially able to supply the United States and other nations. The favorable capital balance that will probably result from these activities will be invested in the purchase of larger amounts of machinery, transportation materials and other essentials to the upbuilding of Mexico.

"The market in Mexico for goods other than those absolutely necessary has been widened to a remarkable degree within recent months. For example, we imported in 1910 about $4,000,000 worth of paper; last year we imported over $12,000,000 worth. Producing capacity has likewise increased and the standard of living risen. The increased consuming capacity of the country is a favorable omen."

FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

Prices Steady and Trading Dull Both in London and Paris.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Prices were steady in quiet trading on the London Stock Exchange today. British consols were off ⅛ at 58⅛, while there were no changes in quotations of the British 5 per cent. war loan, which closed at 101¾; the 4½ per cent. loan, at 96½; De Beers at 12⅛ and Rand Mines at 2⅝.

PARIS, Aug. 20.—Trading was dull on the Bourse today, but prices were steady to firm. Three per cent. rentes were up 35 centimes to 56 francs 85 centimes and the 5 per cent. war loan was up 40 centimes to 74 francs 40 centimes.

The franc was quoted higher, exchange on London having been 81 francs 68 centimes, against 82 francs 73 centimes last Friday, and the dollar was quoted at 17 francs 96 centimes, against 18 francs 23½ centimes.

CUBA LIQUIDATING LOAN.

Final Repayment of $10,000,000 War Credit Expected Tomorrow.

HAVANA, Aug. 20.—The Havana branch of the National City Bank of New York will remit tomorrow to Washington a draft in part liquidation of the war loan granted to Cuba by the United States. On Wednesday a second and final draft will be forwarded, thus liquidating the entire loan, amounting to about $10,000,000.

Funds for the repayment of this loan were obtained by Cuba, it was stated in the financial district yesterday, through the improved financial condition of the island republic this year. This prosperity was largely due to the increased price of sugar.

The $10,000,000 will be applied to the loan advanced by the United States Government during the war and will not affect obligations that have been floated subsequently in the United States.

A Good Time to Invest in Sound Industrial Bonds

THE bonds of America's leading industries bought at present prices yield more income than at a year ago—notwithstanding that during the intervening period there has, in many cases, been improvement in the factors of security behind them—for instance:

—threatened over-expansion which developed during the first half of the present year was stopped in time. Business, nevertheless, continues good in most all lines;

—management is more cautious; economies are being carefully watched; purchases and production are being kept within reasonable limits.

Your Money Buys More Income Today

Assuming an increase of only ½% in yield on sound industrial bonds over that of a year ago [in many cases it is more], today's purchaser obtains to maturity an advantage for each $1000 invested of $25 on a five-year bond, $50 on a ten-year bond, $100 on a twenty-year bond.

WALLACE ASSERTS FARMERS FACE RUIN

DISCARDS PROPOSED PLANS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—In a statement discussing the wheat situation, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace asserted today that the Government could do nothing to increase the price of the present wheat crop. He admitted that the wheat farmer of the Northwest and Southwest would suffer severely this year because of the low price of his product and the high prices of commodities he buys, and that "thousands of wheat farmers will go bankrupt."

Secretary Wallace said the fixing of a fair price of wheat by the Government, and the other proposal that the Government buy the surplus wheat and store it, did not offer practical measures for increasing present prices. It seemed to him that some benefit might be had by the suffering farmers if the railroads reduced freight rates on wheat and farm products, especially those products designed for export.

"The ruinously low price of wheat is not a new agricultural disease," Mr. Wallace said. "It is just one more acute symptom of the general trouble from which agriculture is suffering. The disease itself is the distorted relationship between prices of farm products and prices of other commodities. This is not a new diagnosis. It has been pointed out from time to time for the last two and one-half years.

"The sooner people engaged in commerce and industry frankly recognize the trouble the better it will be for all of us. The farmer could get along fairly well with present prices of what he has to sell if prices of what he must buy were down accordingly. But prices and other things remain high. That is what hurts.

Cost to Farmers Higher.

"Wages in industry and on the railroads are almost twice as high as before the war. Taxes are about twice as high. Freight rates are from 50 to 75 per cent. higher. Metals and building materials of all kinds, are from 50 to 100 per cent. above prewar prices. All of these are items in the farmer's cost of production.

"Until a fair relationship is restored between agriculture and industry and commerce agriculture will be upset and will have reason to complain. If the present plane of prices of commodities other than agricultural is to be maintained, then, to have general prosperity, agricultural prices must be brought up. That probably means that agriculture must be gotten off the international market.

"With wheat selling for considerably less than the cost of production, hundreds of thousands of specialized wheat farmers are having a mighty hard time of it. In the diversified farming region east of the Missouri River wheat is but one of several crops and the trouble is not so serious. But in the Spring wheat belt of the Northwest and the Winter wheat belt of the Southwest, where wheat is the main crop, wheat growers are suffering severely. Thousands of wheat farmers will go bankrupt. Other thousands will be able to hold on only by the practice of the most grinding economy.

"It is not long since the corn farmer went through just such an experience. So also the cattle grower of the range States, (who is not yet out of the woods), the potato grower, some of the fruit growers and the rice growers. The case of the wheat grower is made worse because most of our wheat goes into the channels of trade. However because of the low price, less of it will be sold as wheat this year, and more of it fed.

Calls Proposed Remedies Doubtful.

"The pressing question is, what can be done to help the wheat growers get more nearly the cost of production for this year's crop? Some urge that the Government ought to fix a fair price. That could be done only by the Government preparing to buy unlimited quantities at the price fixed. Others suggest that the Government go into the market and buy 200,000,000 bushels of wheat and store it, on the theory that the taking off the market of that quantity would send up the price to a fair figure.

"I am not hopeful of good results from either of these plans. How would the Government dispose of the surplus accumulated? What effect would either action have on wheat acreage? What effect would it have on the acreage and price of other grains and of livestock? Would the same policy be adopted in case of ruinously low prices for other farm products?

"The wheat situation is bad enough in all conscience, and certainly the majority of our people would favor any practical method of helping, but we ought to be reasonably sure that the remedy attempted will do the farmer more good than harm and will not make our situation worse instead of better.

"Whether these acutes situations might be relieved if the Government should set up an agency with large authority to handle our surplus farm products, in its discretion, and provide it with ample funds, I do not know. I do not believe any one knows. * * *

Suggests Freight Reductions.

"Our railroads could help in this trouble by making some reduction in freight rates on farm products. How far the Western grain-carrying roads can go in this direction under the present operating expenses I am not prepared to say, but the roads running east from Western primary markets ought to be able to make some substantial reduction in freight rates on all grain, flour, livestock and meat products, especially if destined for export. If our railroad rate men would take the farm situation to heart and give serious study to some of their own problems, I believe they could help a great deal. * * *

"In general, farm conditions are better than they were a year or two ago. The legislation passed by Congress has been helpful. The new co-operative law gives farmers assurance that they can go ahead and organize co-operative associations without being prosecuted for combining. The agricultural credits act is now functioning and money for operating and marketing purposes can be borrowed freely and at fair rates. The Packers and Stockyards act and the Future Trading act gives assurance of free, open and competitive markets for grain and livestock. For the first time co-operative associations of farmers can operate on these markets. The Federal Warehouse act is an essential part of the credit machinery, and the number of such warehouses is increasing rapidly.

"When all is said and done, the fundamental fact remains to be dealt with. Agriculture and industry and commerce must be brought into more nearly normal relationship, and until this is done these acute agricultural troubles will develop one after the other."

Julius H. Barnes, President of the United States Chamber of Commerce, in an article in the Nation's Business, entitled "Dollar Wheat," says the Government cannot fix by legislation the price of wheat because of the great acreage and distances in this country. Such a course, he says, would injure the farmer in the end, as ruling commodity prices would, perforce, be raised by an artificial price applied to wheat.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

Although the volume of business in foreign remittances was on a moderate scale yesterday, still the steady flow of commercial bills on London sent sterling off to a new low for the year at $4.54⅛, reached at the close from a start around $4.56⅜. Sterling weakness, dealers say, is plainly attributable to the heavy purchases of dollars in London, which the British Government has set out to accumulate against near-date obligations here, with the additional factor of a favorable trade balance last month, the first since February.

French francs, on the other hand, continued in demand, moving up at the day's best point 6/64 points above Saturday's final, to 5.59⅛ cents. The rate eased off in later dealings but a substantial gain was still shown in final business. Short covering is undoubtedly responsible for the recent strength in Paris checks, stimulated by the more conciliatory statements of the French Premier. In little less than one month the rate dropped about ¾ cent, but purchases by previous speculators for the decline has narrowed the loss to less than ½ cent. Belgian was sympathetically strong at 4.43 cents.

German marks collapsed to the hitherto unknown level of 12 cents per 1,000,000, from a start at 22 cents, the record low point putting the mark down to 8,500,000 for the dollar compared with 4,545,000, in the initial dealings. Spanish was also at a record low at 13.45 cents, on the unsatisfactory outcome of the campaign in Morocco. Holland, Italian and several of the Scandinavians were moderately higher, with irregularity in Central Europeans. Far Easterns and South Americans ruled heavy, while Canadian was unchanged at 97.74 cents.

In the subjoined table the quotation on sterling represents dollars and decimals of a dollar; all others represent cents and decimals of a cent. Quotations preceded by the decimal mark indicate a price measured in fractions of a cent.

NEW DOHERTY SUBSIDIARY.

Henry L. Doherty, President of the Cities Service Company, announced yesterday the formation of the Public Service Company of Colorado, a new subsidiary which is to include the Denver Gas and Electric Light Company of Denver, the Western Light and Power Company of Boulder and the new power plant development at Valmont, Col.

It will be the largest utility company in the State, according to the announcement. It will have an issued capitalization of $3,500,000 7 per cent. preferred and $15,000,000 common stock. New securities for financing the undertaking will be offered in the New York market shortly.

Plans for the new company provide for financing the completion of a steam turbine electric generating plant at Valmont and for tying together the Denver and Boulder properties with high tension transmission lines.

Holders of the common stock of the Western Light and Power Company will receive in exchange for each $100 share of common stock $25 par value of 7 per cent. cumulative first preferred stock of the Public Service Company of Colorado.

In exchange for the $100 shares of 7 per cent. cumulative preferred stock of the Western Light and Power Company an equal par value of 7 per cent. first preferred stock of the new company will be given, plus an amount of such stock at par equal to all accumulated dividends on Western Light and Power Company preferred stock.

Holders of the 6 per cent. cumulative preferred stock of the Denver Gas and Electric Light Company will receive for each $100 share, a $100 share of 7 per cent. cumulative first preferred stock of the new company.

American Public Utilities Surplus.

Earnings of the American Public Utilities Company for the year ended June 30 showed a balance available for stocks of the company of $729,438, according to the report made public yesterday. The report shows that the properties of the Wisconsin-Minnesota Light and Power Company were sold during the year and the funds used to retire $2,500,000 of collateral trust bonds.

SAY FRENCH SELLING DROVE FRANC DOWN

STERLING AT YEAR'S LOW

Franc Up 6½ Points to 5.59—Marks Drop to 1,000,000 for 12 Cents.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Comment has been aroused in financial circles in London by the declaration made by M. de Lasteyrie, French Minister of Finance, that the fall in the franc can be only explained by foreign speculation. Those in close daily association with the foreign exchange market are at a loss to follow this statement, for their experience has been that in some of the worst spasms suffered in recent weeks by French exchange the heaviest selling has come from French sources.

There is no doubt that the Paris check has become more and more sensitive to political developments and its present weakness is a reflection of the very real misgivings that exist as to the outcome for France and for Europe of the present Ruhr policy.

To return to the charge made by the French Finance Minister, so far as London is concerned there is no means of determining to what extent the extensive transactions in French and other exchanges that are daily executed by London banks on behalf of their customers, including other banks spread over the whole world, represent ordinary commercial transactions, and to what extent they represent speculation. The remark applies equally to exchange transactions conducted in Paris.

But in answer to the definite allegations made in certain French journals, it may be said without reservation that the principal British banks make it a rule, which is inflexibly enforced, that their account not only in French but in all foreign currencies shall balance at the close of each day. This rule is observed equally by branches of the banks in this country and by various other institutions controlled by responsible British banks which operate overseas.

The figures given by M. Delasteyrie as to an increase in the national revenue have been read with welcome interest, though before drawing conclusions from them it would be necessary to have some information about the course of expenditure.

Sterling at New Low for Year.

Sterling went to a new low for the year and German paper marks went to a new low for all time in foreign exchange dealings yesterday. The decline of sterling was nearly 1 per cent. Marks fell to a figure at which 12 cents would buy one million of them, or the equivalent of 8,500,000 marks to the dollar.

Weakness of sterling was made especially interesting in view of the continued advance of the franc, which since last Wednesday has moved up ¼ cent and, at the closing price, is now worth a little more than fifteen to the dollar. The closing price of francs was 6.59, up 6½ points. Belgian francs were unchanged.

In both bills further short covering by professionals was reported, this operation having been predicated largely on the reply of M. Poincaré to the British note in which he indicated a desire on the part of France to compose the differences among the Allies. Sterling's decline was 13-16ths cent net, the closing price having been $4.64 9-16.

Heavy buying of dollars by London was reported, presumably for the purpose of building up credits to take care of commercial transactions and in part provide for Governmental debt operations.

The course of the mark was taken to indicate growing hopelessness concerning the possibility of its redemption even in part. Dispatches from Berlin suggested that the new German Government had determined to set up a new currency based on the country's present gold supply rather than to experiment with new stabilizing efforts. If this plan is adopted, according to reports, the Government will seek to remove the paper mark from commerce entirely, permitting it to shift for itself.

Detroit Edison Net Increases.

The net income of the Detroit Edison Company for July was $156,145, against $97,668 in the same month last year. This brings the net for the first seven months of this year to $2,828,455, against $1,837,658 in the same period last year. The increase is due principally to the increase in sales to general consumers which were $14,729,069 for the seven months period, against $12,609,063 in the same months of last year.

D. G. DERY CORPORATION IS REORGANIZED

Plans for the reorganization of the D. G. Dery Corporation were declared effective yesterday at a joint meeting of the Reorganization Committee and the Board of Directors. It was decided that in future the concern would be known as the Amalgamated Silk Corporation. Percy E. Mann, formerly with the J. H. A. C. K. Eagle organization, was elected President.

The Reorganization Committee said more than 98 per cent. of the creditors, in amount, consented to the plan and that, with one exception, every creditor having a claim in an amount of $10,000 or more endorsed the plan. To prevent this single creditor from gaining a preference over the others the Creditors' Committee and the Reorganization Committee agreed that an offer is to be made by the Creditors' Committee to purchase the assets, and the District Court will be asked to fix the distributable share of this creditor upon the sale of the assets. The court hearing is set for Aug. 28. Meanwhile, the reorganization is in all other respects in effect, it was stated.

The reorganized company owns 5,200 looms. The new board consists of Joseph Gerli of E. Gerli & Co., A. Gardner Perry of the American Trading Company, A. Perry Tebor and J. F. B. Mitchell of Redmond & Co. Iuki Ohashi of the Gosho Corporation, Yoichi Mori of Suzuki & Co., Matashichior Kobayashi of the Japan Cotton Trading Company, Lloyd G. Straus of F. Straus & Co., John P. Maguire of the Textile Banking Company, Walter S. Fraser, Vice President of the corporation, and Mr. Mann, its President.

Under the reorganization the principal, interest and security of the bonds are unaffected, but the bondholders contributed to the extent that they consent to the postponement of the sinking fund payments for five years.

BROKERAGE LOANS CONTINUE TO SHRINK

$1,450,000,000 Total Means $50,000,000 Fall in Month and $550,000,000 Since February.

Brokerage loans continue to show a decrease, according to reports in the financial district, and the total of such borrowings at present is estimated at approximately $1,450,000,000, a decline of $50,000,000 in one month and of $550,000,000 since the peak level reached last February.

Jan. 25	$1,850,000,000	May 28	$1,728,000,000
Feb. 14	2,000,000,000	June 16	1,700,000,000
Mar. 1	1,950,000,000	July 19	1,500,000,000
Apr. 23	1,800,000,000	Aug. 20	1,450,000,000

An increasing demand for money has taken place in the case of industry during the period of decrease in the case of brokerage loans, according to reports which estimated total banking loans at approximately $32,000,000,000, thus making brokerage loans approximately 4½ per cent. of total bank loans.

POINT FOR GUARANTY TRUST

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 20.—The Guaranty Trust Company of New York today was granted permission by Judge Wilbur F. Booth, in Federal District Court here, to intervene and file a bill in its petition to foreclose a mortgage of $8,890,000 against the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad, and amendments to the original order appointing W. H. Brenner receiver were presented to Judge Booth for approval.

The trust company asks that the income from that portion of the railroad property covered by the mortgage be segregated. The first mortgage is on the roadbed between Watertown and Leola, S. D., and Canby, Minn., and Lebeau, S. D.

Changes in the receivership were agreed to in a conference between attorneys for the trust company and Mr. Brenner, limiting the power in some respects and extending it in others.

'MONEYED CAPITAL' TO FIGHT TAX TODAY

5,000 Protest Levy Against $1,300,000,000 Under the Walker-Donohue Act.

STOCK EXCHANGE ACTS

Nearly 5,000 protests against tentative assessments levied under the Walker-Donohue act, imposing a tax of 1 per cent. on "moneyed capital" entering into competition with national banks, have been received by the Department of Taxes and Assessments, Henry M. Goldfogle, its President, said yesterday. The tentative assessments number somewhat more than 5,000 and aggregate approximately $1,300,000,000, an average of slightly more than $250,000 an assessment.

Hearings on the protests will begin before Judge Goldfogle and the other Tax Commissioners this morning at 11 o'clock, and it is expected that most of the persons assessed, who have not yet filed protests, will do so before the end of the day. According to the law, protests must be filed before midnight tonight to be effective, although briefs in support of the protests will be received by the Tax Commissioners up to and including Aug. 31.

The provisions of the law, which undoubtedly will be fought in the courts, are far-reaching and affect private banking firms, brokerage firms, many dealers in securities, trust companies, discount companies, mortgage and investment companies, factors and pawnbrokers. The law probably will be attacked upon the ground that it is unconstitutional, it was said, and in addition the protests indicate that many of those assessed will set up claims that their capital is not properly assessable under the law.

Wall Street Firms Stirred.

Judge Goldfogle had a conference yesterday with Assistant Corporation Counsels William H. King and Eugene Fay concerning the protests. Judge Goldfogle expressed belief that the law was constitutional, but admitted that each protest would have to be considered separately and that it might be necessary to establish the fact that the capital assessed was in competition with national banks in every case.

Not since the early months of this year, when bills providing for the incorporation of the Stock Exchange were under discussion, has there been such an interest in a matter of law in Wall Street. The Law Department of the New York Stock Exchange has been informing its members of the situation and giving advice in the matter of complaints.

A statement by the Stock Exchange says that the form of complaint in each case must be conformed to the particular facts, that the value of memberships in the New York Stock Exchange and other exchanges presumably is not moneyed capital coming into competition with national banks, and that it may reasonably be claimed that capital employed in their business by floor brokers and houses doing wholly a commission business is not moneyed capital coming into competition with national banks. The same claim, it is held, may be set up in respect to capital used in the purchase and resale of securities by houses making a business of dealing in securities; that a "moneyed capital" in part for the foregoing purposes and in part for banking purposes, it is proper to segregate or apportion the part of the capital used for the foregoing purposes and claim that such part of the capital is exempt from a tax.

The statement says that the tax is levied not on capital contributed to a firm but on the value of the capital contributed on May 1 1923, plus accretions and minus losses excluding the part of the capital not employed in banking; and that the opinion is generally held that there should also be excluded the capital which on May 1 was invested in tax exempt securities. Other points covered is the question whether the act applies to non-residents of this State; also whether it applies to capital employed in branch offices located outside of the State.

Grounds for Contest.

"It leaves the meaning of moneyed capital coming into competition with national banks undefined and to be determined only by the arbitrary discretion of the taxing officials; the tax which it imposes is not based on any rational classification, but is arbitrary; the act seeks to deprive the taxpayer of his property without due process of law and denies him the equal protection of the laws in contravention of Article I, Section 6 of the Constitution of the State of New York and of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States; the uncertainty of the law also brings it in conflict with Article III, Section 24 of the Constitution of the State of New York; and the fact that it does not declare the purposes for which the tax is imposed and does not appropriate any moneys for the purposes of the refunds for which it provides may be held to contravene Article III., Sections 21 and 24 of the Constitution."

A. C. Pleydell, Secretary of the New York Tax Reform Association, said he believed the law would be held to be constitutional, but that less than 10 per cent. of the tentative assessment of $1,300,000,000 would be held. Mr. Pleydell said the persons and firms that would be affected had knowledge of the law in advance, and expressed belief that most of them had placed their surplus money in tax exempt securities and that their working capital would be offset in most cases by the amounts of money owed depositors.

MORE ROADS SEEK RATE CUT TO COAST

Three Additional Requests to Be Made in Move to Meet Competition Via Panama.

PLEAS TO BE FILED SOON

Proposed Change in Freight Schedules Will Not Affect Intermediate Points.

Three more petitions from railroads will be made to the Interstate Commerce Commission for reductions in the through transcontinental freight rates, it was learned yesterday. Unless the Transcontinental Freight Bureau will ask for a reduction of rates from the Detroit-Pittsburgh district to the Western Coast; another by the Southern Pacific will request a reduction from New York piers to California ports, and the third will be by the Southern Pacific, and possibly by other railroads, asking for a reduction from the Gulf of Mexico ports to the Pacific Coast.

These applications will be in addition to one to be made by the Transcontinental Freight Bureau to apply to rates from the Chicago district to the coast. All applications will request that no change be made in the present rates to intermediate points.

The applications in each instance are to meet the Panama Canal competition, which has steadily increased until 474 ships passed through the canal in July, just the exact amount of the reductions that will be asked was not made public, but it was stated that they would be sufficient to bring them closely in range with canal rates.

The applications now under consideration, which it is said will be ready to present shortly, will deal at length with the conditions that the transcontinental lines are facing. They will show that the roads do not ask for rates that will cut under another form of transportation, but that they are forced to ask for relief to meet the rates already in effect by another class of carriers. They will also attempt to prove that the reductions will not be lower than is necessary for them to obtain and retain a fair share of the traffic going to the Pacific Coast.

One of the difficulties the railroads anticipate will be the objections from the intermediate points to paying a higher proportionate rate than those which apply to the Pacific Coast. A considerable proportion of the application will be given to proving that the rates to intermediate points are not unfair.

Recently the Southern Pacific was permitted to reduce rates from New York over the water and rail route to all points along its line. Such a reduction it was pointed out by representatives of that road, was not aimed at getting business from New York to the Pacific Coast, but to regain traffic that was going to the Coast by boat and then handled inland. Reductions made at that time, which will be effective Sept. 1, are not sufficient to affect the through traffic now going by canal, it was said.

PLAN SCIENTISTS' MEETING.

The British Association Expects 3,500 at Liverpool Sept. 12-19.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The ninety-first annual meeting of the British Association, which will be held at Liverpool from Sept. 12 to 19, promises to be bigger than any of its predecessors. It is expected that between 3,000 and 3,500 persons will attend the meeting, of whom about 1,500 will be visitors. The last meeting in Liverpool was in 1896, when Sir Joseph Lister was President.

There are thirteen sections, and five addresses by their Presidents will be delivered on Sept. 12, five on Sept. 14 and three on Sept. 17. The association will be largely attended this year by foreign representatives, although Germany is not again sending any of her scientists. Some dozen leading Canadian scientists are coming over.

France and Denmark will send representatives, among them Professor Langevin of Paris, Signor Ciamician of Florence, Dr. Coster and Dr. Henegy of Copenhagen; Dr. Roule of Paris, Professor Jesperson of Copenhagen, Professor N. Bohr and Dr. N. V. Sidgwick.

COTTON HOLDS GAINS WITH AID OF TRADE

Spinners Take Contracts on Reactions and Prices Gain 15 to 26 Points.

The cotton market quieted down yesterday, but revealed sufficient demand from trade and other sources to maintain the steady undertone. Showers occurred at several points in Texas, over half an inch at three stations and lighter at others. But this was not the kind of relief necessary to change progress of the crop in that State, while no rain fell in Oklahoma. Rains in Atlantic sections were detrimental. After several months pessimistic trade advices an improvement was noted in several directions which brought heavier mill buying of contracts throughout the session. Prices gained 15 to 26 points.

A sharp decline in Liverpool and private reports of rain over a considerable area of North and West Texas influenced early trading. But after the action of the market Saturday, a greater degree of resistance to pressure developed than many had anticipated. Instead of breaking under liquidating sales and hedging operations from the South, over-Sunday selling orders were readily absorbed at a slight advance in quotations, both on near and distant positions. Uncertainty over the extent of rainfall and an easier tendency in both Liverpool and New Orleans produced an unsettled tone throughout the first hour, October dipping below 24 cents several times. Below the even figure cotton seemed to be wanted, while demand for distant months on a basis of 23½ cents proved impressive. Twice last week a decline to that level encountered sufficient mill buying to halt further recessions, and a similar tendency developed yesterday, but on a larger scale. In many respects, the volume of orders from trade interests proved larger than before this season, and finally so many contracts from the ring that prices turned upward and recovered 30 points before midday.

The gain to around 24.30 for October exhausted the rush of buying, bringing a slow setback of 20 points early in the afternoon. Trading was not only along more limited lines than last week, but the whole tone of the market quieted down. Cotton first bought early was sold out on the upturn and a persistent demand for October on the later recession prevented any selling movement. For several hours operators seemed to be waiting to see just what change had occurred in Texas and it was not until the last hour that official details of rainfall the previous forty-eight hours were received. These reports showed that three points had over half an inch, Quanah in the northwest, .70; Llano in the west, .68, and Huntsville in central Texas, .60.

Eight other stations reported showers but not sufficient to bring about any radical change in the situation. Oklahoma had no moisutre whatever over Sunday, while many stations east of the river received an inch or more. Here dry weather is needed for the best progress of the crop. Several times the past few weeks regions outside of Texas and Oklahoma have had heavy rains, causing increased boll weevil activity. Though the market continued quiet and certain interests bought, any advance prices strengthened the last hour to the highest figures of the session. Covering orders in final trading left near positions about a quarter of a cent higher on the day.

Some time ago a special committee appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture estimated the amount of cotton in this country on Aug. 1 would be 1,054,000 bales. The Census Department has made the total carryover in America at 2,067,000 bales. Based upon this report of domestic stocks and using Secretary Hester's estimate of American cotton held abroad, the total carryover on Aug. 1 is slightly 3,000,000 bales.

$98,250,000 BUDGET FIXED FOR SCHOOLS

Increase of Several Millions Over Last Year, but $11,000,000 Less Than Requests Made.

The tentative total of the budget of the Board of Education for 1924 is approximately $98,250,000, according to the announcement last night of Arthur S. Somers, Chairman of the Budget Committee, at the final public hearing in the Board of Education Building.

"While the total is several millions greater than the budget of last year, it represents a reduction of approximately $11,000,000 from the total appropriations asked by the various bureaus of the education system," he said.

"Our first consideration," Mr. Somers said, "has been to see that the children are comfortably housed and receive proper instruction. Wherever there has been any uncertainty as to our actual needs we have omitted asking for funds."

Approximately $82,000,000 of the budget is for the general school fund, which provides for the cost of instruction, supplies and equipment, administration and similar items. The remaining $16,000,000 constitutes the special school fund, to cover such expenditures as maintenance of buildings, fuel, repairs and transportation. About $76,000,000 is required for teacher's salaries.

Joseph P. Carney, Chairman of the public relations committee of the Public School Lecturers Association, urged a larger appropriation for public school lectures. Chairman Somers said the committee does not favor this because of an indicated lack of public interest in these lectures. He added that the committee favored extension of visual instruction in the schools.

PLAN STRIKE INSURANCE.

Special strike insurance will be taken out by the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, it was learned yesterday, in the event of a strike here on Sept. 1 of motion picture machine operators of Local 306. The proposed insurance, it was said, would amount to more than $1,000,000. Lloyd's of London has been advised by cable concerning it. The theatres it would cover would number 340.

Charles O'Reilly, President of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, said that if the union men walked out non-unionists would be engaged.

It was said the demands for increases were graduated according to theatre capacity. Operators in theatres with a capacity of 300 to 600 persons ask $75.24 a week instead of $50.16, and those in houses seating 1,000 or more ask $86.62 instead of $66.28.

The Ebenezin Company has agreed to handle the insurance for the theatre owners.

CRUDE OIL REDUCED AS GASOLINE FALLS

INDEPENDENTS IN PARLEY

Believed to Be Seeking an End to the "Survival-of-the-Fittest" Struggle.

The drastic reduction in the price of gasoline announced in the last ten days, especially in the Middle West, were reflected yesterday in posted prices for crude oil. That a cut in crude would be announced was predicted at the time that prices for refined products were slashed as a result of the "price war" which started in South Dakota. The Humble Oil and Refining Company of Texas yesterday announced a reduction of 25 cents a barrel in Gulf Coast grade A crude, placing both grades A and B on the basis of $1 a barrel. The reduction immediately was met by the Texas Company and it is expected that other companies will take similar action.

The reduction of crude oil in Texas also foreshadows another reduction in the price of mid-Continent crude, according to opinion held in local trade circles yesterday. A reduction of as much as 25 cents a barrel is expected in some quarters. Reductions made earlier in the year amounted to 10 cents a barrel each, but due to the fact that mid-Continent crude has been unable to compete with crude oil produced in other sections of the country a more drastic reduction is expected shortly. When cut of 25 cents is announced, it was pointed out, mid-Continent producers would again be placed in a position to compete with the rest of the world, a position which was swept aside when the heavy overproduction in California affected conditions in the entire industry.

Reports were current in the trade yesterday that several important conferences were held over the week end by independent producers in the middle West. Details covering these conferences were lacking in the financial district yesterday, but the assumption was that the conferences were for the purpose of lining up the entire independent producers in order that the situation may be handled for common gain rather than make a proposition of survival of the fittest. In the absence of details there naturally was much conjecture. Some trade leaders predicted that the conferences would probably end in advocating further restriction of production in the Middle West as well as a prolonged suspension of refining operations. Many of the small refiners in that section of the country are now closed down completely. Others, however, look for the announcement of important mergers, as many leaders contend that smaller companies cannot continue to survive under existing conditions.

Reports were current in the financial district yesterday that there was a reduction in the price of Mexican crude oil but this could not be confirmed at the offices of the larger companies with properties in Mexico. In fact it was reported that there has been no change in the price of heavy Mexican crude for about two months, while the price of light Mexican crude has remained unchanged for about a year.

SUGAR IN NEW DROP NEARS LOW RECORD

Due to a continued light demand, sugar yesterday reached the lowest price at refineries since early February. Federal announced a price of 7.50 cents a pound for granulated; Warner, Atkins, Arbuckle, National, Revere and other refiners following with reductions which brought their price to 7.60. The price now is within approximately a cent of the low figure reached on Jan. 27, when, due to speculation on the Exchange, a rise set in which did not end until April 25. On that date refined had touched 10.30 cents.

The market assumed a more active tone in the afternoon when purchases by several refiners virtually cleared the market of available raw. Sales of Philippine sugars to Arbuckle, American and McCahan totaling 70,000 tons were reported made at 5.78 cents a pound cost, insurance and freight—which, with the duty added, compares to 4 cents a pound for 17,000 to 18,000 tons of Cuban raws bought by Warner during the day. This price is one thirty-second of a cent off from the last previous sale. The effect of the buying of these distressed lots was to improve the futures, which advanced several points.

James Howell Post, President of the National Sugar Refining Company, described the situation as very disappointing to the refiners, who hold to the belief that offerings throughout the country are considerably below the normal for this season of the year. Grocers have been buying only day-to-day requirements for the last five or six weeks.

Mr. Post said he looked for higher prices in the near future because there now remains only about 400,000 to 500,000 tons of the Cuban crop, compared to larger supplies in previous years.

"The buying today is due to the realization that the demand is improving," Mr. Post said. "Under the circumstances I do not look for further reductions."

CITY DELAYS NEW SCHOOLS.

George J. Ryan, President of the Board of Education, wrote Mayor Hylan and the other members of the Sinking Fund Commission yesterday, saving a list of proposed new schools, construction of which had been delayed because of the failure to remove structures on sites acquired by the city.

Mr. Ryan wrote that work had been delayed in eight cases in which contracts had been awarded, that the awarding of contracts in six other cases had been delayed for the same reason and that construction of new schools was contemplated on twenty-one other sites, which were still encumbered with buildings.

Mr. Ryan added that although the Sinking Fund Commission had authorized the clearing of all these sites on July 26 no advertisements for removal of many of the structures had yet appeared.

GRAIN PIT SUFFERS A DOUBLE SURPRISE

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—There were two surprises in the grain markets. One was that shorts in September corn should take fright and cover, and advance prices 5½ cents, and the second, that wheat values should hold with the heavy accumulations and to close ¾ to ⅞ cent higher.

September corn was hard to buy and jumped to 83 cents, with the close at 82¾ cents. Cash corn advanced over 3 cents to 80¾ cents, the highest of the season so far, while September was up to within ¾ cent of the season's top.

Today's arrivals were 229 cars, and cash premiums dropped around 2 cents to 7½ cents over September, which is natural, as they have been too high, as compared with September and a readjustment is on. At the top of last week they were 13 cents over September, but not as high as the price today.

Chicago stocks of corn were reduced 550,000 bushels last week, to 525,000 bushels, and the visible to 2,108,000 bushels, against 8,115,000 last year. Illinois and Iowa sold old corn freely and fair receipts are to be expected as old corn is high and the crop promise in most sections, other than the Southwest, are good.

Shorts in December corn were covering and carried it to 65 cents, with a gain of 1¾ cents. September corn was a feature right from the start. A rush to buy by two or three prominent commission houses early cleaned up the pit for a time, and there was a brisk advance. Profit-taking sales were absorbed without difficulty, with only minor setbacks. Cash corn was relatively easy compared to the September but still sold at high prices with sales of 15,000 bushels.

Country offerings were reported moderate. Stocks were cut in two, a decrease of 556,000 bushels, leaving the total here 523,000 bushels. The visible supply decreased 621,000 bushels. Receipts were 100 cars, with primary receipts of 313,000, against 982,000 bushels a year ago.

Wheat supplies are increasing, and, with the visible 40,752,000 bushels compared with 27,000,000 last year, there is a good load for the trade to carry. Of the gain of 5,041,000 bushels in the visible last week, 5,384,000 were in Chicago and Kansas City. Conditions in Canada are stronger owing to crop deterioration, and prices in Winnipeg are up 1 to 1½ cents, followed the lead of corn at times, but the trade volume was small and price changes were not significant. Receipts were 257 cars. Visible stocks increased 573,000 bushels. The cash demand was fair, with sales of 150,000 bushels for shipment.

Rye trade was featureless. The export demand is too insignificant to be much of a feature, and trade was light in the pit. Visible stocks increased 72,000 bushels.

Production Costs in France.

Some idea of current production costs in France is given by an offer received by a local concern from a manufacturer of vestings and mainces in Lyons to dispose of his entire plant and to take full charge of the management for the purchaser at 500 francs a month. In the offer the assertion was made that the whole yearly cost of running the business, exclusive of the wages of the weavers, is 7,500 francs (about $450), the plant containing four lace machines and three mailne looms. This figure, includes light, heat, power, rent, &c. Managing wages in the lace industry in France are said to be equivalent to $20 a month in American money, and the weavers' wages are apparently so small that the man offering the plant did not even mention them.

Go in More for Greeting Cards.

One of the so-called infant industries rapidly approaching the adult stage is that of the greeting card manufacturers, according to the secretary of an association devoted to their interests. A business of more than fifty millions was done the past year, he says, and indications are that the demand for greeting cards for every occasion is steadily growing, in addition to the usual holiday cards there are now cards for birth announcements, birth congratulations, wedding congratulations, Fathers' and Mothers' Day, condolence, graduation, &c. The public is demanding a better quality of card than former, more clever sentiments, better die work and better stock. While Fall lines are shown in February, it is not until May or June that orders are placed in quantity, and even then buyers are inclined to underbuy. As a result there is always a rush of repeat orders early in the Fall, continuing up to December. Manufacturers are often not able to provide the popular styles in quantities demanded. With less haphazard buying, according to the association, the public would get better cards at a better price.

Are Away Behind on Style.

Whatever the abilities of the German knit goods manufacturers may be in turning out merchandise under the production costs of makers of similar goods in this country, the fact remains that they are away behind American manufacturers when it comes to turning out knitted garments embodying the element of style. According to the current bulletin of the National Knitted Outerwear Association, a Philadelphia manufacturer who recently returned from the other side is the authority for this statement. Samples of American sweaters taken to Germany by the manufacturer in question created quite a sensation among the German knit goods men who examined them, the bulletin asserts. The products of the Germans are said to be years behind them, especially as regards style.

The vogue of needlepoint in furniture is being duplicated in novelties, according to one manufacturer, who is offering silk handbags embellished with medallions of this choice decoration. They are done in the finest petit point on silk bolting-cloth, mostly in floral designs in delicate colorings, and add a touch of elegance unusual in the mere popular priced articles. These bags sell for around $40 a dozen, and come in various shapes and colors, although black is the most effective ground color. They are furnished with purse and mirror.

Underwear Buyers Taking Time.

Although jobbing buyers of underwear are shipping out Fall goods to their retail customers as fast as they receive them from the mills on orders placed earlier in the season, they are not doing much at the moment in buying additional merchandise. There is some business passing, but opinions expressed in the trade yesterday were to the effect that there was little reason to look for any more activity than now exists until after the Labor Day holiday. Buyers are not wholly satisfied with the prices asked for heavy goods, despite the reductions that have been made in some directions, and reported concessions on Spring goods have done quite a little to strengthen the demands of the wholesalers for quotations more to their liking on Fall stuff. In the Spring end of the market the only business being done now is in "organization" goods, i. e., goods that are sold at almost any price that will produce enough business to keep mill organizations intact until the situation brightens.

Lamps and Lamp Shades.

The poular demand for table and floor lamps is unabated, according to one of the large wholesalers, and manufacturers are making every effort to provide novel effects in shades and standards. A growing refinement of style is evidenced in the newest models, the outstanding feature being a tendency away from the massive effects toward more slender and graceful lines. There is an increased demand for the floor lamps about 56 inches in height, the so-called junior or semi-floor lamps. The flat shades are not popular in the better grades, being supplanted by the Empire and novelty effects. Odd designs are in great demand, provided the lines are graceful. Freak shapes, while occasionally selling well for a time, have no lasting popularity. Silks and crepes are most in demand, the parchment shades having been killed to a great extent by the cheap paper imitations. Metal lamps, according to the dealers quoted, are slipping, too, on account of the flood of cheap lamps of this type recently put on the market. Torchere in the better grade are still selling well, although the newer effects with Empire shades in tall shapes giving the torchere effect are supplanting them to some degree. The chief reason is that they can be used singly, as well as in pairs.

Gray Goods Sales Much Heavier.

Yesterday was one of the busiest days the local gray goods market has seen for some time. Trading in printcloths was very active, and large sales of 39½-inch 64-56s were reported at 9 cents for delivery in September and October. August lots of 39-inch 68-72s were sold at 10¾ cents, while for shipment during the remainder of this month and next 39½-inch 68-64s sold freely at 9¾ cents. Good business in 39-inch 72-76s was put through at 11 cents, with 12 cents asked for 80-squares of the same width. Sheetings were also more active, and good business was done in 36-inch 5.50s and 4.15s at 7⅞ and 7 cents, respectively. At the close 7¼ cents was asked for the latter. In the subsequent trading of August-September 39-inch 4.20s was reported at 14¾ cents, with similar deliveries of 4.37-yard sateens sold at 14¾ cents.

Furniture Orders Increase.

There has been in the last week a decided spurt in orders for furniture, according to a leading manufacturer, and in spite of the fact that factories have been working to full capacity, there is little doubt, he says, that there will be a shortage of merchandise this Fall. Prices are stable, the high cost of labor preventing any appreciable reduction from those of a year ago. Raw materials show no reduction, except glass, which is somewhat lower. As to style, the most popular period is Italian Renaissance, in walnut or Italian finish. There is a marked decrease in the use of decoration. Even in the overstuffed furniture, the period effects have been carried out in the underframe, legs, &c. The two or three piece living room set is still in demand. The most popular covering at the moment is a combination of plain mohair and needle-point. Wool tapestries are also much used, as well as the frieze effects. Taupe, blue and cardinal red are the colors most favored.

BUSINESS NOTES.

The next regular meeting of the National Council of Traveling Salesmen's Associations will be held at the Hotel Pennsylvania on Thursday at 8 P. M. A special meeting of the Convention Committee of the association will be held tonight.

The Taller-Craft Company has been incorporated and will hereafter be known as Taller-Craft, Inc. The corporation manufactures dresses and sports wear at 131 West Thirty-third Street.

The directors of the Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Protective Association will meet at the headquarters of that organization, 366 Fifth Avenue, tomorrow evening.

To Seek Association Members.

At luncheon-meeting of the Board of Governors of the National Association of the Fur Industry for the district including this city will be held at the Hotel Martinique today, preliminary to launching a drive to obtain members for the organization, which was formed recently in Chicago and which seeks to bring the entire industry to a higher plane. Similar drives will start soon in other parts of the country, according to David C. Mills, general director of the association, and it is expected that the major part of the fur industry will be represented in the new body in the course of the next few months. Firms and individuals desiring to qualify as charter members still have until Oct. 1 to do so, Mr. Mills said yesterday, and it is probable that the active work of the local drive will not begin until after that date.

CAR PEACE PLAN TO BE BARED TODAY

STRIKERS GET $25,000 FUND

"Jitney" Owners Charge Settlement Scheme Is Plot to Drive Them Out of Business.

The New Jersey Public Service Railway Company's plan, which is expected to serve as a basis for settlement of the differences between the company and its 6,300 striking employes, will be submitted to the State Board of Public Utility Commissioners at Newark today.

John L. O'Toole, Vice President of the company, refused to disclose the plan and withheld comment on charges by bus owners that it would be directed against "jitney" competition. He said the company was confident the plan would prove satisfactory.

William Wegner, head of the Newark trolleymen's local, announced that J. F. O'Brien of the Amalgamated Street and Electric Railway Employes had arrived from Chicago with $25,000, which would be used for relief of the families of the strikers. Wegner said he did not place much faith in the company's plan, but that the trolleymen would consider any propositions made by the company when they meet tonight at Laurel Gardens, Newark.

Representatives of the "jitney" bus owners' associations say the company has lost sight of its differences with its men, and that all efforts now are being directed against the buses to eliminate, if possible, their competition.

That the company has always been hostile to the buses is taken by officials of the cities hit by the strike as an indication that its plan will call for a "showdown" at this time. A memorandum submitted by the company to the Board of Public Utility Commissioners cites alleged inability of the "jitney" effectively to cope with the transportation problem in twenty-five municipalities.

There has been talk in Newark of the company substituting jitneys for cars of the non-paying crosstown lines. This was done recently in Camden, but the question has now arisen as to whether a franchise can be retained where the bus is substituted for the trolley.

A report in Newark yesterday was that the company's plan proposed a 20 per cent. increase in wages. The men are demanding a 30 per cent. rise, and at all their meetings have established "65 cents per hour or no street cars."

Despite the announcement by Harry V. Osborne, Chairman of the Utility Board, that he was ready to approve an indefinite number of long-term "jitney" permits if the conditions did not resume service at once, only five applications had been received by Mr. Osborne up to late yesterday. This it was said, indicated the municipalities regard transportation as insufficient, and base hopes for a settlement upon the company's plan.

Joseph C. Crawford, Superintendent of Transportation at Newark, telephoned "Jitney" Supervisor F. R. Benton at Springfield, Mass., yesterday for more buses. As Springfield has announced that no bus licenses will be operated after May 1, 1924, many "jitney" men are expected to accept the invitation from Newark. One bus left Springfield for Newark yesterday.

The production of one or more
Broad Silk Mills

A SELLING organization with a large and desirable following in the cutting-up and retail store trade desires to arrange for selling the production of one very large Broad Silk Mill or group of smaller Mills capable of producing quality silks of timely appeal.

As a gauge to the distributing facility of this organization we may mention that for the past few years we have sold at the rate of three million dollars' worth of broad silks per year for our former connection. This is a large proposition from a concern capable of handling things in a large way.

Complete factoring facilities are available for the Mill or Mills we shall represent. Reply should state the number of your looms. Conferences may be confidentially arranged. X 2362 Times Annex.

J. H. Eagle Buys The Cornwall, a Twelve-Story Apartment House.

WAS HELD AT $1,250,000

J. H. Eagle, silk merchant and active buyer of real estate, has added to his holdings on upper Broadway by the purchase of a big apartment house in an all-cash transaction, announced yesterday, which involves an investment of approximately $1,250,000.

This latest addition to Mr. Eagle's holdings is the Cornwall, a twelve-story, fireproof, steel-constructed apartment house, on a plot 150 by 100 feet, occupying the northwest corner of Nineteen Street and Broadway. The building was purchased in the name of the J. H. H. Realty Corporation, of which Mr. Eagle is President, from Max N. Natanson, the operator.

To Mayor John F. Hylan and Bor. Pres. Edw. Riegelmann

You, Mr. Hylan, are the Mayor of the Greatest City in the world; and you, Mr. Riegelmann, are the President of the greatest Home Borough in the greatest City in the world.

You both live in Brooklyn, the greatest Home Borough.

You both have seen Brooklyn grow. And you have watched the sweep of the population down to Prospect Park; then around and beyond down Ocean Avenue and astride of Nostrand Avenue.

You have provided for additional subways in Brooklyn—and thousands of our citizens are cheering your action. But, while you are starting these new subways, do not forget the proposed extension of the Nostrand Avenue subway with the opening up of these hundreds of acres of land to homes and apartments, etc.—with Nostrand Avenue continuing right through to Sheepshead Bay. The present Brighton Beach B. M. T. subway cannot take care of the crowds that will live at Sheepshead Bay in addition to the present population—so this Nostrand Avenue Extension of the Interborough Subway is needed more than ever now.

No one better than yourselves appreciates what it means to Brooklyn that this last great barrier to the sweeping growth of Flatbush to the sea is torn down—that at last all that sweep of fine land is to become the property of hundreds of people hungry for homes.

Flatbush-Brooklyn is free from the bonds that have held her growth back for so long—she is headed for the sea. And the thousands of new population that are coming to Flatbush look to you with confidence that they will be taken care of.

A New Standard of Cooperative Housing in Brooklyn
THIS new building was located, planned and erected to appeal to those families who desire Brooklyn apartment residences of Park Avenue, Manhattan, standards.
The six story structure, surrounding a beautiful, sunny garden, and in turn surrounded by splendid residences and clubs, places Brooklyn apartment homes on a higher and better plane.
7 and 8 rooms—3 baths are being sold on a conservative co-operative basis

" ROUND PEGS " VS. " SQUARE PEGS."
When an ambitious man strives hard to make good, but sees other men promoted over his head, he knows something is wrong. Yet the real reason is frequently overlooked. He may be the " square peg in the round hole."

The service that has made the Merton Analytic Method of Vocational Guidance nationally famous is the ability to ascertain the specific vocation which a man's faculties fit him to follow, and tell him why.

The Merton Method has stood the test of thirty years, and is employed and endorsed by banks, industrial concerns, sales managers, employment executives, &c. Are you a " square peg "? What the Merton Method has accomplished for others it can do for you. Call, write or phone for particulars.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The air pressure was relatively high Monday night off the Middle Atlantic and South Atlantic Coast and high and rising over the far Northwest. It was low over the plains States and the Southwest and Monday night a disturbance of moderate intensity had its centre over eastern Nebraska, whence it will move eastward toward the region of the Great Lakes. The western disturbance has been attended by showers and thunderstorms in the upper Mississippi Valley, the northern plains States and the Rocky Mountain and plateau region. Showers have also fallen along the Gulf Coast.

There has been a marked fall in temperatures of the northern plains States where readings are decidedly below normal. In other parts of the country temperature changes have been unimportant and readings approximately normal.

In the Middle Atlantic and New England States cloudiness will increase during Tuesday and be followed by showers late Tuesday night or Wednesday, with a continuation of moderate temperature. In the South Atlantic and East Gulf States the weather will be partly cloudy, Tuesday and Wednesday, with probably thunder showers in Florida and along the East Gulf Coast. In Tennessee, the Ohio Valley and the lower lake region the weather will become unsettled during Tuesday and be followed by showers and thunderstorms by Tuesday night and on Wednesday with somewhat lower temperature on Wednesday.

SEES SECOND OFFER FOR BAYONNE PORT

Captain Scott Says Rival Proposal to $150,000,000 Project Will Be Made Oct. 1.

PUBLIC HEARING SOUGHT

Captain Hutchinson Scott, formerly stationed here in the United States Revenue Cutter Service, decorated for valor in rescuing the Winslow under Spanish fire at Cardenas Bay during the Spanish-American War, in an interview at the Hotel McAlpin yesterday expressed great interest in the proposal to construct a $150,000,000 port at Bayonne, details of which were published in THE NEW YORK TIMES on Aug. 16.

Captain Scott is recognized as an authority upon New York Harbor. For several years he was in command of the Pennsylvania's floating equipment here. He declared that, to his own knowledge, a strong group of financial interests would make public a proposal for development at Bayonne on Oct. 1. He also called attention to a statement from Eb. L. Hermann, counsel for the New York Terminal Company, which made the offer, to the effect that Mr. Hermann did not think that the permission of the War Department would be necessary for the erection of the huge piers proposed. Captain Scott said that such permission was necessary, as the Engineers Corps of the United States Army had jurisdiction over all navigable waters.

Another point brought up by Captain Scott was that the owners along the waterfront might not possess riparian rights, in which case the City of Bayonne, which, he said, is requested to underwrite the undertaking with $20,000,000 bonds, issued not against the city but against the property itself, would not have jurisdiction.

The offer of Irving T. Bush in 1915, which was rejected by the City of Bayonne after a vote of 3,500 to 1,075 on Nov. 8, 1917, to construct a Bayonne terminal, underwritten by $10,000,000 municipal bonds, was cited by Captain Scott. This proposal, he said, was to apply to filling in some 400 acres of land within the bulkhead line, and the offer included a plan of amortization, whereby the terminal was to become the city's property, and an adequate return should be guaranteed on the investment before the municipality should own the property outright.

Site for a Navy Yard.

It was further suggested by Captain Scott that a portion of the area involved might be condemned by the United States Government as a site for a navy yard, should it be decided to move the Brooklyn Navy Yard to a more convenient location. He said that for several years such a project had been under consideration by Mayors of New York City and that the Governors of New York and New Jersey had interested themselves in it.

Captain Scott said that he did not know the names of the backers of the $150,000,000 Bayonne Port plan, and hoped that investigation might prove the offer to be a substantial one, calculated to relieve the intolerable congestions of New York Harbor's terminal facilities.

L. Edward Herrmann, who represented the Terminal Company in presenting its offer to the Bayonne Commissioners, was prominent in the Bayonne "Honest Government" Party, which demanded an investigation of the former Administration by the Supreme Court of New Jersey. The investigation exonerated the Administration, but the Honest Government ticket elected three of the five Commissioners, including Mayor Robert J. Galbot and the Director of Revenue and Finance.

Mr. Herrmann announced yesterday that he would petition the City Commissioners tonight to name a date for a public hearing, and would make public tomorrow afternoon more specific details of the offer. The names of the backers of the Terminal Company will not be made public until the public hearing. Mr. Herrmann said that the property involved lay between the Standard Oil Company property and the Pennsylvania Railroad piers, and that the solid fill would extend 9,000 feet into the river, which is 4,000 feet beyond the bulkhead line, and would have a frontage of 5,400 feet. He said that the riparian rights to much of the property were owned by the State of New Jersey, and that the company would have to apply to the State Government for those rights. He repeated that he did not believe application would have to be made to the War Department for permission, as the plans were in accordance with the plan of the New York Port Authority.

Think Permits Necessary.

It was stated at the Army Building, 39 Whitehall Street, that permits from the War Department would be necessary for all solid fills outside of the bulkhead, and for all piers outside the pierhead line. The Engineer Corps had received no official intimation of the company's plans, but stated that it understood the work contemplated would require a permit.

Chairman Eugenius H. Outerbridge of the Port of New York Authority made the following statement:

"The project reported in the papers for the Bayonne terminal has not been presented to the Port Authority for its examination and we therefore have no comments to make upon it. Under the compact between the two States, Bayonne as a municipality is free to develop or co-operate in the development of its own municipal waterfront according to its own judgment, but as Bayonne officials have always conferred with and co-operated with the Port Authority in the preparation of the comprehensive plan, it is to be assumed that before finally committing themselves to any local development they would again confer with the Port Authority to assure themselves that any proposed plan would be consistent with and receive the benefits of co-ordination with the Port Authority's plans."

INSPECT THE ARTHUR KILL.

Committee to Decide on Tunnel or Bridge to New Jersey.

The committee appointed by the New York Vehicular Tunnel Commission will visit Tottenville, Staten Island, and Perth Amboy, N. J., this afternoon to decide whether a tunnel under the Arthur Kill, or a bridge over it, will best serve public interests. The Kill at that point is about 2,000 feet wide, and it will cost, it has been estimated, about $10,000,000 to build either a bridge or a tunnel.

This State has appropriated $5,000 to meet the expenses of preliminary surveys and it is expected that New Jersey will set aside a similar sum. When it does the New Jersey Vehicular Tunnel Commission will appoint a committee to co-operate with the New York committee. The members of the latter who will participate in the tour of inspection today are Grover A. Whalen, Commissioner of Plant and Structures; State Engineer Dwight LaDu, Commissioner A. J. Shamberg, Chief Engineer Clifford M. Holland, Paul Windels, counsel to the commission, and its secretary, Morris Frohlich.

POLICEMAN SUSPENDED.

Motorcycle Patrolman Is Charged With Attempted Graft.

Motorcycle Patrolman Joseph Truncellito of Union Hill, N. J., was suspended yesterday following charges of attempted graft brought by Eugene Testo of 239 Ninth Street, West New York. Testo was held as a witness on a technical charge of disorderly conduct.

The police alleged Testo had collected $5 from "jitney" drivers on Park Avenue when the drivers started making complaints. After his arrest, the police said, Testo asserted that Truncellito told him to collect $1 from each "jitney" for "protection."

Formal charges will be brought before the Town Council of Union Hill and a date set for trial.

'VENUS AND ADONIS' COMING BACK TO CITY

ART EXHIBIT IS DELAYED

Committee Which Planned It Will Wait Until Unwelcome Publicity Has Died Down.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Hundreds of persons visited New Rochelle yesterday and today hoping to get a glimpse of "Venus and Adonis," the marble statuary by Frederick MacMonnies which shocked many of the townspeople so deeply that the figures are to be sent back to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. The group on the lawn of the public library is still hidden by draperies, placed around it by New Rochelle citizens whose sensibilities were upset.

The visitors had no difficulty in finding persons who were ready to explain why the figures were draped, but they had to content themselves with viewing other exhibits of statuary, some quite as frankly displaying the human figure as the piece by Mr. MacMonnies but lacking the "vamping element," as some of New Rochelle's modest citizens termed it.

The exhibition, which includes the works of other noted sculptors besides Mr. MacMonnies, was to have been opened today, but the opening was postponed until later in the week on account of the stir caused by "Venus and Adonis."

The publicity over the MacMonnies group was called "a great calamity" by Mrs. Charles Gregory, Chairman of the local Art Committee, who among other things said:

"We have had too much publicity regarding this thing. It is a great calamity. The trouble is that too many people are not able to view a work of art of this kind with clean minds. We have postponed the opening of the exhibition because of the publicity given to this unfortunate incident."

"Venus and Adonis" will be shipped back to the Metropolitan Museum of Art the latter part of the week.

To Mayor John F. Hylan and Bor. Pres. Edw. Riegelmann

You, Mr. Hylan, are the Mayor of the Greatest City in the world; and you, Mr. Riegelmann, are the President of the greatest Home Borough in the greatest City in the world.

You both live in Brooklyn, the greatest Home Borough.

You both have seen Brooklyn grow. And you have watched the sweep of the population down to Prospect Park; then around and beyond down Ocean Avenue and astride of Nostrand Avenue.

You saw the barrier thrown across the pathway of Flatbush's progress—the great iron fence around the old Sheepshead Bay Race Track that stopped its onward march.

You have provided for additional subways in Brooklyn—and thousands of our citizens are cheering your action. But, while you are starting these new subways, do not forget the proposed extension of the Nostrand Avenue subway with the opening up of these hundreds of acres of land to homes and apartments, etc.—with Nostrand Avenue continuing right through to Sheepshead Bay. The present Brighton Beach B. M. T. subway cannot take care of the crowds that will live at Sheepshead Bay in addition to the present population—so this Nostrand Avenue Extension of the Interborough Subway is needed more than ever now.

No one better than yourselves appreciates what it means to Brooklyn that this last great barrier to the sweeping growth of Flatbush to the sea is torn down—that at last all that sweep of fine land is to become the property of hundreds of people hungry for homes.

Flatbush-Brooklyn is free from the bonds that have held her growth back for so long—she is headed for the sea. And the thousands of new population that are coming to Flatbush look to you with confidence that they will be taken care of.
